Norcross Pulled on Hulk of Sinking Boat

MEMPHIS ENGINEER TELLS OF GIVING AID TO ATLANTA MAN

Death Toll on River Steamer Near Memphis Fixed at 22, According to Latest Checkup Made.

DREDGERS LOCATE SUNKEN BOAT'S HULL

Attempt Will Be Made Today To Reclaim Bodies Believed To Be Trapped in Vessel's Cabin.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Memphis, Tenn., May 9.—Paul H. Norcross, of Atlanta, was pulled on to the hulk of the sinking steamer, Norman, after it had capsized, by L. L. Hidinger, of Memphis, says a prepared statement by Mr. Hidinger, given out here tonight. This is believed to have been the last seen of Mr. Norcross.

Mr. Hidinger in the statement tells of having aided in pulling a number of persons on board the over-turned hull, which a few minutes later sank. Previous stories quoting Mr. Hidinger failed to mention the names of any of the persons he saw in the water, other than those of his mother and his young son.

While pickets along the Mississippi river south of Coahoma Landing, Miss., kept watch for bodies, a continued search for persons believed to have been on board the Norman, when she capsized yesterday, brought the death list up to 23. W. O. Walker, resident engineer for the H. W. Nelson Company, Fulton, Ky., cannot be located and is listed tonight among the dead.

HULL OF SUNKEN BOAT LOCATED BY DREDGERS.

Memphis, Tenn., May 9.—The Mississippi river late today still held its dead.

Plans to lower a diver from a barge anchored above the ill-fated Norman, which sank late Friday 16 miles south of here, were abandoned temporarily late this afternoon when wind and a driving rain made the venture impracticable.

Two government boats, two barges and a buoy, which marks the spot where the Norman went down, remained on the scene tonight, and tomorrow the work of reclaiming bodies of persons believed to have been trapped in the cabin of the vessel will go on.

Major D. H. Connolly, chief of the United States army engineers in the Memphis district, announced tonight that Colonel Charles H. Potter, president of the Mississippi river commission, and two divers will arrive tomorrow from St. Louis. They will go to the scene of the disaster from the train.

Everything Possible Done.

Since the hour of the tragedy—5:10 o'clock yesterday—every means available has been in operation to reclaim the Norman wreck and its possible contents. The government boat Viola Puckett put out from Memphis this morning with government officials, a diver and salvaging equipment aboard. The Choctaw, towing a dredge, was plying the waters when the second ship arrived.

After more than eight hours of dredging, the sunken ship was located early this afternoon when an anchor brought a piece of the wheel to the surface. Soon after a bucket plank came to the surface, the anchor lifted a curtain from the Norman's pilot house and with the location thus fixed, a buoy was floated to the spot.

During the morning, scores of persons from the Memphis vicinity lined the Tennessee side of the river, watching the ponderous Choctaw as she drug her anchor along where the ship went down.

Why Boats Were Missing.

Major Douglas Gillette, assistant to Major Connolly, today explained for the first time why passengers failed to find life boats available when the ship capsized. By Major Gi-

CARNEGIE MEDAL WILL BE SOUGHT FOR NEGRO HERO

Memphis, Tenn., May 9.—Mayor Rowlett Paine and Commissioner Thomas A. Allen today announced that they intended to start a movement to obtain a Cargenie hero medal for Tom Lee, negro, who saved many lives when the steamer M. E. Norman sank south of here late yesterday.

5 Killed, 4 Injured Toll of Violence In State Saturday

DEATH TOLL RISES TO 24 IN INQUIRY INTO 'BABY FARM'

Murder Charge Likely To Be Lodged Against Proprietress by Authorities Within Next 48 Hours.

New York, May 9.—While New York stands aghast at the disclosures of infant deaths at Mrs. Helen Giesen-Volk's baby farm, the law is moving rapidly to determine whether the woman was wilfully instrumental in the deaths of the 24 infants, who died at her home within 16 months, or just a person fond of babies, but so ignorant and negligent that they died rapidly under her inadequate care.

A murder charge is likely to be lodged against Mrs. Giesen-Volk within the next 48 hours, following a series of sensational revelations today.

Mrs. Giesen-Volk was held in $35,000 bail for the grand jury on the charge of substituting another child, when a father came to reclaim his own, and Assistant District Attorney Pecora announced soon afterward that he would make a homicide charge by Monday "against some one in this case."

Based Upon One Death.

"This will be based," Pecora said, "on the death of a specific one of the 22 babies reported to have died in this institution."

Another infant which had been entrusted to the care of Mrs. Giesen-Volk died today, and brought the total to 24. This was the second child to die since the expose of conditions at the baby farm electrified New York and started both the district attorney's office and the homicide bureau on their investigations.

Another sensation developed when it was learned that the "proxy mother" had been indicted in 1918 for third degree manslaughter in connection with a baby's death.

Parents Are Frantic.

Meanwhile, other parents are frantic over the disappearance of their children. One of these is William Angerer, who refused a baby that was presented to him as his own and who, when parents stormed the infantarium Friday, was unable to find his own child among the group still there. A woman who left her child with Mrs. Giesen-Volk three years ago is also bereft.

The previous indictment against Mrs. Giesen-Volk, it is learned, was returned against a "Helen Giesen" who lived at the address of another of the woman's baby farms. This indictment was dismissed for want of evidence, but it is expected to be reopened.

Still another woman, Mrs. Jacob Beitscher, demanded that the body of a child buried as hers be exhumed.

Last Mother Of Civil War In State Dies

Mother Who Had Two Sons in Confederate Army, Passes, Age 100.

Commerce, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Perhaps the only "Civil war mother" in Georgia, Mrs. Asberry Gordon passed away here yesterday at 8 o'clock at the age of 100 years and 7 months.

"Mother" Gordon was born in November, 1824. She was the mother of seven sons, the two oldest of whom volunteered in the Confederate service in the Fifth Georgia regiment.

The eldest, Lewis Gordon, went west and has been lost sight of. The second son, George W. Gordon, is still living at Statham, Ga.

Mrs. Gordon joined the Presbyterian church at Hebron, Banks county, in 1861; her husband, Asberry Gordon, became a member of the same church during a great revival in 1865.

Father and Son Killed and 3 Injured at Albany, When Fire Truck Strikes Automobile.

GRADE CROSSINGS SCENE OF 2 DEATHS

Falling Bee Tree Crushes Out Life of 8-Year-Old Boy on Farm Near Buford.

Death by violence claimed a fearful toll throughout Georgia Saturday, five persons being killed and four injured. In the list of those killed was two boys, one 3 years old and another 8. In the list of the injured an 18-month-old baby was included.

At Albany, two were killed and three injured when a fire truck struck an automobile; near Athens, a Southern train killed a woman and injured her aged husband and, near Buford, a man meets death at a grade crossing, and a tree falls on a boy, killing him instantly.

2 KILLED, 3 INJURED ON ALBANY STREET.

Albany, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Wright Galloway, 54, well-known citizen of Mitchell county, and his 3-year-old son, Billie, were killed and three others were injured, one seriously, when a fire department truck struck the automobile driven by Galloway, in which the party was riding, at the corner of Monroe and Broad streets here this afternoon.

Galloway died before reaching the hospital and his son lingered until early tonight.

Mrs. Galloway was seriously injured, but hope is held for her recovery; Doris Galloway an 18-month-old baby and Miss Dorothy Dennard, a sister of Mrs. Galloway, were painfully injured. They were all rushed to a hospital.

C. O. Tomlinson, driving a hook and ladder truck of the fire department, struck the Galloway car, while answering a fire alarm, throwing the occupants out on the paved street, and demolishing the automobile. Tomlinson, in attempting to avoid striking the car, ran the heavy fire truck into a yard and tore a large hole in the brick wall of a residence.

The accident was caused, it is said, by Galloway starting his car after he had stopped in the middle of the street as the truck approached.

WOMAN KILLED NEAR HER HOME.

Athens, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Mrs. C. W. Meador, of Gillsville, Hall county, was killed and her aged husband seriously injured when the automobile in which they were riding was hit by a Southern train early tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. Meader were returning from Homer, Ga. and were crossing the track within 50 feet of their home when the train hit them. Mrs. Meader was killed almost instantly. Both were thrown from the automobile and dragged several feet by the train, it is stated.

Mr. Meader was brought to a local hospital.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD BOY KILLED BY TREE.

Buford, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—O. D. Tuggle, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charley Tuggle, of near Buford, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon when a falling tree struck him on the head. Mr. Tuggle, in company with his four children, had found a bee tree and was cutting it down, preparatory to robbing the tree of honey and hiving the bees.

The tree fell unexpectedly and in the opposite direction to which it was thought it would fall and as the little fellow ran to reach safety a limb struck him, knocking him down and the tree fell across his body.

ED BAGBY KILLED NEAR BUFORD.

Buford, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Ed Bagby, about 45 years of age, was instantly killed this morning at West's crossing, one mile south of Buford, when passenger train No. 16, of the Southern railway, struck his automobile and demolished it.

Mr. Bagby was a prominent sawmill man of this section and was engaged in the task of checking crossties

PARTISAN CLASHES AT INAUGURATION FEARED BY BERLIN

Arrival of Von Hindenburg Will Be Signal for Monarchist Sympathizers To Hoist Red Flag.

POLICE ORDERED TO HALT TROUBLE

Republican Journals Urge All Supporters of the Republic To Demonstrate Their Loyalty Tuesday.

Berlin, May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—Even if the most rigid police control is exercised Monday when President-elect von Hindenburg returns to Berlin for his inauguration the next day, more than one violent partisan clash would seem to be inevitable.

The latest official announcements say "it is known that a number of organizations intend to line the route of the reich president's entry May 11, armed with weapons" and the police consequently have issued instructions that all clubs, fraternities or associations gathering on the line of march with either displayed or concealed weapons, immediately are to be debarred fom participation in the welcoming ceremonies.

Display of Flags.

When the field marshal arrives in Berlin he will be engulfed into a veritable ocean of monarchist colors. Large streamers in the conservative journals today urged the display of flags Monday and Tuesday, stating "it is self-evident that all who in his honor displayed flags during the campaign and after the victory of the election, should now greet him anew with the glorious black, white and red banners."

The fact that Foreign Minister Stresemann's organ, Die Zeit, joined in the request for the display of monarchist flags, led the democratic Tageblatt to point out the incongruity of a republican foreign minister displaying a republican flag upon the foreign office, while at the same time he admonishes his followers to dispay in von Hindenburg's honor a "flag which now is being used as an anti-republican symbol."

The republican journals have urged all supporters of the republic to display republican flags Monday and Tuesday in order to offset the monarchist colors, while the communists have passed the word to "hoist the red banner."

"You may believe me when I say that I would be happier if there was no flag question," Chancellor Luther remarked with a sigh to a group of correspondents.

COIN SALE OPENS HERE ON MAY 14

Atlanta Workers Ready To Start Solicitation for Confederate Half Dollars This Week.

Requisition of more than 2,000,000 Confederate Memorial half-dollars through Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the southern bankers' committee, from five southern states, that a unanimous response from over the states has been given Preston S. Arkwright, state chairman, and that the several hundred Atlanta workers, directed by Alfred C. Newell, Atlanta chairman, would open their campaign in Atlanta May 14, are some of the developments of the past week in the Memorial coin campaign.

Workers are being provided with assignment cards of firms and civic, fraternal and religious bodies whom they are to solicit. In the solicitation of firms and organizations all are to be measured up to a 100 per cent challenge, by which it is meant that every employee of every firm should be enrolled through each organized body as a subscriber to the coin.

Not only are the workers going out to urge every prospect to purchase a coin, but one for every member of the family. Even the servants of the Wedding Bells Postponed

:: LAWLESS MUST CLEAR SELF, SAYS FIANCEE ::

By Charges Against Man

"No wedding bells for me."

Hackneyed as the saying is, it was pronounced with a world of determination Saturday by Miss Lillie Freeman, 402 East Fair street, whose plans to wed Frank Lawless, 27, a boarder at the same address, were rudely shattered when Lawless—a self-styled victim of bandits—was placed under arrest Saturday on charges of deserting his wife and child in Alabama.

"When I was informed Friday night that Frank had been held up, beaten, bound with barbed-wire and robbed," Miss Freeman told a Constitution reporter, "I went immediately to his bedside, where he told me the story of the robbery.

"Then today came news that, on request of Birmingham police, the man I had planned to marry Sunday was held on charges of abandoning a wife and child."

She paused a moment as one does when one swallows a particularly bitter pill.

"Maybe all he says is true," she continued. "And maybe he isn't married. But I don't think I'll go to see him until he has cleared himself of the charges against him."

"And," she added with emphasis, "I certainly am not going to make a fool of myself by trying to marry him in jail or any such ridiculous foolishness.

"Would you?" she asked pointedly.

And the reporter—being of the male persuasion—perforce admitted that he wouldn't marry Lawless in jail—or any other place, for that matter.

Thus it was that Lawless' plans to launch a frail bark on the stormy seas of matrimony—as those poetically inclined insist on phrasing it—are minus the services of a prospective bride unless he can establish the fact that there's a big mistake somewhere. In addition, hard luck, in the form of alleged maltreatment at the hands of highwaymen; loss of $120,

ANTI-EVOLUTION LAW PUT TO TEST

Tennessee Teacher Held for Grand Jury Action. Magistrates Declare He Is Technically Guilty.

Dayton, Tennessee, May 9.—J. T. Scopes, charged with violating the newly enacted Tennessee law against teaching evolution in schools of the state, late today was held for action by the Rhea county grand jury by three justices of the peace who conducted a preliminary hearing of the charges.

Bond was fixed at $1,000, but the state expressed a willingness to accept the recognizance of the defendant and the court acquiesced.

The defense was built upon a theory that the law enacted by the recent legislature was unconstitutional. To this, however, Justice Benson, speaking for his two colleagues, Justices Green and Wilbur, said:

"We feel that it is not within our rights to pass on the constitutionality of the wisdom of the law. The defendant is, at least technically, if not

M'KINNEY KILLED; WOMAN ARRESTED

Mrs. Lula Howard Tells Police Victim Was Intoxicated and Threatened Her Life.

Shot through the chest, E. P. McKinney, 30, of 252 Courtland street, Saturday night died shortly after arriving at Grady hospital. The bullet, according to witnesses, was fired by Mrs. Lula Howard, 25, of 252 Courtland street.

The shooting occurred when McKinney entered the home of Mrs. Howard in an intoxicated condition, stating that he was going to slap her child and then beat her, the slayer told Call Officer S. W. Roper, who investigated.

Mrs. Howard collapsed after the killing and was sent to headquarters by Roper. It is believed that she drank a quantity of poison after firing the fatal shot. She made no statement after reaching police station.

In making the report, Officer Aoper recalled a summons to the same residence some time ago. Upon investigation he stated he found that McKinney had entered the house while drunk, had pulled out his gun, threatened the residence, and "shot up" the place.

MAN NEAR DEATH AT CITY HOSPITAL, DOCTORS REPORT

Double Tragedy Staged in Store on Mills Street Managed by Son-in-Law of Victim.

STORY OF TROUBLE TOLD BY DAUGHTER

Mrs. C. O. Williams Says That Father's Drinking Forced Her Mother To Leave Him.

As the culmination of a long period of domestic unhappiness, Charles S. Benton, 45, mechanic, of 208 Luckie street, Saturday night shot and killed his wife and then turned a smoking revolver upon himself, inflicting wounds from which he is dying.

The double tragedy was staged at an L. W. Rogers grocery store at 147 Mills street in the presence of a horror-stricken throng of Saturday night shoppers, who were powerless to halt it. The 20-year-old daughter of the Bentons, Mrs. C. O. Williams, stood only a few feet away and saw her father slay her mother, stagger blindly out of the store, and later fire a bullet into his own skull.

Sees Wife Enter.

According to witnesses, Benton was standing inside the store as his wife entered. He walked to the front door, where she was standing, grabbing her around the neck with one hand, and thrusting the gun to her head with the other. He fired twice at her, only one bullet taking effect.

He then looked wildly about and placed the gun to his own head and pulled the trigger. The cartridge failed to explode and he ran to the corner of Mills and McAfee streets, a short distance away, and repeated the attempt—this time with more success.

An ambulance was called but Mrs. Benton was breathing her last as attendants lifted her from the pavement. She was placed on the stretcher carriage in the ambulance and her husband, who was still living with a bullet in his brain, was laid on the floor beside her.

As the ambulance sped to Grady hospital, Benton, who had not spoken since the shooting, raised himself on his hands and knees, looked for a moment at his dead wife, lifted his eyes to the doctor, who was riding beside them, and plunged forward at his feet.

No Hope for Recovery.

Benton was still alive at an early hour this morning and not so much as a groan had broken from his lips. There was no hope for his recovery, attending physicians declared.

Mrs. Williams told the story of trouble between her parents haltingly, as she waited at the hospital for her husband to arrange the removal of her mother's body to a local undertaking establishment.

"Mother left father about a month ago because he had become an habitual drunkard. She just couldn't live with him any longer and she came to make

BIG BENEFIT SHOW FOR RELIEF FUND; $5,800 IS RAISED

Theater Managers, Actors, Musicians and Attaches To Stage Great Show Thursday Night.

ENTIRE PROCEEDS TO FIREMAN FUND

Contributions for Families of Slain Continue To Pour In—Probe Starts Monday.

What promises to be one of the greatest benefit theatrical performances ever offered in the south will be staged at the Atlanta auditorium at 10:30 o'clock Thursday night, the entire proceeds to be given to the firemen's benefit fund for relief of widows and orphans of the six men who gave their lives as a sacrifice to duty in the tragic warehouse fire of Wednesday morning, it was announced Saturday by Manager Thomas H. James, of Loew's Grand theater, chairman of the committee of Atlanta theater managers sponsoring the event.

It is planned to give Atlanta one of the biggest vaudeville and picture shows ever presented on one stage, and every theater manager, stage employee, musician, film industry and stage attache in Atlanta will cooperate in production of the big show. Every penny of receipts will be given to the firemen's fund. All people connected with production of the show will pay their way at the door. The show will be presented without one cent being charged for expenses of any kind, all these expenses being borne by the allied theatrical interests giving the show.

Relief Fund Grows.

With Atlantans responding more nobly each day to the call for funds to help the families of the six slain firemen, the grand total of subscriptions Saturday afternoon mounted to approximately $5,800. People in all walks of life sent in various contribu-

FRENCH RUSHING REINFORCEMENTS

Four Block Houses of French Beleaguered by Warring Riffian Tribesmen—One Is Relieved.

Paris, May 9.—Troop ships are steaming out of Bordeaux, Marseilles and Toulon. Reinforcements are on their way to beleaguered French forces in North Africa. Concentrations are progressing within the fighting zone itself. Everywhere there is evidence that the French, now recognizing that the Riffian rebellion is serious, are preparing to deal a decisive blow against the warring tribesmen.

In the north and east of the fighting Krim are besieging five French outposts. Relief is needed badly. The attention of the strengthened French army will be directed first to rescuing these isolated detachments.

An aerial offensive against the Moroccans also is planned. General Niessel, inspector geenral of aviation, will head a mission to Morocco in connection with the air strategy. Niessel conferred with Premier Painleve today, prior to his departure.

Reinforcements were ordered following urgent requests from Marshal Lyautey, governor of French Morocco, who asked for more troops, airplanes and artillery. While aid from France is en route, a new detachment of troops is being mobilized at Toulon.

When the French have thoroughly strengthened and organized their position, they will open their offensive.

"The government believes that in order to maintain the prestige of France throughout Northern Africa and reassure the loyal tribes, it is necessary that the authors of this aggression be severely punished," Painleve announced today.

"Concentrations now are in progress in order to make possible a decisive blow. Our final action will be violent, quick and less costly.

The premier declared that Spain and England were in accord with the French plans and emphasized that "what we are doing cannot be described as a military operation of conquest."

Negro With His Motor Boat Is Hero of River Disaster

SAVED MORE THAN SCORE FROM DROWNING

Memphis, Tenn., May 9.—Tom Lee, a black man, who has been coursing up and down this part of the Mississippi for 20 years, and who Friday afternoon cut the death toll to 23 in the sinking of the Norman from rising to twice as many, tonight is the hero of his race in the south.

The white men and women whom he helped to safety and the negroes who saw him carry them to land in his motorboat, joined in tributes to the plucky efficiency of his remarkable rescue work as Tom Lee told about it in his darky dialect.

J. M. Wood, of Memphis, a delegate to the convention of the Mid-South Association of Engineers, which had chartered the government boat for a pleasure-inspection trip to Cow Island, told how the steamer had listed to one side and how the men and women on board, dividing equally on the two sides of the boat, had managed to stabilize it temporarily.

Boat Settled Slowly.

The heaviest loss of life, he said, was on the side which first submerged.

"The boat settled slowly," he said. "Those on our side climbed over the railing onto the side, now the top. The boat continued to turn slowly until the bottom became the top. Many struggling in the water were pulled aboard.

"For five minutes 20 of us thought we were safe. This hope faded as we watched the steel stern sinking, and a few minutes later the entire hull was inundated and 20 were added to those fighting for life."

Pulls Mrs. Wood in Boat.

Then, as Wood supported his wife to the limit of his last exertion and it seemed to him as if both must drown, along came the motor boat piloted by the negro, Tom Lee. Lee took Mrs. Wood by the wrist and raised her into the boat. Wood and others clutched the motor boat's side.

"Mr. and Mrs. Garner Miller, who were then exhausted, were also pulled into the boat," Wood continued. "The life of W. F. Schulz was saved by the same negro. Schulz cannot swim and had no life preserver. The negro pulled him into the boat.

"Many were clinging desperately to the other side of the boat and the negro made his way carefully to the shore, where a number of negroes took charge of us, gave us warm food and built a fire to dry our clothes. many of us wearing the clothes of the negroes while ours were drying. Lee saved all our lives."

Rescued 30 in All.

Lee brought more ashore until he had rescued 30 in all, and then he and one of the passengers searched unsuccessfully for bodies during the night. He told how he had come upon the disaster.

"I saw the Norman up the river ahead of me," he said. "I passed her after a while, but couldn't notice nothin' wrong. I spec' I was jes' lookin' at the people and didn't pay no attention to the way the boat was acting.

"I kep' on lookin'. I thought they was dancing. Then when I was about half a mile above her, I happened to look back and I saw her wheel had stopped and she was leaning over to the right side. I knew sump'n was wrong, so I turned around and started toward 'er.

"She was half way under and the water was full of people—bof men and women.

Dragged People in Boat.

"I started draggin' them into my boat as fast as I could. They was floatin' 'round with life preservers on and some was holding on to boards. The current was taking them out to the channel. They wasn't hollerin' very much.

"I got a boat load and put into the bank. I don't know how many I had, but my boat holds 12. I unloaded and went back. One of the white men stayed in the boat and went back to help me pull them in. I don't know who he was.

"We loaded up again. We tried to get to the women first. We was afraid to go up too close to the boat, 'cause she was goin' down and we was afraid she might tip over and take us under. The people sitting on top jumped into the water and floated away, and then we picked them up. I couldn't see anybody at the windows inside the boat.

Made 4 or 5 Trips.

"We made four or five trips to the bank. We took everybody over, I think, 'cept three colored fellows who swimmed to the bank.

"By the time we had made the second trip to the Norman, she was gone clean under outa sight.

"Then we made some fire on the bank. I had dry matches. We made three or four fires. There was three or four gangs of them. They seemed to be all right 'cept they was cold and shivering.

"It got dark and began to drizzle rain. Some of the ladies went to nearby houses. But most everyone stayed around the fire.

"Early this morning Mr. Edwards and another gentleman and myself started back up the river in my boat, still looking for bodies and hats and things. We didn't find a thing."

Their Wedding Blocked Until Lawless Proves He's Single

HICKMAN ENGINEER HAD BOAT TICKET, BUT CAME ON HOME

Hickman, Ky., May 9.—L. H Howard, of this county, attending the convention of the Mid-South Association of Engineers at Memphis, had a ticket to ride on the steamer Norman, which went down with the loss of 23 lives, but at the last moment decided not to take the ride and left Memphis for his home, it was learned here today.

His name was carried in the missing list of some newspapers today and caused anxiety among his friends here for his safety.

PAUL NORCROSS PULLED ON HULL OF STEAMER

lette's instructions, he said, the boat carried four life boats instead of two, and they were stored on the top deck, two attached to davits and two lying free.

When the vessel listed the first time, the major said he made for the boats.

"I attempted to losen one of the davits first," he said, "because I realized that the free boats were ready. A sudden and sharp list threw me overboard and before I could right myself, the Norman had capsized.

Boats Pinned Beneath.

"The ship listed to starboard and turned over, pinning the lifeboats beneath. One of the unattached boats was freed from the ship and Major Connolly, a small boy and two other men managed to get to it."

River men today declined to venture from their experience a suggestion of what caused the Norman to capsize. Government officials agreed that not until a board of inquiry inspects the raised hulk will the explanation be available.

Until the wreck is raised and the bodies believed to be within are recovered, the work will go on, Major Connolly said tonight.

Major Connolly, who was in charge of the party that so gaily went down the river to Cow island at noon yesterday, but which was suddenly and dramatically broken up at 5:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon, has been working unremittingly since he was pulled out of the stream after the accident. He remained at the scene all of last night and up until almost noon today. Coming to Memphis, he changed clothing and left again for Coahoma Bend at 1 p. m.

Stories of heroism involving virtually every member of the party that was hurled into the water in one of the swiftest stretches of the lower Mississippi, continued to be heard today. How men placed life preservers on women, neglecting themselves, and how others worked to save persons of lesser strength until they themselves were overcome were frequently told.

Dramatic Stories.

Dramatic stories were told of the wild staggering of the steamer just before she went down. She listed heavily and Captain Fenton ordered the passengers scattered, thinking too many were on one side of the boat. Sitting in the cabin was a group of Memphis engineers bent on organization of a local chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

"Trim the ship," came the order. There was no excitement. The engineers as a man rose and without haste left the cabin. Hardly had they reached the deck before the ship wildly careened to the starboard. She refused to answer her helm. Three minutes later she was a hulk lying upside down in the stream, her passengers and crew struggling in the swift water.

Clarence Miller, 20 years old, noted throughout the south as a swimmer, leaped into the stream and swam ashore. Exhausted, he lay panting on the bank. Mrs. Charles E. Shearer was struggling in the water with her four-year-old son. Miller leaped in again. Breasting the heavy current he reached the woman, tied a life preserver about her and took the boy ashore.

Woman Is Saved.

Charles E. Shearer probably gave his life to save others. Miss Lillian Weyl, of Indianapolis, Ind., who was visiting at the Shearer home, tells the story.

"Mr. Shearer tied a life preserver around me just before I was thrown into the swift current," she said. "That was the last I saw of him."

"I was floating around in the water when a man swam near," she continued. "I afterward found it was Mr. Lund, of Little Rock, Ark. He was hanging on to a hatch. He told me to hang on and keep my head. I wasn't very excited and did just what he said.

"'Let's work together,' Mr. Lund said, 'and we'll make shore all right.'

"'What do you want me to do?' I asked him.

"'Hold on with your left hand and paddle with your right,' he said. We were picked up by a boat soon afterward. When we were taken ashore, another man was struggling in the water. As we got to him, he went down, but Mr. Lund jumped in and grabbed him. They both were pulled into the boat but the man was already dead. Mr. Lund was so exhausted that he had to lie in the boat's bottom until we reached shore."

Father Saves Son.

L. L. Hidinger, Memphis engineer, saved his five-year-old son, Leroy, Jr., but his aged mother, Mrs. Lydia Hidinger, went down before his eyes. When the steamer started to sink, Mr. Hidinger started to search for the mother and son. He could not find them.

"As the boat continued to list the starboard hull became completely submerged and the passengers all grouped on top of the port hull," said Mr. Hidinger. "I was about to jump into the river when I saw my boy standing quietly by my side. How he got there through the jam of people I do not know—it was a miracle.

"We jumped together and Leroy held his arms around my neck while I drifted for about a mile with the current. It was entirely too swift and powerful for me to attempt to swim against it.

"As we floated along, Leroy suddenly cried: 'Daddy, daddy, there's grandma sinking. Let's save her.' She was a few yards to our right. I swam over to her and reached her just as she sank for the last time. I was about to dive after her when the realization came to me it would mean the death of my boy.

"I knew what action my dear old mother would have wanted me to take.

"A few minutes later we were picked up by a motor boat."

Hang on Log.

"Just before the boat went under, I stripped off my outer clothing. When I was kicking about in the current I suddenly discovered that I was still holding my new straw hat tight in my hand. I threw it away and started fighting in earnest. I was all in and had just about given up when I noticed a tree hanging over the water a short way down stream. I managed to kick my way to it but was too exhausted to get out of the water. I felt a hand grab me by the hair and I was resting my chin across a log. I tied my necktie to a stub on the log, while a young fellow, I think his name was Overstreet, carried the others ashore. He then came back for me."

Fate juggled with the life of R. O. Schaefer, publisher of The Southern Contractor. It took him from the steamer Choctaw, sister ship of the Norman, which had carried a portion of the excursion party, to ride back on the Norman. It dragged him into swirling waters and finally took him, exhausted, ashore.

Soon after the captain had ordered the passengers scattered Mr. Schaefer said Major D. H. Gillette, United States engineer, reported trouble with the steering wheel and said the engineer wanted to put ashore to fix it. "While Captain Fenton was casting about for a safe landing place," said Mr. Schaefer, "the boat careened. Just then somebody yelled 'She's going over!' and the boat slowly began to turn on its side. People on the upper deck started climbing over the turning side and about a minute later the Norman was resting bottomside up.

Passengers Calm.

"There was not a bit of panic. Even with all that was taking place, I couldn't help noticing how everyone was trying to help the other fellow. A few of the children were crying, but that was about all of the noise I remember. About twenty people managed to get onto the boat's keel. Then the boat began sinking by the stern.

When the struggle in the water was about over, George Foster, Memphis engineer, fought his way through brambles, over sloughs and finally managed to get a mule and rode to a plantation several miles distant. There he got into touch with Memphis and gave the alarm.

Within a few minutes, it seemed, the news had filtered throughout the city. Frantic friends and relatives besieged newspaper offices. Doctors and first-aid were sent to the scene in fast motor boat. Ambulances went by land. The Choctaw arrived with her quota of excursionists. Doctors were waiting. She landed her passengers and put out again so quickly that some of the physicans arriving a minute late had to jump aboard.

For what seemed like hours to anxious friends and relatives there was no news. Nobody could be reached who had any first-hand information. Then a reporter got his newpaper on the telephone. The list of those known to have been saved came first. It was relayed from the telephone booth and frantic men and women fought for a word as to what it contained. Extra newspapers were gobbled up as fast as newsboys could hand them out.

Mayor Rowlett Jaine, for an hour or more believed to have been on the ill-fated boy, came on in the Choctaw. As soon as the survivors of the Norman had been brought to Memphis and landed from the steamer Mississippi, a check of all delegates to the convention and their friends was begun.

Cousin of Atlantan.

Major Charles H. Miller, of Little Rock, Ark., who is listed as missing and unaccounted for following the M. E. Norman's sinking in the Mississippi river, is a cousin of L. B. Bryan, of 805 Highland avenue, Atlanta.

MISSING ENGINEER BUILT CAIRO LEVEE.

Cairo, Ill., May 9.—Engineer Charles H. Miller, of Little Rock, Ark., one of the victims of the Norman disaster, was the designer of the Cairo levee system, said to be the greatest engineering feat of its kind ever conceived.

River men here today recalled that Captain Fenton, master of the Norman, also was commander of the ill-fated government yacht Opelika, which was swamped near Memphis several months ago, about the time a false report was in circulation concerning the alleged sinking of the Nauvoo.

FULTON ENGINEER IS BELIEVED LOST.

Fulton, Ky., May 9.—Members of the family of W. O. Walker, resident engineer for the H. W. Nelson company, who went to Memphis the first of the week to attend a convention of engineers, had not heard from him up to tonight and fear that he went down on the steamer Norman when she capsized yesterday near Memphis. No word of any kind had been had from him.

Mr. Walker was in charge of building a $17,000,000 cut-off for the Illinois Central railroad from Edgewood, Ill., to Fulton.

Friends Mourn Norcross as Hope For Safety Ebbs

Civic leaders, professional friends, social friends, acquaintances in all walks of life, joined Saturday in expressing their personal sorrow at the reported death of Paul Norcross. Mr. Norcross, one of Atlanta's most distinguished citizens, former president of the chamber of commerce and a national figure in his profession as a civil engineer, was reported as probably drowned when the U. S. steamer "Norman," sank in the Mississippi Friday night.

A comparatively young man, Mr. Norcross was fast making an international reputation as an engineering genius, and had been recognized in all parts of the United States as one of the leaders in his profession. But it was as a civic leader and personal friends that he was best known and loved in Atlanta and it was as the coworker for the city and neighbor that all Atlanta mourned him on Saturday.

Mayor Sims' comment was as follows:

"I am profoundly shocked to learn of the tragic death of Paul Norcross, whom I admired not only as a personal friend but as a citizen. Atlanta has lost one of its more progressive citizens and the south has lost a foremost engineer and business man.

"My sympathy goes out to his family."

PAUL H. NORCROSS

Migh Have Lived.

"If Paul Norcross is lost he died trying to save others. That was his way always, and if the boat was only 300 feet from the shore when it went down Paul could have made it to safety easily, for he was a splendid swimmer," said Alfred C. Newell, former president of the chamber of commerce. "He was a man of broad vision and a friend whose loss hurts."

"The death of Paul Norcross is a great loss, not only to us who valued so highly his friendship, but to the city and the south," Colonel Fred J. Paxon said.

"He was one of the most loyal, lovable men the south has ever produced, and the loss is twofold, in that the services of one of the greatest engineers of the day are lost, in addition to that of personal friends. I was greatly shocked when I heard the sad news."

"If Paul Norcross is lost," said Eugene R. Black, of the Atlanta Trust company, "it will be a great blow to Atlanta. He has served this city faithfully and well during many years and has endeared himself to many friends, whose loss will be great."

"It is a great loss to the city," said Preston S. Arkwright, of the Georgia Railway & Power company. "Paul Norcross was one of the finest men I have ever known and had a brilliant future in his profession, where he already stood among the leaders."

Hopes For Safety.

"I hope first reports prove incorrect and that Paul may be found safe somewhere, but unable at present to get in touch with the outside world," were the words of E. Marvin Underwood, prominent Atlanta attorney.

"Paul and I were boys together and lifelong friends and the blow to me is very great."

"I cannot get my thoughts together to make any statement that would tell just how much I feel the loss."

NEGRO WHO KILLED McDUFFIE CITIZEN SOUGHT IN ATLANTA

Thomson, Ga., May 8.—(Special.) Sheriff Lynn Morris and his deputies returned to Thomson today from Jasper county where they went several days ago in search of Lee Jordan, negro, charged with the murder of A. G. Adams, at Hamilton cross roads several days ago.

It was learned by the sheriff that the negro had been seen near Monticello, but before the arrival of the officers he had disappeared.

Information was to the effect that the negro on leaving Jasper county was making his way towards Atlanta and it is the belief of the McDuffie authorities that he is now in that city.

WILBUR, CHOCOLATE MANUFACTURER DEAD

Philadelphia, May 9.—Henry Wilbur, chocolate manufacturer, died today. He was 90 years old last December.

Mr. Wilbur was a native of Pennsylvania. In early manhood he was in the hardware business in New Jersey and in 1855 formed a partnership in Philadelphia to make confectionary. This was dissolved in 1884 when he founded the present concern of H. O. Wilbur and Sons, entering extensively into the manufacture of chocolate and cocoa.

HARVEY FLEMING DIES AT TEXAS RESIDENCE

News was received in Atlanta Saturday that Harvey Fleming, 46, La Ferria, Texas, died at his residence there Friday night. He is a brother of E. M. Fleming and Mrs. T. W. White, both of this city. Mr. Fleming went to Ferria several years ago from West Point. In addition to his widow, he is survived by three brothers and two sisters. Funeral services will be held in La Ferria, Texas.

Lawless' arrest followed receipt of a telegram from Alabama by Acting Chief of Police E. L. Jett Saturday charging him with the desertion of his wife and baby in Birmingham.

Alabama Telegram.

The telegram that brought about his arrest was dated from Eclectic, Ala., and was signed by S. E. Spencer. It read:

"Get the F. G. or Gayle Lawless who is working for the White Provision company and was found cut by barbed wire. See Atlanta Constitution statement. Hold him for Birmingham officers. He is wanted for desertion of wife and baby."

Officers were immediately sent to Grady hospital, where Lawless was preparing to leave, and took him to police station. From behind the bars Lawless proceeded to deny the charge with all the eloquence and emphasis at his command.

"I have never been married. I had several friends in Birmingham, but none that I care enough for to marry. My wedding was set for tomorrow," he added.

Miss Freeman stated that he had made an engagement to meet her at "Five Points" at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning and that she had waited at the spot agreed upon until after 1 o'clock. She waited for him at the house for the rest of the day and was told by a friend Friday night that he was in the hospital.

Girl's Aunt Surprised.

Mrs. A. T. Hammock, Miss Freeman's aunt, with whom both she and Lawless were boarding, expressed surprise at his arrest and the charge that he was married and guilty of wife-desertion.

"He seemed to be a model," she said, "so far as his habits were concerned. I never heard him use profanity and never smelled liquor on his breath. He had a good job, and Lillie, who worked under him, was always talking of his popularity. But I guess he had us all fooled. Lillie is a good girl and I suppose everything has turned out for the best."

Lawless appeared at Grady hospital Friday in a pair of overalls, with a number of ugly cuts and gashes over his body. He then told a story of the hold-up by bandits who beat him and lashed him to a tree with barbed wire, after stripping him of his clothes; of his escape and of borrowing a pair of overalls at a near-by farm house.

Acting Chief Jett dispatched a telegram to the Birmingham chief following the arrest of Lawless, but had received no reply at a late hour Saturday night.

SOUTH AMERICAN RADIO FANS PREFER CLASSICAL MUSIC

New York, May 9.—Classical and not jazz music is the entertainment that causes radio fans in South America to gather around their loud speakers, according to General J. G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who has recently returned from a tour of the southern continent.

Although the radio interest in the Latin countries is not so general as it is in the United States, the people of South America are being converted slowly, Harbord said. In this development, American electrical firms are playing a considerable part, he declared, as most of the foreign purchases of Argentine, Brazil and other countries are made in the United States.

There are four broadcasting stations in Buenos Aires, two in Rio de Janeiro, two in Sao Paulo and several others scattered through the country. The programs are not up to the standard of American stations, however, Harbord said.

DENTON KILLS WIFE AND SHOOTS SELF

her home with us. He has been threatening her life and ours ever since. We had talked of swearing out a peace warrant for him but had never done it. The truth is we thought he was just bluffing.

"This wasn't the first time mother had left him. They were separated some time ago because of his liquor habits but mother went back to him on his promise to go straight, following my marriage last November. Last Christmas he began drinking again and mother left when she could not stand it any longer.

"He made repeated efforts to see her and tonight he came into the Rogers store, of which my husband is manager, and asked me where she was, when I said she was at the house he tried to get me to bring her to the store. I saw he had been drinking and refused.

"Father and I talked for a time and then I walked toward the back of the store. Just then I heard mother talking in the front and, almost immediately afterwards, the pistol shots. I rushed to the front and found her. She couldn't say a word—couldn't even moan."

With Mrs. Benton, as she entered the store, was Mrs. W. B. Rackley, of 169 Mills street, who had been her friend for a number of years. Mrs. Rackley stated that Mrs. Benton had been with her at her house and had agreed to walk with her to the store for several purchases.

Witness Tells Story.

"We were standing in the door of the store, talking, when her husband walked up to us, thrust me aside and shot her. Oh! I begged them to have a peace warrant sworn against him, but they wouldn't.

"It wasn't the first time he had threatened her life, or even drawn a gun on her. Until last March I boarded in their home on Luckie street. Once I snatched a gun from his hand when he was flourishing it about and threatening to shoot her. Another time I told him, when he drew the same gun on her in my bedroom, that he'd either have to pocket the thing or get out."

Previous to their marriage Mrs. Benton was Miss Anna Glaze, of Rome, Ga. She was 42 years old and her husband is 45. They came to Atlanta seven years ago from Monroe.

Four children were born to their marriage—two boys and two girls. Both boys are dead. The girls are Mrs. Williams and her 16-year-old sister, Miss Nina Belle Benton.

In addition to her children Mrs. Benton is survived by a sister, Mrs. Francis Taylor, of Good Hope, Ga.; two brothers, Tom Glaze, of Centerville, and Charles Glaze, and two half-brothers, George and Homer Glaze. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

BIG BENEFIT SHOW FOR RELIEF FUND

tions, and nearly all express deepest sympathy for the families of the victims.

Nicholas Pavlakas.

One of the most generous contributions to the fund was made by Nicholas Pavlakas, a Greek citizen, who gave all of Friday's receipts of his peanut stand to the firemen's fund. This total was $11.91, the gross receipts of his business for an entire day. Pavlakas brought his money to The Constitution office and expressed regret that he could not give more.

Several additional contributors of $100 each were reported Saturday, among these being Asa G. Candler, Jr., David Woodward and C. F. Wilkinson. Department stores of the city contributed $600.

Fire Chief W. B. Cody Saturday received a letter of sympathy from the Grant Park lodge of Masons and the lodge inclosed a check for $100 for the firemen's fund.

Probe Starts Monday.

Chief Cody stated Saturday that he would hold a conference Monday with Albert Sharpe, state fire marshal, and that the investigation of the cause of the fire would be started after the conference. The report that the fire was of incendiary origin will be thoroughly investigated by these officials.

"We are going to give the people a $5 show for $1, and it will be the most notable entertainment of its kind we have ever attempted to present here," Chairman James said, in reference to Thursday night's benefit show. "We will have all the acts from Loew's Grand, all the acts from Keith's Forsyth and all acts from the combined motion picture theaters of Atlanta. In addition, we will have at our disposal the best films of the Atlanta motion picture industry for use on the program. Atlanta musicians, members of the American Federation of Musicians, will furnish music free, and members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees will stage the show without any charge for services."

Thousands Visit Elaborate Sales Offices Of Avondale Estates During Initial Week

View of downtown sales offices of Avondale estates, on the right, as you enter. The central feature is a big topographical plat, true to scale, which shows all the advantages offered by this big development. Offices are located at 173-175 Peachtree street, corner Ellis, in the Aragon hotel block.

With business continuing to increase, and with thousands giving highest praise to the elaborate and attractive down-town offices at 173-175 Peachtree street, which were opened last Monday night, the sales department of Avondale Estates Saturday night expressed complete satisfaction with results of the week.

The new offices proved an unusually strong lure, and a business getter as well. Every night of the week the rooms were crowded, and Warner's Seven Aces furnished lively music. In all the attendance exceeded 10,000 for the six days. Many persons dropped in, hearing the music, without knowing what was being offered on the inside, and remained to become prospective purchasers.

These offices will remain open every day during regular business hours and will welcome visitors until 10:30 o'clock each night.

Representatives of Avondale have been heartily congratulated upon the size and the attractiveness of the new sales office. It has added a bit of color to down-town Atlanta which was missing before.

The two main features of the salesrooms are the big topographical plat, absolutely true to scale, which is to be seen on the right as you enter from Peachtree, and the great painting—a perspectus of the entire development—which is placed against a wall on the left. The plat gives a splendid idea of what Avondale already offers, of advantages which residents will have within a short time, and of the unlimited possibilities of this property. On the plat the lots which already have been sold are marked. Spaces also are marked off for schools, churches and other community projects.

Attractive features of the rooms are the tastefully decorative effects. Especially admired have been the trellises surrounding the posts, on which marechal Niel roses climb ceilingward. On the walls are oil paintings of many houses and woodland effects at Avondale.

Further improvements and additions to the offices are being planned for the near future.

SHIPPERS ARE GRIEVED OVER AMERICAN LAWS

Rotterdam, Holland, May 9.—American immigration restrictions are the bugbear of most European transatlantic shipping companies and to them the Holland-American line attributes to a great extent the unfavorable aspect of its financial year.

"Although no mitigation of the American immigration laws is to be expected for a few years to come," the financial report of the company says, "we believe that this restrictive policy cannot endure, because the continued development of the vast territory of the United States must ultimately bring about a shortage of labor, and it is plain that in the end American industries, under the pressure of high wages, will not be in a position to compete with a reorganized Europe."

In view of the American restrictions, the special Polish emigrant service from Danzig to Rotterdam had to be discontinued, the report says, but against this diminished emigrant traffic the company sets an increased traveling impetus among well-to-do Americans, and it is upon the development of the high-class passenger traffic that the efforts of all transatlantic lines must now be concentrated.

stacked along the railroad right-of-way. Finishing his task, he cranked his automobile and started across the railroad, a deep cut at the crossing obstructed the view of the railroad track and it is supposed that he failed to hear the approach of the train.

Train No. 16 is due in Buford at 8:36 a. m. from Atlanta.

Mr. Bagby is survived by his mother, Mrs. F. M. Bagby, of near Buford; one sister, Miss Lena Bagby, of Buford, and one brother, Lem Bagby, of Jasper, Ala.

Funeral arrangements have not been made pending the arrival of his brother from Alabama.

STEPHENSON DIES AFTER ACCIDENT.

Carrollton, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Professor James M. Stephenson, 83, who was run down by an automobile on April 27, died here yesterday.

He was for more than 50 years one of the most prominent educators in the state. At one time he was associate president of Bowdon college. For many years he was professor of mathematics, French and German at Oxford college, Alabama.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eudora Weaver Stephenson; and seven children, Graves F. Stephenson, of Athens; Mrs. M. L. Watkins, of Keysville, Va.; Mell M. Stephenson, of Athens, and Atlanta; Mrs. T. J. Jones, of Durham, N. C.; Mrs. E. L. Shellnut, of Winder; George B. Stephenson, of Leesburg, Fla., and Mrs. James M. Stephenson, Jr., of Wesleyan college, Macon; one sister, Mrs. J. H. McDaniel, of this city. James M. Stephenson, Jr., a son, who was formerly a professor in the University of Georgia, died 18 years ago.

Professor Stephenson had a wide circle of friends throughout Georgia and Alabama.

Men! Don't Come Home Fagged Out by Hard Work

DOCTORS say that in an enormous number of cases when men come home physically and mentally "all in," nervous and cranky, the real cause is not hard work, but thin, pale, watery blood, deficient in strength-giving iron. Once this iron is restored to the blood it is often astonishing how quickly these men gain new strength, nerve force and endurance.

But be sure the iron you take is organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and not the old-fashioned liquid medicines and pills made by the action of powerful acids on ordinary mineral iron. Nuxated Iron is a natural organic iron, like the iron in your own blood, and like that in spinach and lentils. Does not injure teeth nor disturb the stomach. So remarkable are the effects of Nuxated Iron that thousands of weak, nervous, fagged out men and women have often increased their strength, energy, and endurance in only two weeks' time.

Try Nuxated Iron just two weeks. Money back if not delighted. But make certain you get genuine guaranteed Nuxated Iron Tablets with the letters N I on every tablet. At all good druggists.—(adv.)

DEATH TOLL RISES TO 24 IN INQUIRY

The child was supposed to have died last November at the age of two weeks, but now the mother believes that the baby who died was not her own.

New Charges Unearthed.

New and damaging charges were brought against Mrs. Giesen-Volk hourly throughout the day. Mrs. Mollie Weiss said that after entrusting her six-months old babe she had been told by the woman that the child had been sent to San Francisco. She then paid $250 to a lawyer who pocketed the money, but she declared did nothing for her. Seeking to bring a formal charge of kidnaping against Mrs. Giesen-Volk, Mrs. Weiss learned at the district attorney's office that her evidence was not sufficient.

Assistant District Attorney Ryan claims that most of the infants whom Mrs. Giesen-Volk had transferred to hospitals because of extreme illnesses have died within two or three days of arrival.

Home on Park Avenue.

On Park avenue, it is alleged, Mrs. Giesen-Volk conducted a babies' home, where women came to give birth to their unwanted children.

Plans continue for exhumation of several of the babies who died while under the woman's care.

Dressed in black and hiding her face in her hands, Mrs. Giesen-Volk was taken to Harlem court in the morning and there faced an additional charge—that she had four more babies than her permit from the city allowed. Because of this charge, her bail was raised from $35,000 to $38,000.

Angerer, the bereft father, told the court how another child had been substituted for his own.

Mrs. Giesen-Volk sat stolidly through the session, waiving examination and refusing to enter any defense. She claims that her "life work, that of caring for babies, has been ruined," and that she loves babies more than all the rest of the world.

"If I thought she could secure this bail," said Magistrate Vitale, "I would increase it." I'll indorse these papers with a note to the warden that should arrangements be made to bail her out, the district attorney's office should be advised immediately.

"I'll also notify my colleague magistrates not to reduce this bail without consulting me. It seems to me that there are times when we should disregard the law."

Angerer exposed the Giesen-Volk baby farm when he had the proprietress arrested for the substitution. Angerer has not seen his own baby in nine weeks. The disclosure of the fatality rate at the infantarium followed his complaint.

family are not to be overlooked, but are to be included in the solicitation through the prospects approached.

Only Memorial coin certificates are to be sold by the campaign workers, which are redeemable at any of the principal banks of the country on the morning of July 3.

In distributing the coins it is necessary to adhere to a plan which will enable persons to obtain coints at uniform price, at a uniform time, and in a uniform manner. By this method it is also hoped to protect the coins and those responsible for them from losses resulting either from carelessness or dishonesty.

Atlanta division workers are anxious for their early campaign with the business firms and organizations in the city. The workers, under the direction of Alfred C. Newell, chairman are going to push to the limit their effort to have every business firm and organization cooperating 100 per cent for the honor roll in the vault of Stone mountain.

Through the campaign workers the Memorial association has announced that a vault will be carved within Memorial hall in the breast of the mountain in which will be stored a book recording the name of every firm and organization from the Chesapeake to the Rio Grande that renders 100 per cent cooperation in the campaign.

The book is to be placed behind highly embellished doors and to be inspected by the public only accompanied by the Memorial hall custodian. Every firm, men's club, woman's club, boys' club and girls' club whose employee force or membership subscribe 100 per cent to the campaign will be inscribed there.

Atlanta division workers are also using the recent interview of Senator George, of Georgia, to the effect that the treasury department is generally opposed to the special coinage acts of congress and that at any time congress may withdraw that privilege. It is therefore most probable, the workers in Atlanta declare, that the Confederate Memorial half-dollar will be the last special coin so issued.

Atlanta must set the pace in the purchase of certificates for the state of Georgia and the country. Atlanta workers are told that the way Atlanta goes, so goes the country so far as the sale of Confederate Memorial half-dollar certificates is concerned. Richmond has requisitioned 150,000 coins and Baltimore 200,000 coins—cities far removed from the home of the memorial—and the organization here believes they will have to go far over their quota and even 300,000 coins to lead the country.

ANTI-EVOLUTION LAW PUT TO TEST

intentionally, guilty; hence our decision to hold him for action by the grand jury."

The case will go before the grand jury convening the first Monday in August.

The act Scopes was charged with violating was passed at the last session of the Tennessee legislature and became effective March 21.

The preamble of the act designates it as an act "prohibiting the teaching of the evolution theory in all universities, normals and all other public schools supported in whole or in part by public school funds of the state."

The act continues that it shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of from $100 to $500 "to teach any theory that denies the story of the divine creation of man as taught in the Bible and to teach instead that man is descended from the lower order of animals."

The state based its case on a text book, 'A Civic Biology," by George W. Hunter, introducing the book in evidence and identifying it by its one witness, Walter White, superintendent of the Rhea county schools, as one taught in the high schools by virtue of its position as a regularly adopted textbook for state high schools. This and a certified copy of the recently enacted law was the state's case.

The defense offered no testimony and admitted that the book was taught by the defendant in the science department as a part of the course. The defense, however, in argument centered a sweeping attack against the constitutionality of the law, claiming that the legislation violates both the constitution of the United States and that of the state of Tennessee.

Act Improperly Drawn.

John Randolph Neal, counsel for the defense, with John L. Godsey, declared also that the act was improperly drawn in that evolution was mentioned in the preamble, but not in the body of the act.

"We deny," Neal said, "that the theory of evolution is contrary to the story of divine creation taught in the Bible. Legislative enactment cannot make it so. Many clergymen believe every word of the Bible and accept the theory of evolution."

Attorneys for the state, Wallace C. Haggard and Sue K. Hicks, contended that the court was not concerned at this hearing with the constitutionality of the law, but with the facts and with the evidence it could do nothing other than hold the defendant for the grand jury.

In this contention, the three justices concurred.

LAST CIVIL WAR MOTHER IS DEAD

They subsequently transferred their membership to the Missionary Baptist church, of which church she remained a member until her death.

A few years ago the J. E. B. Steward chapter of the U. D. C., of Commerce, decorated her with a golden badge as being one of the three living mothers of Confederate soldiers in the state at the time.

"Mother" Gordon always lived an exemplary life, and was a sincere and devoted Christian.

Funeral and interment services were held Saturday afternoon at Beaverdam church in Banks county.

It is generally understood and so far as known, "Mother" Gordon was the last "War Mother" in Georgia. Consequently, the surviving veterans who wore the gray are deeply grieved at the passing away of this grand old woman.

13 Teachers' Institutes To Be Held in Districts Of Georgia This Summer

Date Set for Twelve of Thirteen Schools Is From June 15 to July 14; Other Session Later.

Thirteen regional institutes for teachers will be held during the summer vacation period in Georgia this year. Twelve of these will be at the 12 district A. & M. schools, continuing from June 15 to July 1, while the 13th, at Ellijay, will open July 1 and close July 31.

J. O. Martin, state supervisor, in speaking of these institutes recently, pointed out that all teachers in the state school system who have not completed the 11th grade, and high school graduates who anticipate teaching next year, will find this work especially helpful and are urged to attend. He recommends that all county school superintendents call teachers of these classifications in their county for a conference and discuss with them the importance of their attending one of these institutes.

"It is useless," said Mr. Martin, "to talk about getting better teachers. There are none to get. We must take those in service and give them better training."

Six Day Classes.

Classroom work at each of the institutes will begin on time the first day and continue six days during each week, without interruption, Mr. Martin declared.

Three hours of credit will be given for satisfactory work, toward professionalizing elementary certificates, provided at least 104 recitations are taken by the student, with a minimum of four recitations each day the school is in session.

Teachers attending these summer schools are requested to take with them copies of the state-adopted texts for use in the courses which they intend pursuing. They should also make application to the principals of the A. & M. schools at once.

In addition to the regular faculty at each of the 13 summer schools, a corps of special itinerant lecturers have been secured. These lecturers include George Godard, J. O. Martin, Miss Caro Lane, I. S. Smith, Miss Annie Jane Simpson, M. L. Duggan, Miss S. M. Duggan, R. D. Webb, Dr. Abercrombie and Dr. Jett Bowden, of the state health department; P. F. Brown, E. A. Pound, S. V. Lanford, J. P. Faulkner and others.

Location of Schools.

The location of the different schools with their respective faculties, is as follows:

Statesboro—Mrs. F. D. Sockinger, Miss Lula Smith, R. M. Monts, Jack Lance, Miss Louise Enloe, R. E. Rountree.

Tifton—Miss Ida Durrence, George Roach, Miss Dora Ennis, L. M. Wilson, Walter, McMichael.

Americus—Miss Sarah Cobb, J. F. Lambert, Miss Annie Greer, Mrs. J. T. Hinson, J. C. Dukes, Miss Martha Wheatley.

Carrollton—Mrs. H. R. Adams, R. D. Powell, Mrs. A. H. Foster, John Holt, Van Fletcher.

Monroe—Miss Marjorie Thomas, Roy Drunkenmiller, Miss Irene Dockins, Miss Maud King, L. F. Herring.

Barnesville—Miss Mae Woodward, J. P. Cash, Miss Mamie L. Pitts, Miss Josie McAdams, J. M. Starr.

Powder Springs—Miss Lucile Peek, W. V. Lanier, Mrs. V. H. Letfwich, A. N. Swain, Miss Annie Brumby.

Madison—Miss Del Rey Adams, J. H. Purks, J. D. Nash, Miss Elizabeth Ballard, R. W. Haynie.

Clarkesville—Mrs. Ola Jones, E. L. Adams, Bruce Ray, Mrs. R. D. Osterhout, E. N. Reynolds.

Granite Hill—Miss Eylau Anderson, Miss Lillian Asbury, Mrs. E. J. Forrester, Miss Nannilee Saunders, Ernest Anderson.

Douglas—Miss Mattie Lively, G. E. Usher, Miss Ruth Bolton, Mrs. W. T. Wood, John Harris.

Cochran—Mrs. J. A. Stump, Mrs. J. O. Coleman, Mrs. T. E. Jago, Miss Ethel Miller, Paul Ellison.

Ellijay (July 1 to July 31)—Miss Lula Bragg, Mrs. O. J. Holliman, W. P. Lunsford, W. P. Martin, Miss Mattie George McGee, W. E. Bryan.

Lyric Manager Ends Successful Career in Atlanta

The close of the Lyric theater at the end of this week and the transfer of Montague Salmon, manager of the Lyric to Macon, as city manager of four well-known Famous Players-Lasky houses there, terminates a period of nearly six years of activity in the local theatrical field for Mr. Salmon, who during hismanagement of the Lyric theater has become one of the most popular and successful theatrical executives in the south.

Mr. Salmon assumed charge of the Lyric last summer after having been for some time connected with the Forsyth as assistant manager when that theater was housing the Forsyth Players, and later in the same capacity under Marty Semon, manager for Keith's vaudeville circuit.

Mr. Salmon began his career in Atlanta as manager of the Vaudette and Strand theaters and later assistant manager at the Forsyth under Mr. Semon, then he became floor manager of the Howard theater, which is also under the direction of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation.

His theatrical experience has been varied and has covered a considerably longer period than the six years spent in Atlanta. In fact it began in England, Mr. Salmon's original home and was continued in a number of states of the union.

In the future he will divide his time between the leading motion picture houses in Macon, one or two of which will also have special prologue acts in the fashion of the Howard, it is announced.

According to his friends his work in Atlanta has been marked by personal attitude of friendliness and warmth that has won him a host of admirers and has created good will for himself and his theatrical associates.

ASSOCIATES HONOR JOHN M. COOPER OF FOOTE & DAVIES

An interesting demonstration was given recently by the sales organization of the Foote & Davies company of the love and affection for Vice President and General Sales Manager John M. Cooper.

JOHN. M. COOPER.

On Mr. Cooper's 25th birthday he became connected with Foote & Davies company, and May 1 rounded out his first quarter-century service. In celebration of his birthday and his anniversary, he was presented a handsome white gold watch. This watch was presented by the senior city salesman, Charles T. Bailey, whose length of service almost equals Mr. Cooper's.

Mr. Cooper is well known in the city and takes a keen interest in all civic movements. During his quarter-century service with Foote & Davies he has seen the city double and treble in growth and take its place alongside the leading cities of the nation.

Diplomat Meets Crusaders.

London, May 8.—Ambassador Houghton received today at his home Crewe House, twenty-two church army "crusaders" who will leave seen for a trip to the United States. Later Rev. Prebendary Carlisle, founder of the church army, blessed the party in the front garden of the ambassador's London home.

Judge Candler Outlines Unification at Augusta

(The following exposition of the proposed unification of the north and south branches of the Methodist church, is submitted by and published at the request of "Friends Of Unification," a pro-unificationist organization of Atlanta.—Ed.)

Under the caption "Unification Plan Is Discussed by Judge Candler at St. John," a reporter in The Augusta Herald, on Monday, May 4, wirtes as follows of a great day among Augusta, Ga., Methodists:

"At the Methodist mass meeting held at St. John church Sunday afternoon, a large group of representative Methodists heard a strong address by Judge John S. Candler in favor of the unification of the Northern and Southern Methodist churches.

"By reason of the fact that Judge Candler was appointed on the commission whose negotiations with the commission from the Northern church resulted in the formulation of this plan, he is unusually well qualified to give full and accurate information about it. His address consisted largely in facts pertinent to an understanding of the plan, and he spoke with a sincerity and earnestness which were manifest and which had a marked effect upon the great congregation.

Recites History.

"He traced the history of the approaches of these two churches to each other since the division in 1844 and showed very clearly that for the last twenty years the desirability and the feasibility of the reunion of the churches have been clearly declared by the general conferences both of the Southern and Northern churches. It was made particularly clear that practically no voice from a representative leader of Southern Methodism for the last twenty years has been heard in opposition to the desirability of this reunion. The argument as to whether the ideal of unification is a worthy ideal has been closed sometime ago, as far as the outstanding leaders of Southern Methodism are concerned.

"Having made this foundation, the judge proceeded to the explanation of the plan now being considered. As is well known, this plan has been adopted by the general conferences of the two churches by large majorities and is being voted on in the annual conferences during this year. A strong if not convincing presumption in its favor consists in the fact that it is favored by so many of the leaders of Southern Methodism.

Plan Is Explained.

"Judge Candler clearly set forth to his hearers the essential features of the plan. If it is adopted there will be one general conference which will deal with matters of church-wide interest. In this general conference there will be an equal power of voting by each jurisdiction. If either jurisdiction votes against a matter it is defeated. In order to secure adoption each jurisdiction must vote for it.

"In agreeing to this the Northern Methodist has made a remarkable concession because it has two million more members than the Southern Methodist church. In addition to the general conference there will be two jurisdictional conferences, one in authority as to important matters over what is now the Northern church and the other over what is now the Southern church. These jurisdictional conferences will elect the bishops for each jurisdiction and these bishops will not be transferable to another jurisdiction than that for which they are elected except by the consent of the bishops in the other jurisdiction.

"The plan also provides that there shall be a judicial council composed of an equal number of members from each church which will have the power to restrain the general conference or the jurisdictional conferences from the exercise of power not given to them in this plan. This body will be very much like the supreme court of the United States which has the power to declare any act of congress beyond its constitutional powers to be void. There is quite a deal of interest in this matter because of the fact that one cause of the separation in 1844 was the dissatisfaction of the Southern members with the claim of the general conference of 1844 that it had unlimited powers.

"A particularly interesting part of the address was given to the relationship of this plan to the matter of colored membership in the reunited church. There will be in it about three hundred and fifty thousand colored members in the northern jurisdiction.

"Judge Candler traced the history of this matter, showing that Southern Methodism did not force its own colored members out in 1870 but assisted them when they desired to do it in the establishment of their own church, the Colored Methodist Episcopal church. Bishop Paine and Bishop McTyeire, in 1870, at Jackson, Tenn., ordained two colored ministers to be the first bishops of this church. In recent years the Methodist Episcopal church elected two colored ministers as bishops in that church in order that there might be a more effective superintendence over their colored members. These colored bishops have never presided over any annual conferences except colored conferences and under the plan could not preside over any annual conference in the Southern jurisdiction unless invited to do so by the Southern Methodist bishops. He also declared that there are colored members in the other great Prostestant churches in the South, such as the Southern Presbyterian and the Episcopal churches.

"The argument for the pending plan based on the strong desire for the reunion of the churches by the missionaries, was most strongly stated. The effort of missionaries to explain to non-Christian people the fact that there is a division of American Methodism is indeed a burdensome necessity and the missionaries should be relieved from it as soon as possible.

"Judge Candler very eloquently stressed the relationship of this matter to the political solidarity of our nation. He called attention to the fact that ever since the war between the states many of our great soldiers and statesmen have been appealing for that spirit among our people which will as quickly as possible repair the damage done in the war. The judge declared that it is the duty of churches to promote harmony and peace between the sections and to seek for the establishment and enforcement of the ideals of reconciliation. He declared that churches of Jesus Christ which will not forgive each other cannot expect to have very great influence as they seek to promote peace between classes and nations.

"He clearly showed that in view of the fact that Southern Methodism finds in this plan so many of the things for which it has contended and so many concessions from its sister church, the rejection of it will put Southern Methodism in a most embarrassing position before the Christian public, and that such rejection will be inconsistent with the remarkable record whicn it has had since 1848 in its dealings with its sister church.

"The large congregation present showed marked appreciation of the masterly address and demonstrated the widespread interest of Augusta Methodists in this paramount issue."

Unification Opponents See Victory in Reports

BY REV. W. L. PIERCE.

A short statement of the reports coming into the office of the Association to Preserve Southern Methodism may be helpful to the members of the church who are anxious concerning the final results in the unification move. The following district conferences have acted within the last few days in the election of delegates who will vote on the plan in the approaching annual conferences:

Paris district of Texas by a vote of 71 to 9 elected delegates against unification. Bishop Moore, a leader among the bishops in the unification movement, was in the chair, and the presiding elder of this district is likewise a pronounced unificationist. I wonder who is coercing these downtrodden brethren to make them vote against unification.

Greenville district, Mississippi conference, elected eight delegates against unification by a vote of 70 to 11.

Greenwood district, Mississippi conference, elected eight delegates against unification and then passed resolutions against the adoption of unification.

Other District Reports.

Farmville district, Virginia conference, sends a solid delegation against unification. Eastern Shore and Weldon districts in the Virginia conference, elected a delegation for the most part against the plan.

Austin district, West Texas conference, elected last week a solid delegation against the plan.

Hopkinsville district, in the Louisville conference, elected the past week an entire delegation against the plan.

Spartanburg district, South Carolina conference, elected the entire delegation against the plan. Spartanburg is the home of Dr. H. N. Snyder, president of Wofford college and a member of the commission of unification. He was also a member of the general conference in Chattanooga last summer and was not elected by this conference to the annual conference as a delegate.

In addition to these districts that have acted individual churches all over the connection are electing delegates by large majorities against unification. Let the good work go on, as we believe it will, until this abomination is swamped beyond recovery.

Columbia district, upper South Carolina conference, elected a solid delegation against unification.

Seven districts in the North Alabama conference have elected 56 delegates pledged and also instructed against unification. Reports from that conference indicate that every lay vote will be cast against unification.

Result as "Expected."

It is not surprising that the laymen are so aroused. They are stung with a sense of injustice done them by the general conference held at Chattanooga last July. That conference rejected a motion to submit the plan to a vote of the laymen of the church as a whole, claiming they would be adequately represented by the lay delegates elected by the district conferences to the annual conferences. And then that body passed a resolution requesting the annual conference to vote by secret ballot so that it might not be known how the members voted. Thus the laymen were denied the right of voting directly, and at the same time a request was made which, if it were acceded to, would prevent them knowing how their pastors and lay representatives voted, by the voting of whom the plan will be adopted or rejected. The great body of of the laity, numbering nearly 2,500,000, justly resent all this action of the general conference at Chattanooga, and they resolved to defeat "the plan."

And while many clerical members of the annual conferences will vote for the plan to which they have committed themselves too hastily, thousands of preachers of the rank and file will not vote to force an unacceptable plan of unification upon the laymen who have been converted and received into the church under their ministry, and upon whom they depend for cooperation, sympathy and support. There will be no division between most of the laymen and a majority of their pastors. If leaders in the northern church entertain the notion that by this plan of unification the southern church can be split and then absorbed, they will be disappointed. Their long pursued policy of "disintegration and absorption" is destined to fail now as it has always failed heretofore.

Raps Propagandists.

A propagandist bureau in Chicago is sending out press dispatches from the "Windy City" telling how the annual conferences of the northern church are voting almost unanimously for "the plan." This is done evidently to influence the voting in the southern annual conferences. From the same quarter was issued recently a vicious attack upon Bishop Candler because he allowed the vote to be taken openly by yeas and nays in the Baltimore conference, which conference rejected the plan on March 25, 1925.

But the bulletins issued from Chicago are not having the effect intended by the propagandists who send them out. They are having the contrary effect. Southern Methodists resent such unseemly and ill-disguised efforts to influence their voting. The attempt to discredit their senior bishop meets with especial disapprobation by both those in the southern church who favor the plan of unification and by those who oppose it.

Of course the annual conferences of the northern church are voting almost unanimously for the adoption of the plan; for by its adoption the northern church would lose nothing and gain much, while the southern church would lose much and gain nothing.

But the plan will not be adopted by the southern church. Many of the most ardent advocates of it are admitting privately that it is hopelessly defeated already. Others seem to be whistling to keep their courage up; but they are whistling a cemetery tune.

Jewish Alliance Plan Observance Of "Health Week"

"Health week" will be observed with a special program consisting of the showing of two films, "Working for Bear Life" and "One Sear or Many," and other features, at 8 o'clock Sunday night at the Jewish Educational alliance. Films will be exhibited through courtesy of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

Children of various clubs of the alliance will present a play and participate in a May-pole dance.

Dr. Joseph Yampolsky will be principal speaker, his address to be accompanied by lantern slides.

EPISCOPAL COUNCIL OPENS HERE TUESDAY

The eighteenth annual council of the Episcopal Diocese of Atlanta will meet in St. Philip's Cathedral, Atlanta, on May 13-14. Together with the council will meet the Woman's Auxiliary in annual session on May 12-13 and on May 12 also the church workers from the diocese will hold a conference.

The council will open with a service at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, May 13 in the Cathedral, at which will be observed the sixteen hundredth anniversary of the council of Nicea, A. D. 325-A. D. 1925.

From the Christian point of view it was at this council, at Nicea, in 325 A. D. that the religion of Christianity faced its supreme crisis.

The creed drawn up at Nicea was substantially, although not literally, our present Nicene creed: The latter portion of the present creed was added by later councils to meet the further heresies which arose in that speculative age.

The commemoration of this council is being observed by the Episcopal church throughout the United States and Bishop Mikell will offer special prayers at the opening of the diocesan council relating to the council of Nicea.

At this service Wednesday the bishop will make his annual address to assembled delegates and, at 11:30 o'clock the council will be organized and be in session throughout the day. At 5 o'clock delegates will be received by Bishop and Mrs. Mikell at the bishop's house on Peachtree Circle, and in the evening at 8, another public service will be held at the Cathedral at which addresses will be made by the Rev. F. H. Harding, chairman of the diocesan field department on "The Nation-Wide Campaign;" the Rev. N. R. High Moor, rector of St Luke's church, Atlanta, on "The Task of the Church," and the Rev. A. G. Richards, rector of Emanuel church, Athens, on "What Shall the Bargain Be."

On Thursday the council will meet in all day session, adjourning at its close.

The Woman's Auxiliary meets in convention on May 12-13, opening with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 o'clock with the bishop as celebrant. The executive session, which will follow a "quiet hour" conducted by the bishop at 9:30 o'clock, opens with an address of welcome by Mrs. E. C. Crichton, of St. Philip's Cathedral. The response will be made by Mrs. R. P. Shapard, of Griffin. Following this, the president, Miss Lucinda Snook, of Atlanta, will make her report, followed by the secretary's report by Mrs Henry W. Davis. The treasurer, Mrs. H. N. Hurt, of Atlanta then will report after which Mrs. Frank Noble, of Columbus will report on missionary and religious education in the diocese. In the afternoon various reports will be read including one on the Provincial Synod by Mrs. Charles L. Pettigrew, of Atlanta. There also will be a business session on May 13 at which addresses will be made by Mrs. Frank C. Pogue and Miss Rosa Woodberry, both of Atlanta.

The annual conference of church school workers will meet on May 12 with Miss Katherine Smith of Macon, educational secretary of the diocese, presiding. Leaders at this conference include the Rev. Homer W. Starr, Ph. D., rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, Charleston, S. C., the Rev. O. J. Hart, of Macon and the Rev. Charles B. Scovil of Concord, N. C. Dr. Starr and Mr. Scovil also will be the speakers at the evening service at 8 o'clock. The former will deliver an address on "The Challenge of Religious Education to the Church of Today" and the latter, "Religious Education in Small and Rural Places." At this service the honor certificates for 1924 will be awarded to church schools throughout the diocese by the bishop. These certificates are given as rewards for standard of excellence in Sunday school work.

Prominent Atlantans Attend Ad Club Meet At Houston, Texas

Among the prominent Atlantans attending the twenty-first annual convention of the Associated Advertising clubs of the world, which convened in Houston, Texas, Saturday for a five-day session are: W. J. Davis, of the Atlanta Title and Trust company; E. O. Kellum, secretary and treasurer of the Atlanta Advertising clubs; J. C. Harris, Jr., Lloyd P. Lazenby, Bruce Hall of the Southern Ruralist, and others.

The convention is expected to be one of the greatest ever held by the organization and will be attended by several thousand delegates from all over the world, it is said.

Among the important discussions expected to be brought up is "better relationship between North and South America," and others.

Yaarab Temple Plans Business Meeting To Discuss New Home

Preliminary to the ceremonial session to be held by Yaarab Temple on Wednesday, May 20, a business meeting will be held in the Lyric theater at 8 o'clock, Monday night, May 18, at which time candidates for the ceremonial will be elected and Potentate Charles A. Bowen will ask the temple to give him authority to appoint a ways and means committee for the building of Yaarab Temple's long-contemplated Mosque.

Yaarab Temple's chanters will open the business session with a special concert. Out-of-town nobles are especially invited to be present at the session that will be the most important ever held by Yaarab Temple. The Mosque site at Peachtree and Kimball streets is free of all debt, and tentative plans under consideration contemplate an auditorium that will seat 10,000, with adequate quarters for all of the organizations, recorder's office, dance hall, banquet room and space for Shrine paraphernalia, making it not only adequate for all needs of the temple but an up-to-date auditorium for grand opera and other large assemblies.

Applications for admission at the ceremonial must be in the possession of Recorder Argard by high twelve on Monday, May 11, accompanied by a check for $112.

BUTLER STREET "Y" PLANS MOTHERS' MEET

Mother's Day will be observed at the Butler street branch of the Y. M. C. A Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock with an address to the boys of the city by the principal of the Yonge Street school.

This meeting will be held in the assembly room.

The campaign committee on renewals and new members has set as the date of the campaign May 14 to 24 and the goal set is 500 new members. There will be two divisions known as the "Americans" and "Nationals."

Charming Artists To Appear On Potter-Spiker Program

Lucy Mower and Frederica Patterson, two talented dancers of the Potter-Spiker school, who will appear in a benefit program for the Tallulah Falls Industrial school.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees of the Tallulah school, has given her endorsement to the Potter-Spiker entertainment and for the performance to be given next Wednesday by the Potter-Spiker Players at the Woman's club auditorium reveals an elaborate arrangement of dancing and pantomime features.

The program includes 23 separate numbers, many of which will be presented for the first time before any audience, making it a matter of special interest by reason of the recognized standing of the Potter-Spiker school, headed by Mrs. William Claer Spiker.

The performance is the first appearance before the general public of the Potter-Spiker Players, previous appearances having been before audiences selected by invitation only, and the forthcoming presentation is given for the benefit of the Tallulah Industrial school, which is maintained for mountain girls and boys of north Georgia by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Leading Women Interested.

is working to make the occasion an outstanding success. Mrs. Willard C. Petterson is general chairman, while Mrs. G. H. Brandon is in charge of decorations, and Mrs. Arthur Hazzard will be in charge of the sale of tickets at the box office on Wednesday night.

Tickets will be on sale all this week at the Cable Piano company, 84 North Broad street, and all who wish to witness the beautiful program which has been arranged are advised to secure their seats in advance, as indications point to a capacity house.

Mrs. R. K. Rambo will be in charge of the ticket sale at the Cable Piano company on Monday, opening at 9 o'clock and continuing all day. Mrs. William Percy will have charge on Tuesday and Mrs. W. L. Inglis on Wednesday.

Mrs. Pierpont Spiker is musical director for the Potter-Spiker Players and will be assisted on Wednesday night by Harry Pomar, violinist, and Mr. Cappelli, flutist.

Mrs. Spiker has worked for many months arranging and perfecting the music for this program and has taken the original compositions and carefully set them to the dance rhythm, selecting and choosing ever with the idea of presenting the most beautiful and artistic combination and the music of sound and the music of motion, which is the dance.

Widely Known Woman.

Mrs. Spiker is a distinguished musician, a graduate of the American Conservatory of music at Chicago, former soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra, winner of several gold medals and winner of the Chicago Symphony scholarship. Her father is Charles J. Rupprecht, a famous organist, member of the N. A. O., and a close friend of Charles J. Sheldon, Jr., Atlanta city organist.

Some of the most difficult undertakings faced by Mrs. Spiker in arranging the music for this program included the rearranging the famous "Dawes Melody," written by the vice president and the difficult work of arranging the ultra-modern music of Charles Griffes for the sensational "White Peacock" number, to be danced by Gertrude Kelly.

It is said of the pupils of Mrs. William Claer Spiker, scores of whom are famous figures on Broadway, that they produce "visible music," and do not ask that the accompanist fit the music to their dance. Dancing constantly to the music as it is played, Mrs. Pierpont Spiker stated last week that she had found that she could play the accompaniment for these dances just as her mood at the moment dictated, and that girls dancing would enter into that mood, regardless of how different it might be from the last time they performed that particular number.

Spectacular Stage Effects.

Dr. Malcoln Turner, one of the best-known figures in stage lighting circles in the south, has given his services in creating the lighting features for this production. Dr. Turner is famous for the many beautiful electrical effects he has worked out for the various rites of Masonry. He stated last week that never had he seen a program that lent itself so well to original and effective lighting developments as this, however.

Many of the numbers to be danced are new to the stage and some are the result of several years of constant work on the part of their performers and of Mrs. Spiker.

Young ladies who will appear in the various dance numbers represent some of the most prominent families in Atlanta and the occasion on Wednesday night is expected to prove one of the most artistic and brilliant in every respect, both in regard to the production itself and to the audience which will fill the auditorium at the Woman's club.

Catholic Knights Stage Impressive Ceremonies Today

Local members of the Knights of Columbus have perfected plans for an extraordinary day Sunday in the performance of impressive ceremonials. Members, together with visitors, will assemble at the council chamber on East Pine street, at 10:30 o'clock, and march to Sacred Heart church, where mass will be celebrated at 11 o'clock. A sermon will be delivered during the mass by one of the Marist fathers.

At 1 o'clock the three degrees of knighthood will be exemplified to a class of 118 candidates. After the conclusion of these exercises entertainment features have been provided for the members and visitors. The program will conclude with a banquet at the Ansley hotel.

The state council will convene Monday at 10 o'clock and those state officers and delegates who reach Atlanta in time will be guests at the banquet tonight.

The following committee will assist in receiving and entertaining the visitors: Al Doonan, chairman; Felix DeGolian, J. J. McTiernan, Dr. Leo Daly, John G. Harrison, J. A. LaHatte, J. M. Matthison.

NEW BOND COMPANY OPENS ATLANTA OFFICE

Of special importance to financial interests of Atlanta and Georgia is the announcement of the opening of the new Georgia Bond Sales company at 1008-9-10-11 Atlanta Trust company building, handling the newly issued bonds of the Georgia Bond Mortgage company, an Atlanta financial concern of wide repute.

Officials of the Georgia Bond Sales company are prominent figures in the financial and bond field of the south.

W. A. Higgins, president of the selling company, was formerly deputy insurance commissioner of Georgia and consulting actuary for one of the largest insurance firms in the United States. He is also the originator of the legal reserve feature now in use by several insurance companies and a feature of the new bond which is being sold by his organization.

John J. Roberts, vice president and general sales manager of the new firm, is widely known in the bond field and W. F. Lucas, director and district sales manager, has been associated with Mr. Roberts in the bond sales business for several years as has John W. Bobbitt, director of the new firm. Julian Chambers, prominent Atlanta attorney and capitalist, is the other director and counsel for the Georgia Bond Sales company.

Approximately 25 salesmen will take the road for the new firm on Monday under the direction of Mr. Lucas and Mr. Roberts and plans have been made to expand their field to embrace nearly every state in the union, within the next year.

The Atlanta Trust company will act as trustees for the first mortgages which secure the bonds.

Officers of the Georgia Bond Mortgage company, which is issuing the new bonds are among the best known capitalists of the state, having played a prominent part in certain insurance and financial concerns in the past.

VICTOR RECORDS FEATURE SISTERS ON NEW RELEASES

The Brox girls admit to a back ground of blue harmony that it's an awful thing to fall in love. "Who" by them on a Victor Record this week retails some of the reasons. "Tokio Blues" on the other side has some unusual three-part harmony.

"Florida" by the International Novelty Orchestra is a stately number with cool tone colors and a home-and-roam vocal refrain. It shares a Victor record with "Mr. Neenyah," a barbaric sort of fox trot.

George Olsen and his music make a dance record of "Those Panama Mamas" for Victor this week, which is paired off with "Oh That Sweet in Suite 16," a very lively companion by Charles Dornberger and his orchestra.

For waltzes the Troubadours contribute "The Love Song You Will Forget," a melodious piece with plenty of string tone. "Take Me Back to Your Heart" by Dan Gregory's orchestra is sentimental.

Free License Tags For Federal Agents Refused by State

There is no law in Georgia which permits the giving of motor license plates to the federal government without charge, according to a letter written to Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon by S. Guyt McLendon, secretary of state for Georgia. This was in reply to a letter from Secretary Mellon, addressed to the governor, asking the state to furnish license plates for use on cars operated by federal enforcement officers its war against liquor runners on the highways of the state. The governor referred the matter to Secretary McLendon, inasmuch as his department handles the sales of automobile license tags.

Mr. McLendon, in his reply, suggests that provision for these free license plates to the United States officers might be secured from the legislature at its session which convenes in June, particularly in view of the fact that many of the state highway have been constructed with federal aid funds.

He also referred to an opinion made by Governor Walker when he was attorney general, holding that the state could not furnish free licenses to the postoffice department for use on mail trucks, but states that enforcement of this law is in the hands of sheriffs of counties and, more recently, the revenue department of the state. Mail trucks have continued to operate without license since the decision referred to, and neither the state nor the federal authorities have pressed the question.

Whether or not the law enforcement department of the federal government will attempt to operate its cars without licenses is not known. Mr. Mellon in his letter explained that license plates were desired so that there might be nothing to distinguish these cars from ordinary automobiles, and thus "tip off" the rum runners. Mr. McLendon, in his reply, states that he feels, whatever arrangement is made, there ought to be some distinguishing mark where the license tags are not secured and paid for in the regular manner.

FLORIDA LAND SALE BRISK, SAYS ADAMS

Harry Adams and J. D. Rosenthal, who have just opened an office in Atlanta and launched a sale of a large tracet of Florida land, which has been divided into lots, reported Saturday that results far exceeded their most sanguine expectations.

The office at 130 Peachtree street is elaborately decorated with palms, flowers, fountain and many other details suggesting Florida. There are live alligators on display in the fountain, and a special attraction Saturday was music and dancing by the Georgettes, a well-known jazz orchestra.

The lots which are on sale, according to Mr. Adams, are located in Hernando county, Florida, four and one-half miles from Brooksville.

The sale will continue in Atlanta until the entire property has been sold.

"The interest already manifested in our sale here," said Mr. Adams, "proves to us conclusively that Atlanta people are interested in Florida and are willing to invest where values are known to be increasing daily.

"Florida real estate has made phenomenal advances in the last year or two and will continue to advance. The lots which we are offering are ideal for home sites. They are situated in Hernando, the tangerine county, where there also is fine fishing. The extraordinary low price at which we are offering this property gives every one an opportunity to buy in Florida, and I believe we will sell the entire tract within a few days."

Dry Navy Blockade Causes Rum Fleet To Begin Break-Up

Several of Largest Vessels in Whisky Armada Pull Up Anchors Off New York and Depart.

HARDY RUM BOAT JETTISONS CARGO

Two of Dry Navy Craft Are Disabled—Sabotage by 'Wet' Enemies Is Believed Responsible.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, May 9.—Wireless reports from the rum row blockade zone to Captain W. V. E. Jacobs, commandant of the coast guard at New York, today told of signs of the disintegration of the whisky armada that has been off the mid-Atlantic coast on and off since the prohibition law went into effect.

Captain Jacobs said no details had been given in the messages, which were sent from the cutter Mojave, "flagship" of the blockade dry navy. The messages coincided with reports received at the New York dry fleet headquarters, stating that several of the largest vessels had pulled up their anchors and departed because of their enforced holiday since the blockade went into effect last Tuesday.

Dry Fleet Follows Craft.

Patrols and converted submarine chasers of the dry fleet bobbed along through the fog after the departing craft, to make sure they moved seaward, and not merely to new positions on the row. It was not known where the contraband carriers were bound.

With the arrival of the fog—the blockade up to today was conducted with all conditions favoring the government forces—the guardsmen increased their forces. A dozen patrols and a few more chasers, some of them with new engines capable of 35 knots an hour, went out to the blockade zone.

Fails To Land Liquor.

The rum runners were expected to take advantage of the swirling mists to seek to land some of their liquor for the week-end trade of the great white way, along which appalling aridity has been reported in the past few days. One of the shore-to-row runners made a try at it today, but failed. The rum runner got to one of the guarded whisky carriers in some manner and started for shore with 100 cases of the contraband. But a vigilant government boat's crew sighted it and gave chase, firing as it pursued. The fleeing rum boat jettisoned its cargo to increase its speed, and made its escape. But the government men said it took no liquor ashore with it.

Coast guard officials said they were convinced sabotage methods were being utilized by their wet enemies.

Two Dry Boats Disabled.

Two of the 12 dry navy boats which returned to the Staten Island base today had been rendered virtually useless by mechanical trouble. One's engine was disabled, while the second had lost a propellor. Guardsmen said they were convinced the bootleggers had either bribed hitherto trustworthy mechanics in the government employ to make inferior repairs, or had placed some of their men in the government service.

Captain Jacobs, admitting that he and other coast guard officers had received threats of violence and death, said that bootleggers also had threatened to bomb the barge office.

WAR TO BE EXTENDED INTO NEW SECTIONS.

Washington, May 9.—The coast guard's war on rum smuggling has been extended to new sections. The New York blockade probably will be kept up all summer, with the full force of coast guard destroyers now patrolling the 3,000 square miles of sea off the New York-New Jersey-Long Island coast.

With that vital area under control, the war on rum pirates will be turned to the waters around Boston, Delaware Bay and Chesapeake Bay. It is anticipated that rum smugglers, driven from the New York sector, will divert their cargoes to one or the other of these points of entry.

Big Fleet Building.

On this work the coast guard will put its new units as fast as they become available. There is a $12,000,000 fleet building, and as fast as vessels are ready for service, they will be put on patrol duty in these various districts.

While the dangers of rum running are now greater than ever before, the profits likewise are greater, so that the inducement to take chances is stronger than ever. Hence the coast guard fully expects rum smugglers to scatter to remote points in an effort to land their wares. Liquor prices have doubled in many eastern cities during the last week because of the New York campaign.

The rum launch Eloise, with 300 cases of whisky aboard, has been captured off the Virginia coast by the coast guard cutter Mascoutin. This liquor probably was to have been marketed in Washington or Baltimore.

Mass Attack Futile.

Outside of the New York area, mass attack is futile. Except around those thickly populated waters, the business of rum smuggling is carried on in remote and lonely spots, in tiny inlets heavily obscured by underbrush, and at points a great distance from the ports or centers of population.

Liquor thus brought ashore is transported by motor car for 50 miles or more to the big city markets.

So that the combat in these districts, of necessity, will return to the guerilla warfare tactics which raged

BETTER HOMES OPEN OFFICIALLY THIS AFTERNOON

Elaborate Programs To Feature Opening of Atlanta's Greatest Better Homes Display.

Atlanta's three Better Homes will be officially opened Sunday with appropriate religious ceremonies. Homes one and three were built for the committee by plans adapted to local conditions and Home number two is an apartment remodeled under the supervision of the committee. Everything is complete for demonstrations of perfect home conditions in various sections of the city. An almost continuous program will be presented throughout the week and the houses will be open from 2 to 10 o'clock each day. Demonstrations will also be carried on at the Junior high schools, and at a practice apartment in the Girls' high school and at Spellman college. Radio programs will be presented each day and special programs have been arranged at the moving picture theaters.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the city Federation of Women's Clubs and official hostess of Better Homes week, will be in charge of the religious dedication at Home number one today.

Home Number One.

The program at Home number one at 3 o'clock today will be as follows: Community singing, led by Mrs. Helen Knox Spain; invocation, presentation of key to the home to Mayor Walter Sims by Mrs. Newton C. Wing, general chairman, Better Homes Week; welcome by Mayor Sims; solo, 'Mother O'Mine," by Byron Warner; community singing; Dr. Plato Durham will speak on "Spirituality in the Home;" Miss Edith Moore, soprano, Edwin Colwell, tenor, Mrs. J. O. Sanders, violinist, Miss Ruth Hinman, pianist, Mrs. Paul E. Bryan, pianist, will also participate in the program.

At House No. 3 at 4 o'clock there will be: Music by negro musicians; invocation, address, "Mother's Day," address, "Value of Better Homes;" presentation of key; inspection.

5 O'Clock Program.

At Home No. 2 at 5 o'clock, the following features will mark the opening day: Prayer by Rev. Andreas, Greek minister; hymn, "America," by assembly; solo by Mrs. J. L. Richmond; address by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson; presentation of key to Mayor Sims by Mrs. Newton C. Wing; address, "Flag-raising," by Mrs. J. L. Mellichamp; recitation, "Your Flag and My Flag," by Julius Perlinski, pupil Williams Street school.

Fifth District day will be observed on Monday by Mrs. F. C. Rice, general chairman, assisted by the better homes chairmen from Fifth district clubs.

The program will be as follows: Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president Fifth district woman's clubs, will speak on "The Woman's Viewpoint;" music by Boys' High School orchestra, G. W. Watters, director; demonstration, bedmaking, pupils of the Commercial High school under the direction of Miss Clara Lee Cone.

At 8:45 o'clock Mrs. Mary Griffith Boggs will present the following pupils of the Griffin School of Music: Miss Mary Minge, harpist; Miss Kethea Paxton, harpist; Miss Elizabeth

STABBED 3 TIMES, MAN NEAR DEATH

Jack Lewis, Now in Grady Hospital—Accuses D. C. Floyd, Charging Robbery Attempt.

With three stab wounds said to have been inflicted by D. C. Floyd, Jack Lewis, 55 years old, of 144 King street, Saturday night lay in Grady hospital in a critical condition as the result of an altercation on South Pryor street a half mile south of Ridge avenue.

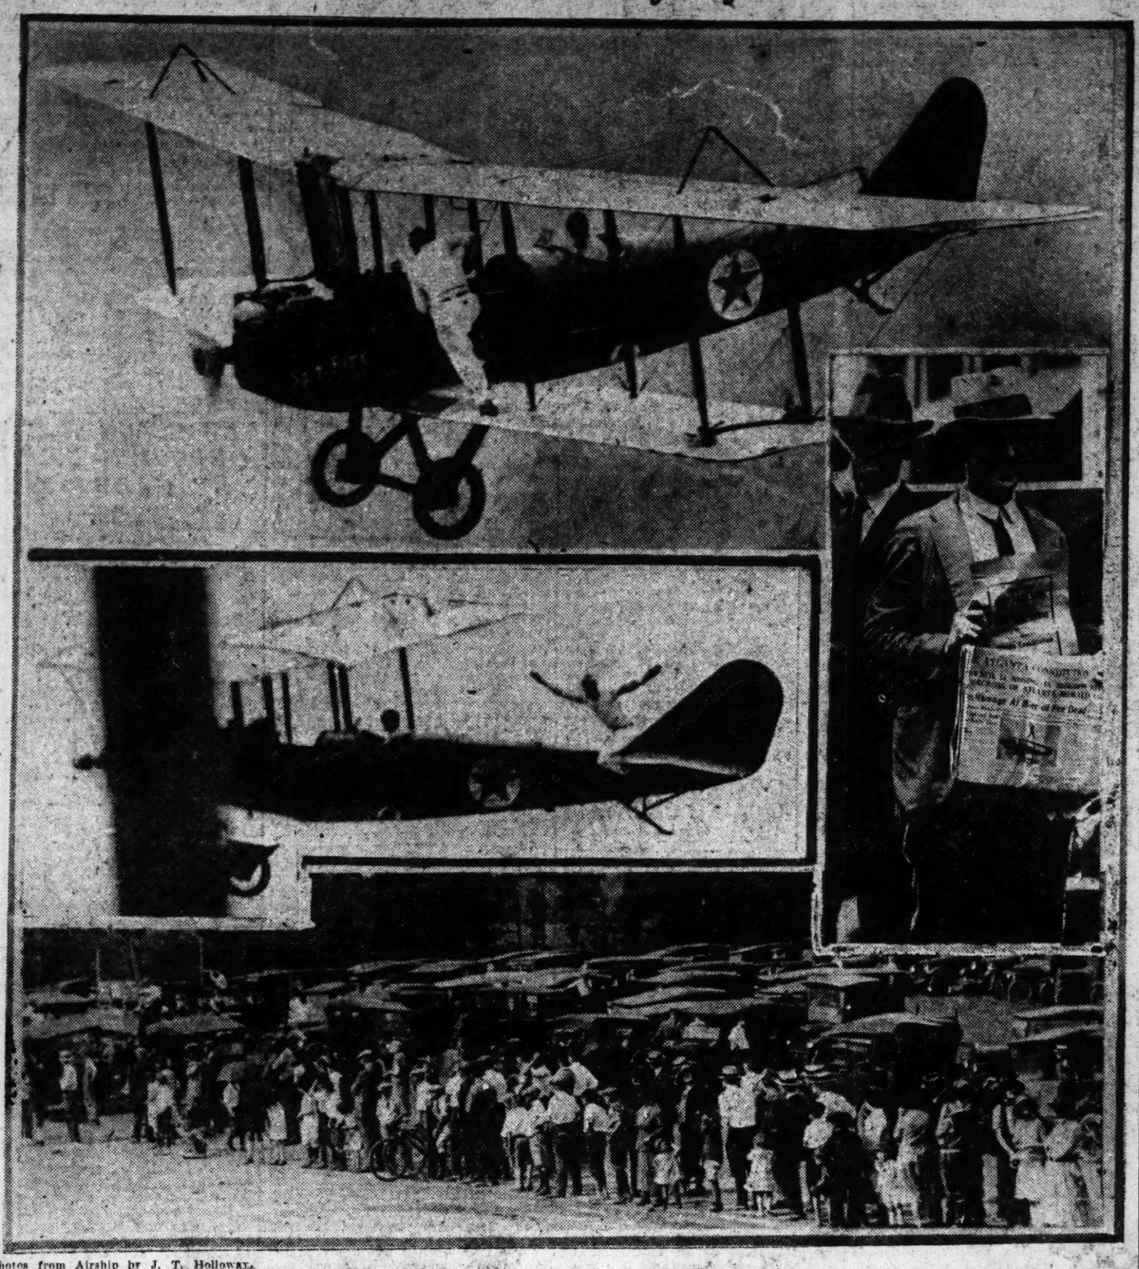

Lewis, according to Call Officers W. A. Chewning and George B. Lee, accused Floyd of stabbing him in a robbery attempt.

Surgeons at Grady hospital expressed the fear that one of the stab wounds, entering the abdomen, had penetrated the intestines. Floyd also was wounded in the right leg and left arm.

The stabbing was reported to Officer Chewning over the telephone by a Mr. Adderholt, who passed the injured man in an automobile and stopped to render assistance. Mr. Adderholt stopped C. L. Garrison, 188 Peachtree street, who carried Lewis to the hospital.

The case was turned over to the city detectives and a city-wide search is being conducted for Floyd, who, according to Lewis, also resides at 144 King street.

Great Throng Held Spellbound by Aviation Thrills; New Sensations Offered Today by Constitution Show

The big crowd which attended The Constitution's air circus staged by the Gates fliers Saturday afternoon at Tuggle field, Decatur, was thrilled by dare-devil stunts such as are pictured above. In the upper picture one of the fliers is shown walking the wing of a plane in full flight far above the gaping throng. At left-center, another flier is sitting in devil-may-care fashion on the tail of a speeding plane at a dizzy height. At right-center is J. W. Burbitt, of 101 Oglethorpe avenue, one of five people who drew free aerial rides when he was lucky enough to recover a lucky one out of 50 copies of The Constitution dropped on Marietta street at noon Saturday. Below, a section of the big crowd that packed the Tuggle bowl and watched the hair-raising antics of the birdmen far above.

Arrangements Are Made for Accommodating Even Greater Crowd Than Was Present Saturday.

While more than 3,000 spell-bound people looked on in amazement, airplane pilots and death-defying daredevils of the Gates Flying circus, brought to Atlanta by The Constitution, Saturday opened a three day aerial meet with a demonstration of some of the wonders that can be accomplished in the air.

The first day's performance of the circus, which is being held at Tuggle field, Decatur, was attended by a crowd of avidtion enthusiasts that completely surrounded the entire field. Every available space was filled by automobiles, and following the show, work was immediately started for arrangements to take care of the immense throng expected today.

Many Thrills Offered.

The circus was everything that had been previously advertised, and a little more on top of that. The star pilots did innumerable and most indescribable loops and turns in a nonchalant fashion that left the audience gasping.

The wing-walking and acrobatics, done at an altitude of about 800 feet, of course, climaxed the show, but there never was a quiet moment from the time the "ships" first took off until the final plane had come to earth and been rolled into the hangar several hours later.

While Saturday's show furnished one spectacle after another, a number of special features have been reserved for today, and those planning to attend this afternoon can rest assured that they will see a fine performance by what is admittedly the greatest group of aerial performers in the country.

Shows Starts at 2:30 Today.

Today's show will start promptly at 2:30 o'clock, weather permitting. On the program, in addition to Saturday's stunts, will be a plane change by Dinvalo Krantz, king of the acrobats of the air, in which he changes from one plane to another by means of a rope ladder while the ships are speeding over the field at a rate of 75 miles per hour.

Pilot Clyde Pangborn, the first man to fly his ship upside down, will show the populace just how it is done, and there will be several other thrillers.

Five Atlantans will be taken for free rides today, and another five will be given flights on the closing day of the circus, Monday. At noon today 25 copies of The Constitution will be dropped from the air at Five Points and five of the papers will contain tickets for free rides. On Monday the same number of papers also, with five containing free tickets, will be dropped over Grant Park.

Papers containing tickets were dropped on Marietta street Saturday morning between the Grady monument and the Federal Reserve bank, and as a result five people lined up

Today For Nation's Mothers

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

In pulpits of Atlanta, behind prison walls, on the streets and highways mother will be honored today. White carnations for mother will blossom everywhere and all people will mingle to pay tribute to the mothers of the land on Mother's Day. It is a day set aside by a nation to honor mothers and in no city will it be more lovingly observed than in Atlanta. White carnations for those mothers who have passed on—and red for the living.

Special programs in churches of all denominations will be given, Sunday schools will hold Mother's Day services, and on every street carnations will wave and mails and telegraph will carry loving messages to mothers in distant places. All Atlanta will join in making today the greatest Mother's Day. The citizenship of the south's greatest city will join hands in sweetest ceremonies of the year.

No words, no ceremonies, no deeds can pay the full measure of tribute that mother deserves. Poets may sing their melodious lays, the lute may yield its softest chords, the painter may use his greatest touch, but no human hand can touch a chord of sweeter sentiment than the sentiment of love of mother that beats in even the lowliest breasts.

Today the prattle of baby lips, the gentle clasp of manly hand, the soft caress of childish fingers, the faltering note of aged voices; the gruff tones of the rugged and the plaintive sigh of the weak will blend in a mighty symphony in tribute to mother. Those in high places and low; the great and the lowly; Dives and Lazarus; the weak and the strong will pause for the well of tears that will come with the ripening touch of memory of mother.

Mother's heart will be full today. Full of happiness for the child she has borne, full of gratitude for the debt of love which she never wants repaid; full of pride that, for mother, the world does not forget; full of content that her sacrifice has not been made in vain; full of exultation at the touch of childish lips.

To those in the radiance of the soft light in mother's eyes it is a day of glory. To those divided by seas and shores from the gentle kindness of mother's face, it is a day of importunate desire for the reunion that is to come. For those whose mothers have gone before it is a day of the sweetest sorrow, blessed only by the consoling memory that the greatest reward of the Almighty is not too great for mother.

Carnations bloom today for mother. The flowers' softest petals are not as pure as the spirit of love the symbol inspires. The flowers' sweetest fragrance is not as delicate as the sentiment that beats in loving breasts for mothers.

This is Atlanta's spirit on Mother's Day. Sons and daughters will honor the living mother. Sons and daughters here will remember mother far away, and sons and daughters silently will choke a sob and shed a tear for the mother who has gone but whose memory burns forever in their hearts.

LOS ANGELES CREW DUE TO REACH HOME POST THIS MORNING

Washington, May 9.—The dirigible Los Angeles was speeding homeward tonight from Porto Rico, latest dispatches saying she would moor at Lakehurst sometime early Sunday. Her commander last reported to the navy department as she ship was flying over Wilmington, N. C.

The message, sent at 7:50 p. m., said: "Flying steadily northward along the east coast, the Los Angeles crew is now eating dinner at Wilmington, N. C., after a breakfast in Miami, and luncheon at Jacksonville.

"Seventy miles an hour has been maintained, but as all large cities were circled, some time has been lost. As it appears that we may not arrive at Lakehurst before dawn, another engine will be cut in.

"Proud southern cities have claimed our attention today. Every one on board has a voracious appetite and the steward is always busy."

JAPAN CELEBRATES 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF RULERS' WEDDING

Tokio, May 10.—All Japan began this morning a three days' celebration of the silver wedding anniversary of the emperor and empress. All banks and offices will be closed tomorrow.

Yohihito, the 122nd emperor of Japan, was married on May 10, 1900, to Sadako, fouth daughter of the late Prince Kujo, a noble of the first rank. Their eldest son, Hirohito, was appointed regent in November, 1921, on account of the illness of the emperor.

GEOLOGISTS TO STUDY ARSENIC ORE DEPOSITS

Washington, May 9.—(Special.)—Senator Harris was informed by the geological survey that two of their geologists will leave Washington May 15 for the southeast to make a study of the arsenic ore deposits in that section.

Senator Harris has called their attention to deposits in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.

SCHOOL ELECTION CENTERS INTEREST

Proposed Amendment To Limit Nominating Power of Superintendent To Cause Battle.

With several important matters slated for action, including election of assistant superintendents, managers, clerks and new teachers for the ensuing year, Tuesday's meeting of the board of education threatens to be one of the hottest in years, and several clashes are in prospect.

Probably the only thing in which the board will be unanimous Tuesday is in an expression of thanks to the mayor and general council for having provided $250,000 with which to build a new unit for Hoke Smith Junior High school, and to make up a deficit in November payrolls.

Sims Notifies Board.

Mayor Walter A. Sims, in a letter written Saturday, notified members of the board, that they may proceed at once to award contracts for the new building, and it is probable that an architect will be engaged at Tuesday's meeting, and bids on the building advertised for this week.

According to the mayor's plan, the money will not be borrowed from the banks, but will be carried over until next year as a deficit, and will be made up out of general revenues in 1926. Of the amount, $150,000 will be used for the Hoke Smith school, and the other $100,000 to make up the salary deficit.

With the $250,000 voted by city council, the board finds itself in better shape financially than at any time this year. With sufficient funds to meet payrolls, members of the board are confident that the department can operate throughout the year without additional assistance from council.

Rule Change Fought.

A hard fight is expected on a proposed amendment to the rules, which, if passed, would take power to nominate assistant superintendents, managers and clerks out of the hands of the superintendent, and make them nominated by the board.

The change was proposed at the April meeting by Oscar Mills, and under the rules, must lie on the table until the next regular meeting before being acted on.

The Parent-Teacher council has protested the proposal, and its defeat is expected, although a close vote appears certain. Mr. Mills stated last week that he will urge passage of the amendment.

Such a change would be of particular importance at this time as all officials of the school department for next year, with exception of the

Senator George Discusses Evils Of 'Short Term'

Agrees That Filibuster Evil Should Be Curbed and That Action of Some Kind Is Needed.

SAYS "SHORT TERM" CAUSE OF TROUBLE

Best Remedy Is in Constitutional Amendment, Changing Date Meeting of Congress.

Hon. Walter F. George, United States senator from Georgia, who has been in Atlanta for the past few days, in an interview with The Constitution discussed the issue raised by Vice President Dawes in the matter of the revision of the senate rules.

He takes the position that while it is necessary that something be done to prevent the stifling of legislation by a small minority, the method proposed by the vice president will not produce the desired result, which, in the opinion of Senator George, can be reached best by the direct method proposed by the senate at its last session, and on which action was not taken by the house.

In the opinion of Senator George the end sought by the vice president could very promptly be obtained by the adoption of the constiutional amendment passed by the last senate, providing for the assembling of congress from January following the national congressional elections in November instead of waiting, as now, for congress to meet 13 months after its election.

Senator George's Views.

Warming up to the subject and discussing it most interestingly, Senator George, who will be a member of the ways and means committee of the next senate and who has gone to the front as one of the democratic leaders of the senate, said:

"I am not one of those who resent the position taken by Vice President Dawes, whom I hold in very high personal esteem, and who I am sure is actuated by patriotic motives in the position he takes regarding a revision of the senate rules so as to prevent the obstruction of legislation by a few who by filibuster methods can prevent a vote on any question.

"That remedial action of some kind is necessary I agree with the vice president but I do not think the end he desires can be reached by revision of the senate rules.

"Under the present rules of the senate it would be a very simple matter to defeat filibustering by a few senators, were it not for the fact that the congress which assembles in alternate years is limited to a short term beginning the first Monday in December and ending on the following 4th of March. With that constitutional limitation it makes no difference what the rules of the senate may be for a few men can talk any measure to death.

"Relief can be obtained only by an amendment to the federal constitution which in effect would do away with the short term which is at the bottom of all this filibustering trouble.

"As the matter stands now a new house of representatives and a one-third of the senate is elected in November in alternate years.

"Whatever may be the issue on which a congress is elected it is impossible for those chosen in these elections to give expression to the voice of their constituency until thirteen months have elapsed between their election and the convening of the congress in which they are chosen to serve.

The Thirteen Months Interim.

"For instance, the congress elected November, 1924, will not, unless called in an extra session by the president, assemble until December, 1925.

"In the meantime the old congress still sits in short session from December, 1924, to March, 1925, and in that congress there are many members who were defeated on public issues up for solution by congress. Yet these very men continue to vote on measures affecting policies on which they might have been defeated, and the men chosen to succeed them are not permitted to represent their people in the discussion of important legislation proposed on principles involved in which those voting were defeated.

"This is all wrong and it is contrary to the spirit of the democratic government.

"The last session of the senate acted favorably on the constitutional amendment providing that the congress elected in November shall meet the January following.

"Unfortunately the house did not act on the measure, but in my opinion a congress to assemble in December will unquestionably submit this amendment to the people, for it is generally conceded by both democrats and republicans that such an amendment would afford relief, and it would certainly take away from a few men the advantage the short sessions gives to block legislation by the filibuster method.

"The short sessions of congress, constitutionally limited from December to March, in alternate years must pass upon the appropriations and supply measures for the next year. This takes most of the time of the short session, which is limited to less than three months working time. The very fact that the session must be short puts it within the power of a

BIG AERONAUTICAL SHOW IN ATLANTA GIVEN APPROVAL

Project Is Heartily Indorsed and Committee Is Appointed To Make Plans for Exposition.

Resolutions heartily indorsing plans for a great aeronautical exposition to be held in Atlanta next October in conjunction with the Southeastern fair and requesting officials of the Southeastern Fair association to promote such an exposition, were unanimously adopted Saturday night at a dinner-meeting held by the Presidents' Club at the Biltmore hotel. In addition to members of the club, Mayor Walter A. Sims, members of city council, members of the Fulton county board of commissioners, representatives of the U. S. army and navy and other citizens were present and joined in adoption of the resolutions.

Colonel F. J. Paxon, president of the club, and also a member of the Southeastern Fair association, presided and named a committee to make plans for the exposition. This committee is headed by Mayor Sims as honorary chairman, and Victor H. Kriegshaber as chairman, with Councilman William B. Hartsfield as vice chairman. Mr. Paxon and Ivan E. Allen, chairman of the executive committee of the fair association, are honorary members and the balance of the personnel of the committee consists of James A. Hollomon, Frank H. Reynolds, W. E. Saunders, Emmett L. Quinn, Louis Marquardt, Alfred C. Newell, Virlyn B. Moore, W. O. Foote, Clark Howell, Jr., Major John S. Cohen, James B. Nevin, R. E. L. Cone, Hugh Richardson, Jr., F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, John Paschall, Jerome Jones, John K. Ottley, B. S. Barker, H. A. Maier, Jr., and Louis D. Newton.

Tribute to Firemen.

Prior to the discussion of the question of an aeronautical exposition, for which the meeting had been called, Mr. Wilson-Lawrenson paid a touching tribute to the memory of the six Atlanta firemen who lost their lives in the line of duty, during the week, and to Paul H. Norcross, prominent citizen and former president of the chamber of commerce, who is believed to have lost his life when a government steamer sank on the Mississippi on Friday night.

The tribute paid by Mr. Wilson-Lawrenson was followed by a silent toast, drunk in silence to the memory of the dead by all those present.

Colonel Paxon, in making the introductory remarks in regard to the proposed aviation exposition, referred to the fact that the Presidents' Club is not primarily for the upbuilding of Atlanta, but for all of Georgia, and announced that the club was to hold a meeting at an early date for the encouragement of alfalfa-growing in

Mother of 11 Wins Howard Theater Party

Mrs. M. A. Ledbetter To Attend Constitution Entertainment Monday.

In all parts of Atlanta mothers more than 40 years old are preparing for the big special "Mother's Day" entertainment to be offered at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning at the Howard theater, under auspices of The Constitution and the theater management and keen interest was shown in the contest to discover the Atlanta mother with the largest number of living children, which closed at noon Saturday. Mrs. M. A. Ledbetter, of No. 5 Anniston avenue, Kirkwood, won this contest, reporting 11 children she raised to be grown and married.

Mrs. Ledbetter will be tendered a special party at which with her children who live in Atlanta will be present, and they will enjoy one of the shows which will be operated throughout "Mother's Week" at the Howard. This special program will include several added attractions, staged under the direction of Howard Kingsmore, manager of the Howard theater. Mrs. E. L. Aikens, 105 Greenwood avenue, and Mrs. C. C. Barfield, 94 South Mayson street, tied for second place in the contest, reporting 10 living children each.

Promises to Attend.

"I'll attend The Constitution's Mother's day party, chaperoned by my 35-year-old baby," Mrs. Ledbetter declared when informed that she had won the prize in the contest.

Mrs. Ledbetter has lived in Atlanta more than 15 years, moving here from Columbus. She has three daughter in Atlanta: Mrs. B. B. Jones, 5 Anniston avenue, with whom she lives; Mrs. Beulah Herron, 74 Cleburne avenue, and Mrs. Lulu Nobles, 375 Boulevard DeKalb. They will attend

Georgia Manufacturers Gather for Big Convention

Addresses by C. B. Auel, of Pittsburg, Pa., Lawrence A. Downs, of Savannah, president of the Central of Georgia railway, and other prominent guests, will feature the annual convention Wednesday of the Georgia Manufacturers' Association, at the Atlanta Biltmore.

Judging from acceptances received by Joseph P. McGrath, secretary of the association, indications are that the meeting will be the largest attended meeting held since the inception of the organization in 1915.

The convention will begin at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning with the registration of delegates, and will be called to order at 10 o'clock by Robert Gregg, president.

Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, of the First Presbyterian church, will deliver the invocation, and W. R. C. Smith, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, will deliver the address of welcome. W. J. Vereen, of Moultrie, will make the response.

Reports To Be Heard.

Mr. Gregg will follow the response to the welcome address with the annual report of the president, and A. P. Tripod, of Atlanta, will give the treasurer's report, while J. P. McGrath will give the report of the secretary.

Greetings will be extended to the convention by George S. Harris, of Atlanta, president of the Cotton Manufacturers' association of Georgia. Following addresses by Mr. Auel and Mr. Downs, informal talks will be made by Robert S. Parker, general counsel of the Georgia Manufacturers' association, and W. B. Bauer, chairman of the board.

Reports of nominating, auditing and resolutions committees and election of officers and directors will bring the morning session to a close.

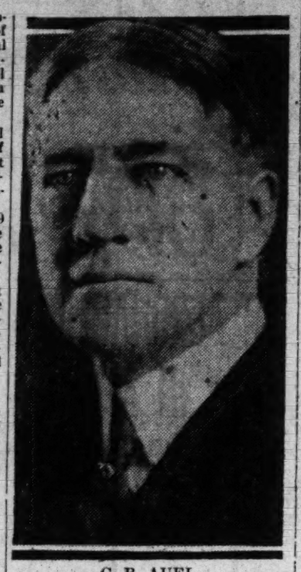

In the afternoon guests are invited to use automobiles placed at their disposal to visit the clubs, take the drives around Atlanta, or such other amusements as they desire.

The annual banquet at 7 o'clock will introduce Eugene R. Black, president, Atlanta Trust company, who will address the association on a topic to be selected. Rabbi David Marx will deliver the invocation at this banquet, which will be presided over by W. B. Baker, as toastmaster.

Auel Widely Known.

Mr. Auel, who will address the morning meeting on "Loss to Industry Through Failure to Safeguard Appliances," is president of the national safety council, and attached to the staff of the vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company who is in charge of engineering and manufacture. He has been with the Westinghouse company since his graduation from Cornell in 1892, both with the Westinghouse Airbrake company in this country and in England, where he spent four years with the British Westinghouse company.

Mr. Auel is an author of note along safety lines and is a contributor to "Management's Handbook," a reference work for executives and those interested in scientific application of safety measures. This work has a wide circulation and is now being published in German, to supply the increased demand for a standard publication bearing on industrial safety.

The speaker is a native of Brooklyn, though now presiding in Pittsburg, and is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the National Electric Light association, as well as numerous clubs in Pittsburg.

Lawrence A. Downs, president of the Central of Georgia Railway company, who will talk on "The Spirit of Cooperation That Should Exist Between the Manufacturer and the Railroads," is a native of Greencastle, Ind., and a graduate of Purdue university, class of '94. He has been with southern railroads almost continuously since he left college with the exception of three years in the engineering department of the Vandalia line. He "won his spurs" with the Illinois Central and his advance from that time has been steady. He is identified most intimately with all that tends for the prosperity of the south, both in educational, agricultural and industrial lines, as well as extensions of facilities. As president of the Ocean Steamship company, he is doing much to advance the interests grounded in Georgia.

ANY WOMAN, any man, can now have a well-developed face and form. The whole, simple secret of a well-developed form is in the number of blood-cells in your body. You can now forget all the theoretical talk about diet, exercise, fad treatments, food-fats and fat-foods. Nothing is of any use, after all, except blood-cells!

Thin, run-down men and women, with bony necks, sunken cheeks, bony shoulders—all these are suffering from one thing—too few blood-cells. Science has proved that S.S.S. helps to make the rich red-blood-cells, which you need. Your blood is starving for these new blood-cells! Give your blood the blood-cells it needs—take S.S.S. the great scientific blood-cell maker. S.S.S. has done marvels, too, in making beautiful complexions, clearing the skin, making lips rosy red, the cheeks full and plump—because it rids the blood of impurities which cause pimples, blackheads, acne, blotches, eczema, tetter, rash and rheumatism, too. As the medicinal ingredients of S.S.S. are purely vegetable, it may be taken with perfect safety. This is why S.S.S., since 1826, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women a plus in their strength. THIRD CONFERENCE AT HAGUE POSSIBLE

Washington, May 9.—Proposals for a third Hague conference to discuss the attitude of the participating nations toward war, with a view to framing a new code of international law, will be advanced for adoption at the International Parliamentary union meeting here October 1.

The belief is strongly entertained in congressional and administration circles, it developed today, that should the nations find they can agree upon a code of international law to be applied by a world court, as the supreme court construes laws of this country, and imposing conditions making war unprofitable by prohibiting the annexation of territory and the imposition of indemnities, the United States would then join a world court without reservation.

Senator McKinley, of Illinois, who saw President Coolidge today on his return from Paris, where he was a member of the executive committee arranging details for the meeting of the union here, made a comparative report and predicted an attendance of approximately 200 delegates from the old world, with liberal repesentations from the Latin-American nations and about 25 delegates from Canada to whom special invitations were sent by Secretary Kellogg.

Senator McKinley reported that European statesmen had abandoned all expectation of the United States joining the league of nations. Among European nations, this government is recognized as the most powerful nation in the world, he stated, and all are anxious to obtain its moral support. They want the United States in some kind of a world court, he added, and if this country is opposed to the machinery now provided, the present member nations will be found willing, he predicted, to change it.

RAILWAY SURGEONS TO MEET IN ATLANTA

The Railway Surgeons' Association of Georgia will hold its annual convention at the Biltmore hotel, beginning at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, and merging Wednesday, Thursday and Friday with the Georgia Medical association which meets at the same time and place, it is announced today by the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau.

The sessions will be presided over by Dr. Cleveland Thompson, Millen, Ga. Dr. Theodore Toepel, of Atlanta, will deliver the address of welcome, and the response will be made by Dr. Harry M. Michel, of Augusta. Dr. J. C. Elrod, president of the Medical association of Georgia; Dr. Edward T. Newell, president of the Southern States association of Railway surgeons, and Dr. Duncan Eve, chief surgeon of the N. C. & St. L. and L. & N. railways, Nashville, will address the morning session Tuesday.

Papers are to be read by the following surgeons: Dr. Richard Binion, of Milledgeville; Dr. W. C. McGeary, Madison; Dr. H. N. Page, Augusta. Dr. Dan Elkins, Atlanta and Dr. W. C. Folks, Waycross, Dr. E. E. Murphey, Augusta, Dr. J. M. Poer, West Point.

Chief surgeons of all the railroads entering Atlanta will be in attendance at the convention, it is stated.

Officers of the association are: Dr. Cleveland Thompson, Millen, president; Dr. Jabez Jones, Savannah, first vice president; Dr. M. M. Stowe, Jesup, second vice president; Dr. W. K. Smith, Pembroke, third vice president; Dr. J. W. Palmer, Ailey, secretary-treasurer.

The local committee on arrangements is composed of Dr. Hugh M. Lokey, chairman; Drs. Willis Jones, A. G. Fort, F. P. Calhoun, Frank L. Eskridge, T. H. Hancock, George W. Fuller, W. S. Goldsmith, J. R. Barfield, A. W. Sterling, J. R. Childs, Carlton A. Lee, W. C. Jarnigan, D. S. Elkin, T. F. Abercrombie, C. W. Hunter, Charles R. Hancock, W. A. Arnold, Dr. J. R. Garner and Dr. W. S. Elkin.

SMOKE NUISANCE MEETING WILL BE HELD ON MAY 26

As the first step in an extensive educational campaign to bring the importance of smoke abatement and means of combating the smoke nuisance, before the people of Atlanta, the Atlanta Smoke Abatement league has called a meeting for May 26, to which representatives of all civic organizations have been invited.

In letters written each organization, Mrs. Edward Hardaway Smith, secretary of the league, has urged that committees be appointed to cooperate with the league in the campaign. The meeting will be held at the Chamber of Commerce building.

MRS. BESSIE M. TATE TO REST IN WEST VIEW

Funeral services for Mrs. Bessie M. Tate, 51, prominent Atlanta woman and church worker, who died Friday night at a private hospital, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from Gordon Avenue Baptist church, Rev. W. H. Faust, officiating. Interment will be in West View cemetery.

Mrs. Tate was the widow of the late Rev. C. T. J. Tate, former pastor of the Gordon Street Baptist church, who died about one year ago. Mrs. Tate came to Atlanta from Roanoke, Ark. It was in that city that her romance with Rev. Mr. Tate began. She was the superintendent of the young women's division of the B. W. M. U. of the Gordon street church, a member of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital, a leader of the Young Women's Auxiliary of the church, and a teacher in the Sunday school.

She is survived by two sons, David M., and L. W. Tate, of Atlanta; two daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Bessie Evelyn Tate, also of Atlanta; and six sisters, Mrs. W. H. Eagle, of Little Rock, Ark., Mrs. Emma M. Thompson, and Mrs. Mattie M. Boone, of Roanoke, Ark., Mrs. Allie M. Barker, of Tunica, La., Mrs. W. K. Oldham, of Roanoke, Ark., and Mrs. H. L. Elcan, of Hot Springs, Ark.

WALES WILL TAKE THREE DAYS OF REST

Colesberg, Union of South Africa, May 9.—The Prince of Wales, who has crossed Cape Colony from Capetown in the past week, left the royal train at Colesberg Junction at 9 o'clock tonight for Sir A. Bailey's farm, near here, where he will take three days of rest.

Early in the afternoon he detrained at Middleburg, on the eastern edge of the Karoo region, which is a famous stock-raising country of 100,000 square miles. Many farmers have their own holdings of 100,000 acres.

SHOWERS PROBABLE ON SABBATH DAY SAYS FORECASTER

Showers today, with moderate temperatures, form the weather forecast Saturday by C. F. von Herrmann, U. S. meteorologist at Atlanta.

A maximum of 77 degrees was recorded at noon Saturday, showing from a comparison with temperatures of the past few days that the weather bureau's prediction of gradually increasing temperature is carried out.

Episcopal School Workers To Open Session Tuesday

The third annual conference of the Church School Workers' Diocese of Atlanta (Episcopal) will take place Tuesday at St. Philip's Cathedral.

Prominent speakers who will be heard at the session are: Rev. Oliver J. Hart, rector Christ church, Macon, Ga.; Dr. Homer W. Starr, Charleston, S. C.; Rev. Charles B. Scovill, Concord, N. C.; Miss Katherine Smith, educational secretary, of Macon, Ga.

A general invitation is issued to all interested in religious education to attend the speaking in St. Philip's cathedral Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. There are to be two speakers. The Rev. Homer W. Starr will speak on "The Challenge of Religious Education to the Church of Today," and Rev. Charles B. Scovill, secretary of religious education, diocese of North Carolina, will speak on the subject, "Religious Education in Small and Rural Places."

All friends and parents of the boys are invited to the court of honor.

Pioneer Mail Carrier in Georgia

Picture shows Mrs. Cammie Daniel Thomas standing beside her automobile, ready to start her 30-mile mail route at Newnan, Ga. She has been a rural carrier for seven years.

Newnan, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—During seven years' service and never having lost a day on account of bad weather is the record of Mrs. Cammie Daniel Thomas, carrier of mail on Route No. 1, from Newnan. There are six women mail carriers in Georgia and Mrs. Thomas is one of the pioneers in the service.

In 1914 Mrs. Thomas was appointed substitute carrier, and seven years ago she was appointed temporary carrier and served in that capacity for four years, during the illness of her husband, the late William M. Thomas, who served as carrier for 18 years. Following his death three years ago, his widow was appointed regular carrier, following an examination in which she competed with 13 men.

Mrs. Thomas uses an automobile on her 30-mile route and is well known to practically every man, woman and child along her route. She is careful, courteous and accommodating, and and all along her way persons stop their work to wave her a greeting.

Mrs. Thomas was Miss Cammie Daniel, daughter of the late senator Wyatt Heflin Daniel, who for years was a prominent lawyer at Newnan. She is related to the Heflin family of Alabama and to the Daniel and Wyatt families in Georgia.

MANY MOTORISTS VISIT KENNESAW'S SUMMIT

Marietta, Georgia, May 9.—(Special.)—Hundreds of motorists from all parts of the country attended the opening of the road leading to the summit of Kennesaw mountain here today. No formalities or ceremonies accompanied the opening; the gates were thrown open and for the first time in history, a stream of automobiles wound their way around the road leading to the top of the mountain.

Road Two Miles Long.

According to William Tate Holland, who is responsible for the completion of the project, the properties including both Big Kennesaw and Little Kennesaw mountains, comprising about 500 acres of land, were acquired in April, 1924, by the Kennesaw Mountain Battlefield association with the plan and intention of developing same with a road two miles in length ending at the top of the mountain and with an average grade of 5 1-2 per cent. The road is 20 feet wide. Also the construction at the summit of a large casino and eating lodge to accommodate from 600 to 800 people. On the Dixie highway, immediately adjacent to the mountain, will be built a model tourist camp to accommodate 500 people.

In addition to this, the United Daughters of the Confederacy have been given a site on Big Kennesaw for the erection of a 60-foot concrete observation tower and a large museum or battle abbey for war relics. In the tower will be an electric elevator.

It is expected that the popularity of this historic spot will increase greatly when it has become generally known all over the country, both north and south, that the road has been completed. For it was here that one of the bloodiest battles of the entire civil war was fought. Thousands of the picked troops of General William T. Sherman, on their march to the sea, met death here and history relates the stubbornness of the resistance as offered by the Confederate troops who had thrown up breastworks on the top of the mountain. These breastworks are still to be seen, and the road winds in and about them. Visitors are continually finding minie balls and other relics of the terrific battle that raged here on that memorial day in June, 1864.

Celebration Planned.

On the 61st anniversary of this battle, a great celebration will be staged and at which time the governors of all the states, both north and south, who had troops that took part in this campaign will be invited, as well as the people from Atlanta, Marietta and surrounding territory. The Battlefield association have also extended invitations to General John J. Pershing and Judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis.

Big Kennesaw mountain has an altitude of 1,836 feet; Little Kennesaw 1,725. From the summit of the former can be seen the mountains of Tennessee, North Carolina and Alabama, as well as the entire skyline of the city of Atlanta and a plain view of Stone Mountain.

A feature of interest in connection with the mountain is the fact that Judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis, national figure, was named for the mountain. His father, it is said, was a soldier in the battle fought there, and when he received news of the birth of a son on the day of the battle, he christened him "Kennesaw Mountain Landis."

Audience of 5,000 Hears Gipsy Smith Tell History of His People

Carrollton, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Last night in the last service of a three weeks' revival meeting at the Gypsy Smith tabernacle here, 5,000 people listened for an hour and a half to Rev. Gypsy Smith's story of the gypsies. Visitors from all the surrounding counties were in attendance and several people from Atlanta were also present.

Mr. Smith told of the gypsy people as they were in the days before they ever knew anything of religion.

"Every time you pay a gypsy girl to tell your fortune, you are paying her to lie," the evangelist said. The gypsies know nothing of divorce or murder among their own people and they have always strictly observed the Sabbath day even before they knew anything about God and the Bible and they believe that they are of Jewish descent, said Mr. Smith.

He said that there are 4,000,000 gypsies in the world and they are the only race on earth to whom Christian people have failed to preach the gospel.

Mr. Smith goes to Brunswick to conduct a revival there beginning Sunday night.

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA RATE HEARING ENDS

Richmond, Va., May 9.—With the section challenging the reasonableness of the interstate rate structure shorn from the Virginia corporation commission's complaint, the North Carolina-Virginia freight rate controversy went into the hands of the interstate commerce commission today. Along with the voluminous testimony, heard by Examiner Carter Durt, went a motion from the North Carolina corportation commission asking the dismissal of the entire proceeding.

As the complaint now stands with the interstate commerce commission, the Virginia commission arises only the question of undue or unjust discrimination and undue prejudice against the Virginia cities, localities and shippers, and undue preference to North Carolina points and shippers.

A brief skirmish developed these sudden turnings. It came ten minutes before the close of the hearing. The carriers had just finished their two days' testimony in justification of the claim that their interstate rates were reasonable when counsel for the North Carolina corporation commission filed their motion for dismissal of the proceeding. Announcing that they would not offer any testimony, they predicated their motion upon a number of reasons.

NEW COLOR SLATE DEPOSITS FOUND BY CAREY FIRM

When color experts of the Philip Carey company, of Cincinnati, found a new color slate in a Virginia quarry a few months ago, they were so delighted with their discovery that they immediately contracted for the entire output.

This particular deposit of slate is of a peculiarly fresh and lusterful green, appearing almost as if it were covered with sparkling dew. It is declared by authorities to be entirely different in color from any other slate ever found. At the Carey plant it is used for surfacing the big size Carey Asfaltslate shingles. Thus the new "silver-green" color in shingles has been produced. It is rapidly becoming popular with home builders everywhere.

J. B. Campbell, president of the R. O. Campbell Coal company, local distributors for Carey products, states that never before has he handled such a shingle color. "It's rich, harmonious, yet dignified and something of which the home owner will never tire. I believe this color marks a new standard of beauty in shingles. It is bound to play a big part in the present-day tendency of builders to design more artistic homes."

STATE ST. SCHOOL MAINTAINS LEAD IN ATTENDANCE

State Street school maintained its attendance leadership of Atlanta schools by again heading the list for the week ending May 8. The school, of which Miss Mamie L. Pitts is principal, not only has made the finest record of Atlanta schools, but leads all cities in the county in its percentage of attendance for the present year.

Following State Street school, which made a record of 98.5 per cent for the week, came Stewart Avenue school with 97.4; Peeples Street school with 96.4; Adair school with 96, and Forrest school with 95.9 per cent.

MAN, LIQUOR, AND CAR ARE TAKEN BY POLICE

C. B. Anderson of Spring street, 70 gallons of liquor and an automobile, were taken early Saturday morning by federal and county officers following an automobile chase of a mile and a footrace of more than half a mile.

County Policemen Wells, Hornsby, Cates and Lyle and Federal Officers Goode and Adair followed the whisky car out Moreland avenue for more than a mile when it was damaged and Anderson abandoned it, trusting to his fleetness of foot to carry him to safety. Policeman Hornsby jumped from the police car and the sprint began. For half a mile Anderson led and then Hornsby began closing on him. Finally Anderson gave up the race.

B. Y. P. U. CLOSES MEET HELD AT STATESBORO

Statesboro, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Features of the closing session of the regional convention here of the Baptist Young People's Union was the awarding of banners and an address by Louie D. Newton, editor of the Christian Index, the state Baptist paper.

The senior Union banner was awarded to Claxton, the Intermediate to Valdosta and the Junior to Statesboro.

Mr. Newton's subject "What is Life," was very much enjoyed. His tribute to "Mother" and his reference to Mothers' day tomorrow was of added interest, because his mother was in the audience.

While in this section, Mr. Newton visited his old home on the Ogeechee river in Screven county.

The time and place of next year's convention will be announced later, it was stated.

Georgia Car To Attend Music Conclave in Portland Oregon

Delegates and contestants from the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs and also delegates from the music clubs of South Carolina will leave Atlanta during the last week in May for the national convention of music clubs, which is to be held in Portland, Ore., June 6 to 13, in a special Pullman car in which the delegation of approximately 25 persons will make the trip to Portland and back to Atlanta.

Arrangements have been made to place a victrola in the car and if possible a piano will also be installed in the Pullman in order that the delegates may enjoy their music during the trip. Arrangements have also been completed whereby the delegates will broadcast messages to friends at home from main stations on the trip.

The party will be given a reception in Chicago by the music clubs of that city and will be taken on a sightseeing tour of the city and be honor guests at a dinner in the evening.

Sightseeing trips through Vancouver and Victoria and through Minneapolis and St. Paul on the return trip are planned.

Mrs. G. A. Heide, transportation chairman, in charge of all details in connection with the trip, announces that special arrangements have been made so that members of the junior clubs can make the trip with the assurance of proper supervision, owing to the fact that the same car will make the round trip and no train changes will be made by the passengers.

It is also announced that delegates who do not care to come back with the special car are privileged to return by any one of several routes, through Yellowstone Park, by the southern route through California or by several other routes.

Reservations for the trip may be made through Mrs. Heide at 175 East Seventeenth street, phone Hemlock 1919-J. Mrs. Heide states that her committee is particularly anxious to have all reservations in within the next two weeks.

$40,000,000 Outlay Planned For Strengthening Defenses Of Nation on Island of Oahu

$6,000,000 Additional Has Been Authorized To Develop Pearl Harbor Base, in Hawaiian Islands.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, May 9.—Approved war department estimates for the defense of the Hawaiian Islands involve a total outlay of $40,000,000, of which about one-half has already been expended. The figures are exclusive of projects for development of the Pearl Harbor naval base, for which a separate $6,000,000 proposal has been authorized by congress, although no appropriations have yet been made.

The figures on the army defense project came to light today in connection with results of the joint army-navy maneuvers to test the present garrison against a surprise attack. While official reports of the outcome of the war game are not expected to reach Washington for a week or two, unofficial advices have already disclosed, in the judgment of officers who have read carefully all press accounts from the scene, that the half finished defense project cannot be relied upon to protect the Pearl Harbor naval base from enemy investment in the event of such a surprise attack in force as was simulated in the maneuvers.

Long Range Guns.

The aggregate cost of $40,000,000 for the land defenses of the island of Oahu, which has been discussed at length by congressional committees, covers the additional interior communication system of roads and other means of rapid transport which observers here believe the official reports will show might have prevented the landing of the "black" forces.

It also includes a large number of additional concrete gun emplacements, with necessary railway sidings for the semi-mobile 240-centimeter howitzers, which are the main reliance of the defense plans for beating off an impending landing attack. Additional long-range guns for better securing the naval base itself and the city of Honolulu against bombardment from the sea is another item in the project as well as housing for additional regular troops, increases in the air service defense squadrons and the like.

In recent sessions of congress, the war department has urged that the Hawaiian defense project be carried to completion through annual expenditures of from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 until finished. The plan was to complete the defensive system in a maximum of seven years. The army appropriation bill for the coming fiscal year, however, carries only one item of $25,000 for expenditure on the Oahu defenses.

Butler's Suggestion.

In connection with the suggestion made by Representative Butler of Pennsylvania, chairman of the house naval committee, that members of both congressional naval committees visit the Hawaiian islands and study the situation for themselves before congress convenes, Dwight Davis, acting secretary of war, has indicated that the military committees should be included and that a comprehensive on-the-ground inquiry of all aspects of the defense of the group be undertaken. The trip should include, Mr. Davis feels, a similar visit to the Panama Canal Zone for the same purpose, and through cooperation of the four responsible committees, as well as army and navy officials, a thorough understanding could be gained and definite decisions reached. Such problems are difficult to explain with maps and charts, Mr. Davis has already found.

TROTZKY IS SLATED TO GET CABINET JOB

Moscow, May 9.—Leon Trotzky's return to active political life, it is believed in diplomatic quarters, is likely to involve an early rearrangement of the cabinet portfolios. Leonid Krassin, recently appointed ambassador to France, probably will be transferred from Paris to vice presidency of the soviet republic, assisting Premier Rykoff. Krassin may be succeeded at Paris by Christian Rakovsky, charge d'affaires at London.

Trotzky, it is thought, will be chief of the supreme economic council, succeeding Djerjinsky, who is likely to be appointed commissar of internal trade.

Although Zinovieff may be relieved as head of the communist international and assigned to other duties, while Le Kameneff, of the council of commissars, is rumored to be slated to take over that post and modify its policies and activities.

These and additional changes indicating a trend to the right probably will be announced at the federal congress of soviet states, which opens at Moscow Tuesday.

DETROIT WOMAN TAKES CHILDREN'S HOME POST

Miss Emma Hardcastle, for the past three years supervisor of the child caring department of the Detroit Children's Aid society, has accepted a similar position with the Georgia Children's Home society and has begun her duties with the latter organization with headquarters in Atlanta. The employment of Miss Hardcastle is another step in the reorganization of the Georgia society under its new superintendent, Joseph C. Logan.

Miss Hardcastle taught pedagogy, and had charge of the teaching courses and class schedules in the Detroit Normal school for nine years. After leaving the teaching profession she studied social service at the Chicago School of Civics and Philanthropy, and for a time thereafter she held a position as employment manager for a large business concern. For the last five years she has been with the Children's Aid society of Detroit. As supervisor of that society 800 children have been under the care of Miss Hardcastle and 20 assistant visitors and nurses. All of the 800 children are cared for in free, boarding, or prospective foster homes, nearly 500 different homes being used for the purpose. Miss Hardcastle and her assistants in the Detroit society make a thorough inquiry into the suitability of these homes before placing children in them, and safeguard the children who are placed by constant supervision and advice.

Joseph C. Logan, superintendent of the Georgia society, said concerning Miss Hardcastle: "We have just as good private homes in Georgia that will take children, either temporarily or permanently, as has Detroit, and Miss Hardcastle will be invaluable in extending our work in that direction. A good home is the best thing that can be given a friendless child. It includes everything."

The Georgia Children's Home society is a state-wide agency for the care of children in foster homes. It is supported entirely by voluntary contributions.

DAUGHTERS TO MARK SPOTS IN HANCOCK

Sparta, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—The Hancock chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, have located two historic spots in Hancock county which they will mark with large granite boulders, capped with a bronze plate giving historical data.

One spot to be marked is the old trail of the Creek Indians through this county, and the other is a place on Shoulderbone creek where a treaty was held with the Creek Indians by the white settlers then living in what was later cut off and named Hancock county.

The Daughters will also put suitable markers over the graves of all Revolutionary war soldiers buried in the county. It is said that numbers of them rest in the soil of this county without any marker whatever to show the coming generations who they were, or of their heroic deeds.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE BACKS "BETTER HOMES."

"The American home is the foundation of our national and individual well-being. Its steady improvement is, at the same time, a test of our civilization and of our ideals. The Better Homes in America movement provides a channel through which men and women in each community can encourage the building, ornamenting and owning of private homes by the people at large. We need attractive, worthy, permanent homes that lighten the burden of housekeeping. We need homes in which home life can reach its finest levels, and in which can be reared happy children and upright citizens.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

"I commend participation in Better Homes demonstrations and in the other work of the movement to the American people.

"CALVIN COOLIDGE."

BETTER HOMES OPEN OFFICIALLY

Sheldon, pianist; Walter Bedard, Jr., mando-cello.

Mrs. Helmer Hostess.

At Home No. 2 the hostess will be Mrs. H. G. Helmer, chairman of public welfare. Mrs. Helmer will be assisted by the opportunity school neighborhood class of Spanish women, Mrs. Maude T. Baker, instructor.

Prayer will be led by Rev. Victor Levi. Folk songs, French, Italian, Spanish and Hebrew, will be sung. Opportunity class will offer a dance by Arva Johnston, pupil of Miss Ann Agricola. A health talk by a metropolitan nurse and a piano selection by Rebecca Kulbersh will feature.

The model home for colored people will be opened with an address, "The Better Home and Citizenship."

Miss Grace Jackson, member of Woman's Club Camp Fire group, is junior chairman of play grounds for week at Better Homes. Each day a group of the Camp Fire girls will be at Home No. 1 to demonstrate outdoor play and to care for the babies, Miss Marion Smith, guardian of the Highland avenue school group, will be in charge on Monday afternoon.

NEGROES PROPOSE BETTER HOME PROGRAM

The committee of colored women in charge of Better Home No. 3, located on Currier street, has planned an elaborate program to be rendered at the home throughout the week, beginning with a formal opening with music and addresses at three o'clock Sunday afternoon. On the following days the evening program will begin at seven o'clock and will be as follows: Monday, "The Better Home and Citizenship"; Tuesday, "Negro Literature in the Better Home"; Wednesday, "Negro Art in the Better Home"; Thursday, "Negro Music in the Better Home"; Friday, "The Better Home and the Better Man." On Saturday evening a pageant will be given.

The effort of the committee, through the program and the decorations of the home, will be to promote wholesome race pride and the appreciation of negro achievement. On the walls will be paintings by negro artists—Banister, Tanner and Scott—and a frieze by Meta Warrick Fuller. A musical program will be given each evening by local colored talent, using the compositions of negro musicians, the book shelves will carry poetry, fiction and history by negro authors.

The colored schools of this city are cooperating. Students of the negro colleges and high schools will give demonstrations daily in domestic science and home making. At three o'clock Monday afternoon Spelman girls will demonstrate invalid cookery at the home. On Tuesday afternoon Clark University students will put on a domestic science demonstration, on Wednesday the high school students, and on Thursday the students of Atlanta University. Dressmaking and cooking will be shown by Morris Brown students on Friday, and Saturday afternoon will be a play hour for the children of the neighborhood.

Atlantans To Journey To LaGrange Tuesday And Form Junior Body

LaGrange, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Formation of a junior chamber of commerce in LaGrange on Tuesday will be sponsored by the Atlanta Junior Chamber.

Atlanta Junior Chamber members will leave the chamber building in automobiles at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and will attend a banquet in LaGrange at 6:30 o'clock.

The mayor of LaGrange will make one of the principal addresses, and members of the Atlanta Junior Chamber will deliver talks. The trip is to be made at the request of G. P. Winn, young business man, of LaGrange, who is one of the leaders in that city in the movement to form a junior chamber.

Atlantans who will make the trip are: John M. Slaton, Jr., president of the Junior chamber; Fitzhugh Knox, Jr., and George E. Meyers, vice presidents; Horace Russell, Frank Harrison, Frank Hooper, Roy Flourney, Edward Robertson, M. C. Carpenter, William T. Dean, Frank Maloney, Smythe Gambrell and John Dillard.

CREW MAKES ESCAPE, BUT SHIP IS SINKING

Halifax, May 9.—With her crew put safely on shore, the Danish freighter, Hans Jensen, impaled on the knife-like ledges off Blind Point, 125 miles northeast of here, was being slowly broken up tonight. The engine room and holds were flooded. The vessel's officers still were on board, but were prepared to leave at a moment's notice.

The freighter was traveling in ballast from New York to Montreal when she went ashore last night in a dense fog.

NO DATE YET SET FOR CURRY HEARING

Governor Clifford Walker, who spent Saturday in Athens attending the Georgia-Tech baseball game, has not yet set the date for a hearing on the final plea for the life of Lee Curry, of Toombs county, who is sentenced to hang on May 21.

However, it was stated at the governor's office that the hearing undoubtedly would be some time this week. The state prison commission has declined to recommend clemency for Curry, who was convicted of the murder of Burleigh Phillips in February, 1920. He has been tried five times, one hearing resulting in a mistrial and three in rehearing orders from the state supreme court.

Mayors of Georgia To Form Association Here in July

More than three score mayors and former mayors of as many cities and towns in Georgia will form a Mayors' club at a meeting to be held in Atlanta July 9, it became known here Saturday with announcement that Mayor Walter A. Sims, Attorney General George M. Napier, W. Bayne Gibson and a number of mayors of large Georgia cities would address the gathering. The occasion for the assembling of so many mayors is in connection with the elaborate three-day program being planned by local Maccabees for several thousand visiting members of the order on July 9-10-11.

The three-day celebration here will have as its high points the organization of the Mayors' association; a gigantic parade through principal streets of the city, and an old-fashioned barbecue. Minor features include a round of sight-seeing tours to nearby points of interest, a series of theater parties for visiting women and a pyrotechnic display, harness and bike racing and other features at a park yet to be selected.

On July 12, Maccabees who have gathered from all states in the south, will leave for Washington as a unit of the nation-wide motorcade which proceeds on the capital city for the national Maccabee convention.

Mayors Are Interested.

From more than 100 Georgia cities and towns will come young women representatives who will form a spectacular feature of the local parade and later will appear in the parade in Washington. Mayors from many sections of the state will accompany their respective representatives. Thirty-three Georgia girls have been selected in as many cities and towns during the past two weeks, and 24 will be named this week. Others will be selected prior to the opening of festivities in Atlanta.

"Miss Georgia" will be represented by Miss Georgia Gleason, daughter of Acting State Commander M. D. Gleason, while other young women will represent "Miss Peach," "Miss Apple," and various other fruits, and as many more will represent cities and towns from which they come.

Upon arrival in Atlanta, Miss Bessie Kempton, member of the Fulton county delegation in the general assembly, will be hostess to Georgia's young girls, while Princess Mary Tourkestorff, niece of the late Russian czar, will act as hostess to girls of all states who visit Washington as members of the Maccabee motorcade.

Princess Is Famous.

Princess Tourkestorff is one of the nation's best known women, having achieved national fame as a teacher of court etiquette and is author of a number of interesting books on intimate court life in old Russia.

En route from Atlanta to Washington stops will be made at Charlotte, Raleigh and other North Carolina cities, in Richmond, Virginia, and in three or four other Virginia cities, not yet determined.

After arrival in Washington and completion of the parade the young women, along with hundreds of other Maccabee motorcade members, whether members or non-members, will be taken to interesting battlefields in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and surrounding sections—where memorable battles of the war of the 00's and the Revolution were fought.

C. I. Harris, head of the Harris advertising agency of this city, and in charge of national publicity features of the campaign, stated Saturday that reports from all sections of the nation indicate an intense interest in the approaching plan and that persons not members of the Maccabees are evincing marked interest in the chances offered to join the motorcade and take advantage of cheap rates and special services offered prospective vacationists. The same features are open to non-members of the order as to those who are members in good standing, Mr. Harris asserted.

Groups of school children in many sections, led by teachers, will take advantage of the trip to take classes to the nation's capital and to other interesting spots in the vicinity.

Commander Gleason will leave Monday for Richmond, mapping the road and making final preparations and other arrangements for those who will leave Atlanta on July 12.

NEGRO IDENTIFIED AS POLICEMAN'S SLAYER

Jacksonville, Fla., May 9.—The negro held in New York as Nathan Perry, is Will Douglas, alleged slayer of Motorcycle Patrolman William B. Kelly, according to advices received here today from New York. Chief of Police A. J. Roberts and Detective Lieutenant L. J. Johnson, of Jacksonville, positively identified the negro there this morning.

Officer Kelly was fatally wounded here last Labor day, dying a few days later and since that time, a nation-wide search has been carried on, twice reaching into two foreign countries.

Douglas is charged with the shooting of Kelly and was indicted by the county grand jury on charges of first-degree murder.

Upon being identified in New York, the negro was arraigned on a charge of homicide and held without bail for a period of 30 days, pending the granting of extradition papers which will permit his being returned to Jacksonville, advices from New York said.

An application for extradition is being made by Governor Martin of Florida and C. W. Borders of the local police department will leave with it tomorrow night for New York.

Mrs. Sturtevant Loses Husband In Regaining Son

Brocton, Mass., May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—In recovering her son who had been lost to her since his infancy, Mrs. Jennie Woodward Sturtevant of this city, has parted with her husband, she said today on her return from Middlebury, Vt., where she said she believed Earl Woodward, held in Addison county jail as the kidnaper of 11-year-old Lucille Chatterton, of Granville, Vermont, was the child she saw lost 25 years ago.

Mrs. Sturtevant returned from Middlebury to her home at Brocton Heights today after a two day absence. Her husband, Simeon Sturtevant, was not at home, and later she said that he had left. They were married in 1901 and have five children. Mrs. Sturtevant has said that she failed to tell her husband that she had been a mother before her marriage.

LIQUOR FOUND HIDDEN ON BELGIAN STEAMSHIP

Halifax, May 9.—Search for 1,500 cases of liquor which disappeared while being transferred from one ship to another resulted today in the discovery of several hundred cases hidden in water tanks in the stokehold of the Belgian steamship Denise. No arrests have been made. The missing liquor was part of a cargo of 15,000 cases being transferred from the Denise in from New York's rum row to the Lunenberg schooner Intergral. It is believed that the liquor was secreted by the members of the Denise's crew.

EDUCATOR IS DEAD IN DES MOINES

Des Moines, May 9.—The Rev. William Irving Graham, aged 82, retired Methodist minister and educator, formerly of Clark University at Atlanta, Ga., and of Dakota Wesleyan university, died here today. Burial will be at Ashland, Neb.

Rev. William Irvin Graham, quoted in dispatches from Des Moines, Iowa, as having died in a private hospital in that city, formerly was a professor in Clark university of this city. He began his term of service in 1893 and served for six years, going to Des Moines, from Atlanta, where he accepted a position as a member of the faculty of Dakota Wesleyan University, in 1808.

TAMPA WOMAN MOTHER OF FIFTEEN CHILDREN

Tampa, Fla., May 9.—As the result of a survey of Tampa for Mother's Day statistics it was found today that the mother of the most living children here is Mrs. Rachel Aflalo. She is 54 years old, and has 15 living children. Four sons were killed in the world war and one daughter died recently. Married at the age of 14 she bore one child each year for 20 years.

INDICTMENT STANDS AGAINST STEPHENSON

Indianapolis, May 9.—James A. Collins in criminal court today overruled a motion to strike out vital parts of the murder indictment against D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry. They are charged with the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, of Indianapolis.

Counsel for the defendant then filed a motion to quash the indictment and May 15 was the date set for a hearing.

A. & P. Store Officials Entertain O. C. Adams

O. C. Adams, southern division president of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company, with headquarters in Philadelphia, who is making an extensive tour of the south, during which time he will visit approximately 350 stores of the company. He was honor guest and principal speaker Thursday night at a banquet tendered him by officials of the Atlanta stores of the company at the Biltmore hotel. There are 80 Atlantic & Pacific stores in Atlanta, which he inspected during his stay in the city.

A. F. OF L. PLANS DRIVE AGAINST CONVICT LABOR

Washington, May 9.—A campaign for elimination of contract convict labor, a system under which convicts are employed in industry, will be launched by the American Federation of Labor.

The federation's executive council, in making the announcement today, asserted that the practice, which prevails in several states, is unjust to wage-earners, and a menace to the prosperity of the industries affected.

The council has prepared a bill to be submitted to the next congress which would prevent one state sending into another where sale of convict-made products is prohibited, articles manufactured by use of prison labor. A bill for establishment of the "state use" system in states where it is not now effective, was drafted by the council and will be sent to labor organizations in these states. The "state use" system provides that products manufactured in state prisons shall be for exclusive use of the state or its political divisions.

Emory Songsters Given Enthusiastic Reception

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

Closing its eighth annual tour which has been the most successful ever enjoyed, the Emory University Glee club Saturday night won additional laurels at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium. More than 65 members of the glee club and orchestra, which only recently returned from the east, where they played at the white house before President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, pleased the appreciative audience and was given encore after encore.

Thirty-five members of the club won the hearts of their audience in several ensemble selections, and the burlesque, "Cataline," written by Gordon Watson, of the class of 1923 and now connected with the department of English as instructor, took the packed house by storm. The skit was labeled "A Lie of Ancient Rome."

The program was opened with an orcestra selection, Shubert's "Symphony in B. Minor," first movement. This was the only orchestra number on the program.

George Baker, of Savannah, leading vocal soloist, was received with enthusiasm after singing Dvorak's "Going Home." He was given several encores as was Harry Pomar, violin soloist, who played Drdla's "Guitarren." Pomar is a freshman medical student at the university, but has won a national reputation by receiving a special invitation to play before Mr. Coolidge. He is conductor of the Atlanta-Biltmore orchestra, and is the author of many violin selections.

Quartet Stars.

"Pale Moon," sung by the quartet, was well received and several encores were sung, including a "Misinterpretation of Rigoletto." Neely Peacock, member of the quartet, has a sweet, clear voice. Other members of the quartet are John Knox, George Baker and George Stuart.

The negro spirituals lacked the cadence which one usually expects. Only once did the club show any real quality approaching what is expected of a well-trained group of singers in the spirituals and that was in the rendition of "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray."

The club did more real finished work, however, than ever before and really pleased finished musicians and laymen in many of the selections. The third part of the program, "Excerpts From Pinafore," in which the Glee club and orchestra were both heard, probably was the most popular of the three divisions of the program.

Alton O'Steen, who has been accompanist of the club for the past three years, was well received.

Plan European Tour.

The Emory club is planning an European tour in 1925-26.

In 1924 the club visited Cuba on an extended tour of Florida. This year its activities have been directed towards concerts in the east, including Washington, Baltimore and other leading musical centers. Dr. Malcolm Dewey has gathered under the name of the Emory singers some of the best talent in the entire south. J. Foster Barnes, at one time leading baritone soloist of the club, has been offered a place in the Metropolitan opera, and it is reported that he will accept.

COLUMBUS VOTES FOR TAX EXEMPTION ON NEW INDUSTRIES

Columbus, Ga., May 9.—Columbus voted overwhelmingly today in favor of exempting new industries from taxation for a period of five years. There was practically no opposition to the proposal, only nine votes out of 950 being cast against tax exemption.

Columbus is first of the larger cities of Georgia to vote on the industry tax exemption question.

GEORGIA BAR MEETS AT TYBEE IN JUNE

Macon, Ga., May 9.—The annual meeting of the Georgia Bar association will be held at Tybee island, June 4-6, it was announced today, by Harry S. Strozier, secretary. H. H. Swift, of Columbus, is president.

Emory R. Buckner, recently appointed district attorney for the southern district of New York, is on the program for the principal address.

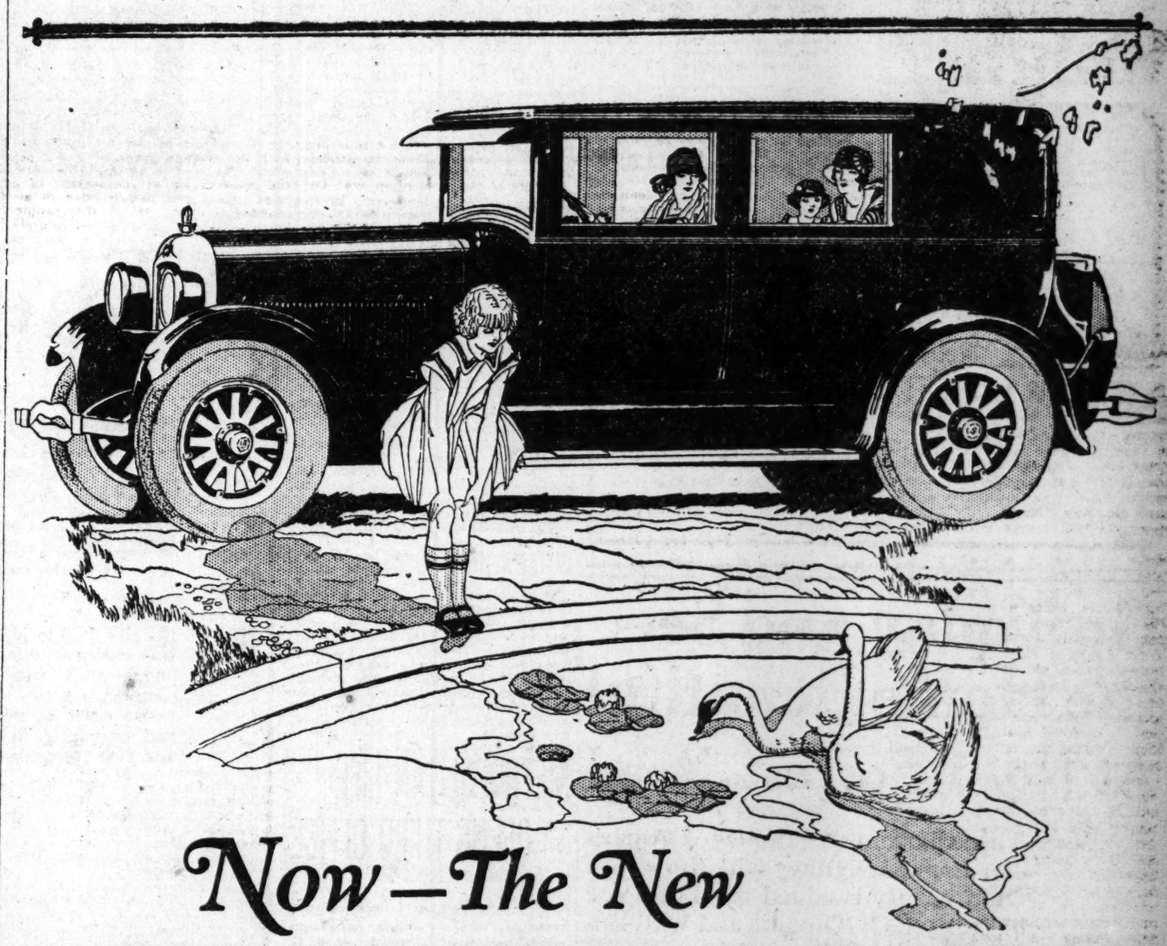

Others on the program include H. Warner Hill, associate justice of the Georgia supreme court; Alexander W. Stephens, of the Georgia court of appeals; A. L. Franklin, superior court judge, Augusta; Perry D. Rich, Colquitt, and J. N. Talley, of Macon.

Uncle Joe Rose Passes Away

The Railroad Employees of this city were made sad Thursday when the death Angel called one of the oldest Veterans in the service to his home above.

At 3:35 P. M., Thursday afternoon Uncle Joe Rose passed away. He had been an employe of the Southern Railway for forty-three years continuously, working in the capacity of Yard Conductor and Yard Master. He joined the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen thirty years ago and has held continuous membership. He has served in most every office in the Local Lodge and acted as Local Chairman of the Grievance Committee for several years, and also he represented the Local in the Grand Lodge in Convention.

In all of his work Uncle Joe looked to the interest of his Employers and his fellow workmen and was always loyal to his Organization. He was a regular attendant at Lodge meetings until about two years ago when his health failed him, where he could not attend regularly, but he would attend about once a month and it would seem that when he would enter the Lodge Room his presence would light up the Lodge Room and was felt and reverenced by all. It could, indeed, be said of Uncle Joe that he died as he lived, in peace with his God and all mankind.—(adv.)

Now—The New STUDEBAKER
BIG SIX BROUGHAM

THE new Studebaker Big Six four-door Brougham is a car of smart lines and marked distinction.

It will appeal to the discriminating buyer who wants the best and who will be surprised to find such a fine car available at such a moderate price.

Its low price is due to the fact that Studebaker builds this car complete—both body and chassis—in Studebaker plants.

Most automobile manufacturers must buy closed bodies from outside concerns and must include the extra profit in their prices. Studebaker eliminates this profit, thus assuring highest quality at the lowest possible price.

Come in and let us show you the value Studebaker offers in this new Big Six Brougham at $2575, f. o. b. factory. The price includes front and rear bumpers and extra balloon tire, tube and tire cover.

Bankers Urge Farmers To Save 1925 Cotton Crop And Warn Against Weevils

Disastrous Crop Year Would Have Terrible Effect, Georgia Bankers Assert at Meeting.

Calling upon farmers and landowners of Georgia to do everything in their power, through use of calcium arsenate, to save the 1925 cotton crop from ravages of the boll weevil, the Georgia Bankers' association, in its recent state convention, adopted resolutions in which members warn agriculturalists of the state that weevil infestation will be greater this year than ever before.

The association declares that failure of the cotton crop this year means worse economic and social conditions in the state than ever, and pledge itself, "collectively and individually" to bring to bear every influence and means to prevent destruction by the boll weevil of the cotton crop for 1925 and of future years.

It is pointed out that calcium arsenate has been found to be an important factor in combating the weevil by years of research. It also is stated that the mild winter of 1924-25 necessarily means that weevils will emerge from hibernation earlier and in greater number this year than ever before. Texas is pointed to as an example of the futility of believing that the weevil will ever entirely disappear, it being stated that the weevil first appeared in that state 30 years ago and still is there.

The association sets out that no farmer and no land owner should set up his private opinion against the mature judgment of experts.

The resolutions in full, follows:

Whereas, the cotton boll weevil has, during recent years inflicted untold losses upon the agricultural and business interests of Georgia, and brought hardship and suffering upon the people of the state, not only in the rural districts, but also in every village, town and city, and,

Whereas after years of research, investigation and experiment on the part of the wisest men, working under the authority of the national government, the state government, the agricultural colleges, and many other agencies, the conclusion has been reached that the use of calcium arsenate as a poison, is an important factor in combating the weevil, and,

Whereas, by reason of the unusual severity of the winter of 1923-1924 and of the very hot weather in the summer of 1924, the damage by the weevil was much less serious than in former years, leading many people to hope and some to believe that the depredations of the weevil were on the wane, and,

Whereas, the marked increase of cotton production in 1924 over 1923 is an incentive to land owners all over the state to plan for and plant for a larger crop this year, as shown by the early and thorough preparation going on in every county, and,

Whereas, the winter just closed has been the mildest for many years, being at no time cold enough to do the slightest damage to the weevil, which will emerge from hibernation earlier this year and in greater numbers than ever before, thus bringing about a situation in Georgia that alarms those who have made a study of the weevil and who realize the utter ruin that follows in its wake—a situation that also greatly alarms every one who has the interests of the state at heart, and,

Whereas, there is no problem confronting the people of Georgia today so important, so pressing, as the safeguarding of the cotton crop this year, and, if we blunder now, if we go to sleep, if we yield to foolish over-confidence, or entertain and encourage a sort of superstitious belief that we have seen the last of the boll weevil, and make no further effort to fight it, we may find ourselves at the end of this year in a worse condition than ever before.

Now therefore, be it resolved, That, the Georgia Bankers association, in annual convention assembled, realizes and recognizes the responsibility that devolves upon it, and pledges itself, collectively and individually, to bring to bear every legitimate influence and to use every legitimate means to prevent the destruction by the boll weevil of the cotton crop for 1925, and of future years.

Be it further resolved, That, while the members of the Georgia Bankers' association do not arrogate to themselves the right to dictate to land owners what they shall do with their own property, they do have a full realization of the fact that they as bankers are merely trustees for the funds which they handle; that their responsibility is, not only to their stockholders, their directors and their depositors, but also to all the people of the communities which they serve. They, therefore, feel unwilling to remain silent and not protest against a program which they feel sure will lead to ruin. They feel bound to raise their voice against any line of action not in accord with the judgement of those who have devoted years to the study of this question. They feel that no farmer and no land owner has the right to set up his private opinion against the mature judgment of experts.

Be it further resolved, That we, the bankers of Georgia, are sensible of the obligation that rests upon us, and in this resolution, we undertake to sound a warning in language no man can misunderstand and to announce our determination to place the responsibility exactly where it belongs, that is, upon those who own the farm lands of the state, who dictate what shall be planted and what shall not be, who decide how the crops shall be cultivated and who can compel the use of poison on the cotton crop, or leave it to the mercy of the weevil, and we say to these land owners that, if they are willing to make the fight against the weevil, we stand ready to help them.

Be it further resolved, That it cannot be charged that we are hasty in the action now taken. We might well have acted years ago, and perhaps should have done so, but it is not a pleasant thing to do, and the step has been postponed in the hope that it would be unnecessary; further delay would be suicidal. Cotton planters, in the main, are men of intelligence and should have known long ago that there is no escape from the weevil, that there is no complete relief from its ravages, that more than 30 years ago it appeared in Texas and is still in Texas, and is still in every state and every locality where it has once appeared, that it is in Georgia, and those who plant cotton in this state must reckon with it, and if they expect to produce cotton they must fight the weevil, however much it goes against the grain to do so, and however deep-seated may be their prejudices.

Be it further resolved, That we are fully alive to the meaning of the destruction of the cotton crop in Georgia. We know that it means non-payment of notes due the banks; it means non-payment of accounts due merchants; it means non-payment of taxes to the state, the counties and the cities; it means non-payment of interest on mortgages and the consequent foreclosure of such mortgages; it means inability of people to support the schools and colleges; it means the closing of banks and the failure and bankruptcy of merchants; it means farms abandoned, lands lying idle and people leaving the counties and the state; it means vacant dwellings and stores; it means the disappearance of money from the small towns and its concentration in the large cities; it means the withdrawal and the withholding of outside capital; it means an end to development and to all business enterprise; it means loss of confidence, courage, enthusiasm and hope; it means uneasiness, suspicion, fear and failure; it means an increase of lawlessness and crime, which go hand in hand with dittress and poverty; it means in short, the continuation for an indefinite period of all the distressing conditions under which we now labor and under which we have labored for four long years.

Be it further resolved, That this resolution be printed at the earliest possible moment in quantities sufficient to make it certain that the members of this association can place copies in the hands of their stockholders, depositors and borrowers, and in the hands of farmers and land owners in the territories served by the member banks.

Be it further resolved, That the officers of this association be instructed, and the member banks be requested, to bring about the publication of this resolution in the daily and weekly newspapers of the state.

Hall Is Appointed.

Washington, May 9.—Appointment of Henry C. Hall, a member of the interstate commerce commission, as head of the American delegation to the international railway congress to be held in London in June, was announced today by the state department.

Cotton Men To Fete 25th Anniversary At Atlanta Meet

The celebration of the organization's twenty-fifth anniversary will be appropriately observed at the annual convention of the Cotton Manufacturers' association of Georgia, to be held on Monday and Tuesday, May 11 and 12, at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

George S. Harris, president and manager of Exposition Cotton Mills, Atlanta, who is president of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia which meets at the Atlanta Biltmore Monday and Tuesday.

During its 25 years of existence as a vital influence in the textile industry of the south, the association has numbered among its officers some of the pioneer leading industrial captains of the state. Special invitations have been extended to Fuller E. Callaway, of LaGrange; G. Gunby Jordan, of Columbus; R. E. Hightower, Sr., of Thomaston; Daniel A. Jewell, of Chickamauga; Charles Adamson, of Cedartown; W. C. Bradley, of Columbus; R. T. Jones, of Canton; William B. Candler, of Villa Rica, and others.

Harris Is President.

George S. Harris, president and manager of the Exposition Cotton Mills, Atlanta, is president of the organization. It is recalled in this connection that, with the exception of the years between 1913 and 1915, an official of the Exposition mill has served as an executive officer of the association since its inception in 1900. The late Charles D. Tuller, former president and secretary of the mill, was one of the organizers of the association and served as its secretary-treasurer until 1910, when the associtaion elected him as president. P. E. Glenn, who succeeded Mr. Tuller as secretary of the mill, also succeeded him in the association office, which he filled until 1923, when he was elected association president, being succeeded in that position in 1925 by Mr. Harris, the incumbent.

The meeting at the Biltmore this week will bring together the leading textile manufacturers of Georgia, with prominent executives from neighboring states, including V. M. Montgomery, of Spartanburg, S. C.; E. C. Dwelle, of Charlotte, N. C., and A. W. McLellan, of New Orleans, and others.

First Session Monday.

At 8:30 o'clock on Monday evening, the convention will be opened with an informal session. Tuesday morning the main session will be opened at 9:30 o'clock, by President Harris, and Mayor Walter A. Sims, will deliver the address of welcome, J. H. Mayes, mayor of Fitzgerald and prominent cotton manufacturer, responding. A comprehensive program will occupy the remainder of the morning.

On Tuesday afternoon, an association golf tournament will be staged at the Druid Hills Golf club, in charge of "Bobby" Jones, national amateur champion, "Chip" Robert and Cherry Emerson.

The annual election of officers will be held at a short session on Tuesday evening, which will be followed by the traditional banquet at which the silver anniversary celebration will be observed in a unique manner, it is announced.

Ladies accompanying delegates will be entertained at a luncheon at the Piedmont Driving club at 1 o'clock Tuesday, following an informal assembly at the Biltmore at 11 o'clock. In the afternoon they will be given an automobile trip around the city, and will attend the banquet on Tuesday evening.

700 Physicians Convene At Biltmore Wednesday

Approximately 700 of the leading physicians and surgeons of Georgia will be in Atlanta Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week in attendance at the annual convention of the Medical Association of Georgia, it is announced by the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau.

The convention will officially open at the Biltmore hotel Wednesday morning and will continue in session through Friday. This will be one of the most important meetings the association has ever held and it is expected it will be the most largely attended, according to Dr. J. C. Elrod, of Forsyth, president of the organization.

The Medical Association of Georgia numbers among its members a majority of the leading physicians and surgeons of the state, it is said, and most of these are expected to attend the convention some time during its sessions.

Important papers on subjects of vital interest to the medical profession and to the health of mankind are on the program. Wednesday's program will open at 10 o'clock with invocation by Rabbi David Marx. Dr. Theodore Toepel, president of the Fulton County Medical society, will deliver the address of welcome and the response will be given by Dr. W. R. Daney, of Savannah.

Wednesday morning's session will be open to the public.

Wednesday afternoon the convention will hear Dr. Thomas B. Gay, of Athens; Dr. C. H. Richardson, Jr., of Macon; M. Hines Roberts, of Atlanta; Dr. W. W. Anderson, of Atlanta; Dr. Joseph Yampolsky and Dr. George F. Klugh, of Atlanta, and Dr. M. M. McCord, Rome.

Wednesday night's session will open at 7 o'clock and be featured by papers by the following delegates: Dr. J. Calvin Weaver, Atlanta; Dr. H. H. Martin, of Savannah; Dr. Samuel J. Sinkoe, Atlanta; Dr. Charles E. Waits, Dr. R. F. Leadingham, Dr. Charles E. Dowman and Dr. Floyd W. McRae, of Atlanta.

The convention will open at 9 o'clock Thursday with a paper by Dr. J. W. Jones, of Atlanta. Other papers will be read by Dr. J. A. Redfearn, Albany; Dr. E. E. Murphy, Augusta, and Dr. E. C. Thrash, of Atlanta; Dr. E. B. Saye, Milledgeville; Dr. W. E. McCurry, Hartwell; Dr. Walter R. Holmes, Atlanta; Dr. W. F. Westmoreland, Atlanta; Dr. G. Y. Massenburg, Macon; Dr. W. H. Clark, LaGrange; Dr. Henry Levingtone, of Savannah.

Friday's Program.

On Friday, the following program has been arranged: Friday morning, papers will be given by Dr. Dan C. Elkin, of Atlanta; Dr. E. G. Davis, of Atlanta; Dr. Walter E. Sistrunk, of the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn., who has been invited to address the convention.

The following physicians will also speak: Dr. Charles Usher, Savannah; Dr. B. McH. Cline, Atlanta; Dr. H. R. Donalson, Atlanta; Dr. W. W. Battey, Jr., Augusta; Dr. Walter A. Norton, Savannah; Dr. Arthur C. Primrose, of Americus.

Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock the house of delegates will hold its first session and receive reports of the various committees. Another session of the house of delegates will be held Wednesday and another Thursday morning at 8 o'clock to transact the business of the convention.

At noon Friday the election of officers for the next convention year will take place.

An elaborate social program has been arranged for the delegates by the entertainment committee, including a smoker for those interested in pediatrics, by the pediatric section of the Fulton County Medical society, at the Biltmore Wednesday evening at 9:30. Thursday at 7 o'clock the annual banquet of the convention will be given at the Biltmore, to be followed by dancing.

Women Join Convention.

The woman's auxiliary of the medical association will meet jointly with the Georgia Medical association, and an elaborate program of entertainment has been prepared for the visiting ladies. About 400 women are expected to attend this convention.

Officers of the Medical Association of Georgia are: Dr. J. O. Elrod, Forsyth, president; Dr. W. A. Mulherin, Augusta, first vice president; Dr. B. H. Wagnon, Atlanta, second vice president; Dr. M. A. Clark, Macon, parliamentarian; Dr. Allen C. Bunce, Atlanta, secretary; Miss Martha Irwin, Atlanta, executive secretary; Dr. M. C. Pruitt, Atlanta, business manager of the Journal, official organ of the association.

EXCHANGE TO CLOSE FOR COTTON REPORT

New York, May 9.—The New York Cotton exchange will close for 20 minutes, beginning at 11:55 a. m., Tuesday, June 2, or such date as the department of agriculture might designate for issuing its first crop condition report.

PHILIBOSIAN STORE AROUSES INTEREST

Since the opening of the store at 272-74-76 Peachtree street about two weeks ago, Stephen Philibosian, Inc., widely-known dealers in oriental and domestic rugs and draperies, reports that the buying public has shown much interest in the new store.

Although the store is new in name, each member of its sales organization is well known and firmly established in prestige among the buyers in Atlanta, and they have been greeting a wide circle of friends at the new place.

Stephen Philibosian, Inc., is operating on a somewhat new merchandising policy in Atlanta, due to the fact that they are selling merchandise on a strictly cash basis. This plan has enabled the firm to entirely eliminate cost of a bookkeeping and credit departments and this saving has been passed along to the buying public by reducing prices on merchandise.

In speaking of this cash plan, Mr. Philibosian states:

"Prices on our merchandise today are on an average of 22 1-10 per cent lower than we formerly asked for the same merchandise under the credit plan. This statement is verified by a recent audit of our stock by Ernst & Ernst, nationally-known accountants.

"To people buying furnishings for the home, 22 1-10 per cent is a great saving and when one stops to think that this amount is paid for the privilege of getting terms at the ordinary store, one could hardly doubt the wisdom of buying goods under our plan.

"For instance, if you can go to the bank and borrow money at 8 per cent and pay us cash and save 22 1-10 per cent, it is unquestionably a wise business policy".

"More and more of the buying public is going to realize the folly of buying merchandise on terms and paying a high penalty for this privilege."

200 PAROLE REQUESTS GET RECOMMENDATION

Approximately one-fourth of the applications for paroles filed before the federal parole board at its session which closed Saturday were approved by the board and will be forwarded to Washington with the recommendation that clemency be granted according to an announcement made Saturday by Warden John Snook. About 200 cases were given favorable recommendaiton out of a total of nearly 800 considered.

The recommendations will be forwarded to the attorney general of the United States for approval and then will be submitted to the president for action.

Luther C. White, superintendent of federal prisons, who has been presiding at the session of the board, will leave Atlanta for an inspection trip which will take him to other federal prisons. Mr. White is working on a plan to relieve congestion at the federal prisons in Atlanta and Leavenworth, Kan.

The federal parole board is composed of Luther C. White, superintendent of prisons; John W. Snook, warden, and Dr. A. E. Quillian, prison physician.

METROPOLITAN LIFE OPENS THIRD OFFICE

The Metropolitan Life Insurance company, of New York, announces establishment of a third office in Atlanta known as the Stone Mountain district. The office is located in Wynne-Claughton building with F. G. Gooding, who formerly was manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, at Albany.

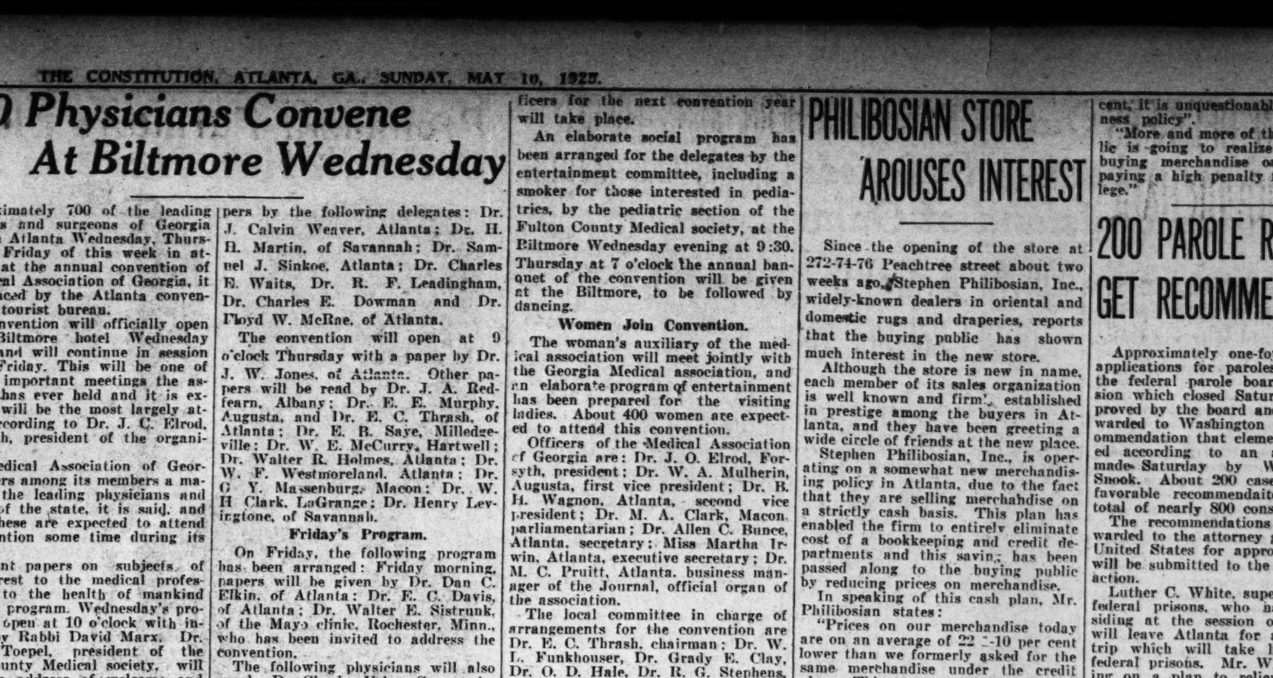

Mr. Gooding is one of the most successful managers in the Southern territory and his promotion is a distinct recognition of his ability. He will associate with him as assistant managers H. C. Lee and E. H. Williams, both of Albany. In addition to these he also will have the benefit of the ripe experience of L. M. McGriff of the Atlanta district, as well as L. J. Levitas, also of the Atlanta district. Mr. Levitas has the distinction of being the largest personal producer in the city of Atlanta. With the transfer of L. S. Morgans, of the Piedmont district, Mr. Gooding's office will be the largest in the city as he will have a staff of 37 men with 5 assistant managers.

REVIVAL ENDS SUNDAY AT CENTRAL CHURCH

Dr. J. S. Raum, evangelist of Cincinnati, will close the revival meeting at the Central Christian church, Washington and Fair streets, Sunday. Dr. Raum wil have for his morning topic "Unoffered and Unanswered Prayer;" at the evening service in honor of Mother's day he will deliver his famous sermon-lecture on "Home."

E. B. Clark, soloist, who has charge of the chorus, is assisted by Miss Junia Sells at the piano and a chorus of trained voices. A special musical program has been arranged for the closing services, promising to be the best of the meetings.

Dr. Raum will remain with the Central Christian church until a permanent location for the church on the south side is decided upon.

The City of Coral Gables

WITH the signing of the Act of Incorporation, Coral Gables becomes a City. The establishment of this new order marks not only a notable milestone in the progress and growth of Coral Gables, but also the culmination of long and carefully worked out plans for the betterment of the suburb.

No city in Florida, perhaps none in the South, very few in this entire country, have made an entry into political life under such unusual auspices as Coral Gables enjoys. It commands now—at its beginning—the things which characterize cities of power and influence. It has its own bank and postoffice, trolley line, business and industrial sections and fine residential districts.

Coral Gables has been conceived and developed into a city along most exceptional lines. It has been the remarkable achievement of one man. It has been beautified along a unified plan and scheme. And it is only because this has been the case that Coral Gables is today America's most beautiful suburb. That the work will be continued along the same harmonious lines in future—and that here will be found beyond all question or doubt America's finest city—the present incorporation insures.

When our great work is completed—when the program of further beautification is assured—then Coral Gables will realize what has been its first and fondest ambition, and become a part of Miami, giving the fullness of its matured beauty and strength to make greater and better the Miami of the future.

Let us take you to Miami and Coral Gables with no cost or obligation to you. Our DeLuxe Highway Pullman Coaches leave each week for Coral Gables, making a delightful sight-seeing tour along the Indian River and Biscayne Bay passing through Palm Beach, Ft. Lauderdale and the many points of interest in Miami. Transportation is free. For full particulars and to make reservation call at the local Coral Gables office.

NEWTON OFFICERS MAKE LIQUOR HAUL

Covington, Ga., May 8.—(Special.) Receiving a tip to be on the lookout for several liquor cars, Newton county officers early today stationed themselves at Mitchell creek bridge, in the western part of the county, and within a few hours had captured 379 gallons of liquor, three automobiles, and arrested two men, who gave the names of T. M. Blackstock and Charlie Young, the latter giving Atlanta as his address.

Stationing themselves at the bridge about 1:30 o'clock, the officers waited two hours, when a heavy car crashed into the barricade. The officers stopped the car by puncturing the tires with bullets. The car contained 150 gallons of liquor.

Later Young came up, and a search revealed 150 gallons of liquor in his car. He was arrested and his car and cargo brought to Covington.

Soon after sun-up Blackstock and his car containing 69 gallons of liquor was taken into custody.

Blackstock and Young, in default of $300 bond asked, were placed in the Covington jail.

Officers making the raid were County Policeman J. C. Nixon, Brad Bohannon, chief of police of Covington; Y. G. Thomas, chief at Porterdale; Fred Blankinship, E. R. Bouchillon, Claude Bailey and J. J. Neely.

AVIATION STUNTS THRILL BIG THRONG

Saturday afternoon for their free "hop."

Other passengers are taken up before and after each performance.

Saturday's program went off without a slip. The fliers were halted for a half hour when the wind became too strong for absolutely safe flying, but the exhibition that came later was well worth waiting for.

Pangborn Opens Show.

After all of the planes had circled and dipped about in a short exhibition, Pilot Pangborn opened the real show. "Upside-down" Pangborn, as he is called, certainly is deserving of the title, and he looped the loop, did the barrel roll, and several other extremely difficult feats before coming to earth.

"Big Jack" Ashcraft then obliged with the Immelman, maple leaf, and a nose dive or two, and earned all of the applause he received.

After a short exhibition by Pilot Freddy Lund, Divalo Krantz, famous dare-devil, staged his wingwalking show, which provided a fitting climax for a fine performance.

Divalo's Thrillers.

One of Divalo's best thrillers came when he stood, arms outstretched, on the top wing of the plane while Pilot Ashcraft looped the loop. He also did a "breakaway," swinging from a rope tied to the landing gear of the plane, and then climbing back to safety on the end of a wing.

He stood, unsupported, from the tail of the ship; hung by his feet from the end of a wing, hung by his knees from the landing gear, and did a number of other stunts that will be long remembered by the crowd.

His crowning achievement, however, will be shown today when he changes from one plane to another in mid-air. While Saturday's show was a revelation, today's, according to all indications, will be better still.

The Constitution is staging the show to show the potentialities of aviation, and to show what can be accomplished here when grading of Candler field has been completed. It also is thought that the circus will have the effect of stimulating interest in aviation here, and may prove instrumental in winning a place for Atlanta on the proposed government air mail route.

GEORGE DISCUSSES "SHORT TERM" EVIL

few men to stifle action on legislation of any kind.

The Short Session Menace.

"They can holdup supply bills, and this is often done to force or defeat legislation under the threat of a filibuster which can be conducted by a handful of men.

"The very knowledge that the session is of short duration is their guarantee of successful operation, and it frequently happens that those who take advantage of this opportunity are men who have been defeated for reelection. This too often results in 'lame duck' legislation.

"If the constitutional amendment assembling congress in January after the November election is adopted members of congress will go to their tasks fresh from the people and relief will be assured from the filibuster-inviting burden of the short term.

"Congress will get down to business with the certainty of being able to force action on any question in which an overwhelming majority of both houses agree that a vote should be taken and yet the rights of a large minority will be protected.

"This could be done under the existing rules of the senate were it not for the short term, but there is no rule that can be devised that will release the menace of the filibuster against the barrier of the short term.

"It is easy to understand how the federal constitution originally provided that the congress elected in November should not meet until December of the year following. In those days there were no railroads and no telegraph. It was impossible to compile the vote of the country and to declare the result of a national election under several months. It could not possibly be known who would compose a congress elected in November until late in the next year.

Result Now Promptly Known.

"Now it is different. Generally speaking, the country knows the day after the election the names of every member of a new congress. The official result can easily be declared within thirty days enabling a new congress to meet on January following the November election.

"The change could be made without in the slightest degree affecting the ordinary administrative channels of the government. It would not be essential to change the date of the inauguration of the president, for as it is the new president elected in November assumes office in March of the following year. If, however, a congress elected at the same election should meet in January there would be many advantages in having the new president take office at the same time, but this is by no means as essential as the change in the time of the meeting of congress which does not assemble until thirteen months after its election.

"Filibustering is practically confined to the short session of congress. The very fact that the supply bills must occupy the attention of this session is an open invitation to a few who want to filibuster to take the supply bills by the throat unless they can have their way in the forcing of measures that ought not to pass, or in the defeat of measures that should pass.

"With the exception of questions affecting the vital and fundamental principles of the government, like the Force bill, no successful filibuster was ever conducted in the long sessions of congress. Men who resort to the filibuster know in advance that it will be hopeless, hence they do not try. They wait for the short session which gives them their opportunity, and without which filibustering tactics would be unavailing.

"The short session of congress is largely responsible for the breeding of the bloc system which now happily seems to be on the wane. We have no room in this country for the bloc system of government, and the sooner it is eliminated the better it will be for the whole country.

"The party system by which each party is held responsible for its conduct is the surest guarantee for good government, and after experimenting a few years and finding out the evils of the bloc system opinion generally has reached the conclusion that it is a dangerous device, and that the sooner the country returns to straight party government with direct responsibility the better it will be.

"If the vice president, to whom I accord sincerity in his effort to bring about relief, will lend his powerful energy to the adoption of the only method by which it can be compassed, that is by the adoption of the proposed constitutional amendment which would eliminate the short session, he will have my hearty support, and that of most of the members of the senate regardless of party affiliation.

"I hope that he will see the matter in this light, and that the president also may see his way clear to bring this all-important matters to the attention of congress in his next message.

"No greater service could be rendered."

MOTHER OF 11 WINS THEATER TICKETS

the theater party given by The Constitution as Mrs. Ledbetter's guests. The other children of Mrs. Ledbetter live in distant cities.

In one of the letters received by The Constitution in the contest a word of appreciation was voiced by Mrs. P. B. Holtzendorff, 105 Lawton street:

"I want to thank you most heartily for your hospitality to us mothers last year and this year," Mrs. Holtzendorff wrote. "I know all of you must have or must have had wonderful mothers to make you so thoughtful of all us other mothers."

Arrangements Complete.

All arrangements for the big party of The Constitution have been completed at the Howard theater, under direction of Manager Kingsmore.

"We think we will give the mothers the greatest show we possibly could offer them," Mr. Kingsmore said. "We have a beautiful prologue, a sweet and appropriate musical program and in 'Charley's Aunt,' the feature picture, with Syd Chaplin in the leading role, we have one of the funniest and greatest pictures ever produced."

The prologue will be a thing of beauty and will be staged with much artistry. It will be based on Whistler's famous painting "Mother," and will be presented with some wonderful lighting effects. The text of Kipling's famous poem, "Mother o' Mine," will be thrown on the screen and the beautiful heart-stirring song, "Little Mother o' Mine," will be sung by Charles Wynne, prominent Atlanta tenor. A medley of appropriate music based on Schuman's "Traumerei," will be played by the orchestra under the direction of Alex Keese, conductor.

"Charley's Aunt" is known as the stage comedy classic for two generations. The screen version with Syd Chaplin as principal comedian in the farce, is said to be even funnier than the stage production. This famous picture will be run throughout "Mother's Week" at the Howard. The Old Home Town band, featuring the old-time fiddlers, including Clayton McMitchen, champion of several fiddling contests, will provide a lighter touch to the program.

Admission By Coupon.

Mothers more than 40 years old are requested to clip the admission coupon printed at the end of this article. In view of the fact that this party has been staged particularly for the mothers more than 40 years old, the request has been made that no children be brought to the theater and that all companions of the mothers be more than 40 years old wherever possible. This does not apply to the younger people who escort aged or infirm mothers to the theater.

One of the features will be the entertainment of a delegation from the Home for Old Women, led by Miss L. L. Simpson, head of that institution. The aged women will be transported to and from the theater in special taxicabs.

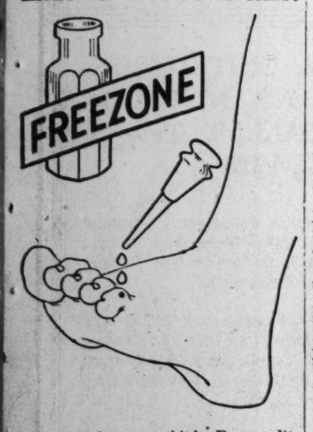

Guests of The Constitution and the Howard theater at the special party Monday morning will be presented with flowers in observance of the Mother's day theme. The flowers will be given through cooperation of the Atlanta Florists' association.

Gardens Need Rain.

Taylorsville, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Gardens are badly in need of rain. The vegetables are wilted for lack of moisture. Early cabbage is maturing into runty heads and strawberries drying up on the vines instead of ripening. A seasonable year the crop of strawberries will last until the latter part of June, but now with this unusual dry season they are already practically gone.

CORNS

Doesn't hurt one bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot calluses, without soreness or irritation.

HERN JOINS FORCES OF RALPH B. MARTIN

Roy W. Hern has resigned his position as sales manager of the Georgia Wholesale company to become associated with the Ralph B. Martin company, real estate agents, whose office is in the Atlanta Trust Company building, where he will welcome his many friends.

Mr. Hern has resided in Atlanta many years and was a captain in the army during the world war. He has had extensive experience in building and selling homes.

Mr. Hern will specialize in selling homes and suburban acreage.

superintendent, will be elected Tuesday. At present, all nominations must be made by the superintendent, and the board may approve or reject his nominees.

Expect Renominations.

While Superintendent Sutton was absent from the city Saturday, and has given no indication of who he will propose, it is expected that all officials now in office will be renominated.

They include H. Reid Hunter and Miss Mary Postell, assistant superintendents; M. E. Coleman, director of census and attendance; R. L. McCullough, business manager, and all clerks in the school department.

Supervisors, principals, and all new teachers also will be elected Tuesday. Teachers now in the service, however, all are under civil service, and will not be voted on.

Board members have maintained an unbroken silence on whether or not they will approve present department heads for another year, but reports have it that there will be opposition to several.

DRY NAVY BLOCKADE CHECKS RUM FLEET

earlier in the year. As an example of what this kind of warfare leads to, a government patrol boat at Key West, Fla., mysteriously burst into flames following an explosion of unknown origin. A pilot boat adjacent also was destroyed, although the crew escaped.

RUM RUNNERS BEATEN OFF AND LIQUOR IS SEIZED.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 9.—The first skirmish in the big rum war off the Long Island and New Jersey coasts came today and indicated that the coast guard's blockade at sea is not impregnable.

Rum runners who tried to land 100 cases of liquor from the Delaware river were beaten off and the liquor seized by coast guardsmen, but the 45-foot launch of the runners apparently had been able to get out of the rum fleet, load up and return with its cargo.

Reports of the skirmish, in which the coast guardsmen were said to have fired some 400 rounds of ammunition as they gave chase, were received at the fifth district headquarters here.

Surprised by the coast guardsmen as they sought to land and realizing they were likely to be overtaken, the rum runners threw the liquor into the water and raced away in their boat. The coast guard pursued and fired after them. There was no return fire from their quarry and none of the law enforcement shots took effect.

SEVERE BLOW IS DEALT DETROIT RUM-RUNNERS.

Detroit, Mich., May 9.—The first severe blow dealt rum-runners on the Great Lakes this spring came today when two boats of the dry navy took a run down to Lake Erie, after spending the winter in Ecorse, a down-river suburb, seized three motor boats loaded with ten quarter barrels of beer, 642 quarts of whisky and 10,920 quarts of beer and arrested seven men.

All seven men pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Commissioner J. Stanley Hurd in United States district court and were held under bond of $2,000 each.

DRYS SCORE BIG VICTORY IN BOSTON SUBURBS.

Boston, Mass., May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—The liquor war ashore here saw a signal victory tonight for an army of 200 state police and constabulary, aided by almost as many city officers, who attacked 50 wet spots simultaneously in Cambridge and Somerville, seizing quantities of alleged contraband and bundling 150 persons into jails.

Homes, stores and saloons were entered and customers as well as proprietors were taken to the East Cambridge jail. Spotlights played on a crowd of 2,000 persons who stood about the building watching the operations. A circle of armed men stood guard as truckloads of prisoners were brought in.

The liquor fleet on Boston's rum row dwindled to three vessels today, observers reported, when the schooner Hendrey transferred her cargo to the Beatrice and put out to sea. The Beatrice was deeply loaded, it was said, with liquor cases piled high on her decks, indicating slow business.

HEALTHMOBILE GOES TO FORT VALLEY

Fort Valley, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Sponsored by the child welfare committee of the Woman's club the state board of health will send their healthmobile to Fort Valley Monday and Tuesday. Dr. Alice Moses, with a trained nurse, Miss Beulah Fort, will be at the high school auditorium Monday afternoon where instruction will be given to mothers in the care of children and in domestic science department on Monday afternoon and Tuesday, examinations will be made.

On Monday evening health picture slides will be shown.

Arrangements have also been made to have the clinic at the mission on Fairground street in the mill section of the city.

NEGRO FARMERS TOLD OF BOLL WEEVIL FIGHT

Quitman, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—County Agent Young and a party of business men held a meeting this week with negro farmers at Simmons Hill school and instructed and encouraged them in fighting the boll weevil.

The advice given by Dr. R. H. J. DeLoach in a recent meeting with white farmers was repeated to the negroes and the meeting was made practical by answering questions.

The cotton acreage in the county is not as large as usual, but the crop is looking unusually well.

Quitman Observes Holiday.

Quitman, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Beginning this week, the business houses of Quitman close Thursday afternoons at 1 o'clock for the summer half-holiday. This plan was tried out last summer and did not reduce the volume of business, while giving store employees a little recreation.

TRAINMEN DELEGATES LEAVE FOR MEETING

Determined efforts will be made by Atlanta delegates to the Cleveland convention of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, to bring the 1926 convention to this city, according to J. T. Neal and E. Walter Trippe, prominent Atlantans. Mr. Neal is Atlanta's delegates and will be accompanied by Mr. Trippe.

The convention will open May 12 and many matters of particular importance to organized trainmen are expected to develop, according to local members of the order. "While Mr. Neal is battling in the business sessions," Mr. Trippe said, "I will be battling the boys for the next convention. We have strongest assurances of the help of the convention bureau and leading civic organizations and if we miss every delegate to the convention will know that Atlanta's representatives wanted the convention—and wanted it badly."

AERONAUTICAL SHOW IS GIVEN APPROVAL

north Georgia and tobacco-growing in south Georgia.

"Atlanta is not selfish," said Colonel Paxon.

He then called on the club to give its best efforts to the backing of the movement for an air mail line between Atlanta and New York, for a great aerial exposition here in October and for a meeting of aerial interests of the nation here in the near future.

Kriegshaber Speaks.

Victor H. Kriegshaber, chairman of the aviation committee, was then introduced.

Mr. Kriegshaber said that while the present objects of the movement to make Atlanta a great aviation center were of course centered on bringing an air-mail route to this city and upbuilding commercial aviation, with Atlanta as southern headquarters for the industry, back of it all was the thought that commercial aviation was developing the country's air resources for use as a defensive arm in the event of war.

Mr. Kriegshaber referred to the first airplane tests conducted by the Wright brothers in North Carolina in 1903 and painted a graphic picture of the growth of flying since that time.

"America, however, is far behind other nations in the development of commercial aviation," said Mr. Kriegshaber. He then lauded the generosity of Asa Candler, Jr., in giving to the city Candler field as a municipal flying field on terms of rental that were practically nothing, with the option of buying at the end of five years at a price which, he said, was but a fraction of the actual value of the property.

Recalls Auto Show.

Mr. Kriegshaber referred to the creation of the Atlanta Speedway association in 1908, with the subsequent automobile racing meets held here and the first national automobile show outside of New York and Chicago.

"At that time the result of this activity in automobile development was that Atlanta became, and has remained to this day, the center of the automobile industry in the southeast," said Mr. Kriegshaber, "and I venture to predict that history is about to repeat itself and that, as a result of the plans made here tonight, Atlanta, in ten years, will be the center of a thriving aeronautical industry in the south."

There are 80 concerns in the United States now engaged in the building of airplanes, Mr. Kriegshaber said. He also said that, when the air exposition is held in October, it is hoped that either the Shenandoah or the Los Angeles will be sent here by the federal government.

He referred to the numerous leading citizens who had indorsed the plans, and regretted that William Randolph Hearst, who was invited, was unable to attend the meeting by reason of sickness in his family.

Support Is Promised.

General Douglas McArthur, commander of the fourth corps area, was heartily in favor of the move, said Mr. Kriegshaber, and had promised to secure a squadron of army planes for the exposition. Governor Walker, Mayor Sims, Virlyn B. Moore, of the county commissioners, and President W. R. C. Smith, of the chamber of commerce, had all strongly indorsed the proposal, stated Mr. Kriegshaber.

Colonel T. W. Darrah, of fourth corps headquarters, spoke next, stating that the army was intensely interested in the commercial development of flying, first because it was an important factor in creating a strong arm of air defenses in case of war.

Colonel Darrah warned Atlanta, however, that she ought to make her plans now for expansion of her air terminal facilities in the near future. "You will need vast aerial terminals within ten years' time," he said. "You must educate your people in the safety and use of air travel and the proposed exposition offers a splendid opportunity for this."

Colonel Paxon then stated that, although unable to attend the meeting United States Senators William J. Harris and Walter F. George had both strongly endorsed the proposal and Senator George, as a member of the senate army committee, had promised to do everything possible in securing an extensive exhibit of flying machines from the government.

Captain Arms Speaks.

Captain T. S. Arms, of the U. S. Army, spoke next, telling of the safety of travel.

"Insurance rates on freight carried by air in Europe are less than on freight carried by train," he said. "Safety of the airplane for passenger travel is far greater by train," he added, and told of the conveniences of the new form of transportation as illustrated by lines running out of his home city of Cleveland.

Captain Walter G. Roper spoke as representing the navy. He stated that regardless of predictions, neither the airplane nor the sumarine will be outlawed in war and he said America should develop commercial flying as the basis of aerial defense in wartime.

Councilman William B. Hartsfield, chairman of the aviation committee of city council, told them of the work being done in grading and perfecting the new flying field at Candler field and urged that, not only should an air exposition be held here in October, but that contests in speed, reliability and altitude should be conducted here between rival airplane manufacturers.

John Slaton, Jr., Speaks.

John Slaton, Jr., urged the establishment of a course in aeronautical engineering at Georgia Tech, and B. S. Barker, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, told of the great value in planning these air-mail routes, in drawing closer together the people of the different cities.

R. E. L. Cone, southeastern head of the National Aeronautical association, spoke briefly of the plans of that organization for aerial development in the southeast.

Other speakers included Marion Smith, Virlyn B. Moore, Henderson Hallman, Carl Hutcheson, Dr. Ernest Quillian, Dr. M. L. Brittain, James A. Hollomon, Clark Howell, Jr., Major John S. Cohen, Raymond S. Klein, of the Macy interests of New York, and Mayor Sims.

Mayor Sims Speaks.

Mayor Sims told of the importance of such developments as this in linking together the entire state. He referred to the recent meeting held in the interest of an air-mail route in Savannah and stated that another group of Atlanta citizens would be invited, in a few days, to attend a similar meeting in Macon.

Mayor Sims called for a resolution of thanks to Asa Candler, Jr., for his generosity in helping the city to secure Candler field as a landing field, and paid a glowing tribute to the value of Mr. Candler as a citizen of Atlanta and of Georgia.

Councilman Horace Russell introduced the resolutions indorsing the aeronautical exposition plan, which were carried unanimously, and the meeting adjourned.

Resolutions Passed.

The resolutions, as adopted, read as follows:

"Whereas: The development of aviation as it affects the nations and particularly the creation of air mail routes, and

"Whereas the holding of a great aeronautical exposition in Atlanta at Lakewood in October is heartily indorsed and approved by the Presidents' club, the governor, mayor, members of council and county commissioners, and other citizens assembled.

"The directors of the Southeastern fair are earnestly requested to promote such an exposition in order that our people may become better acquainted with the present developments in aeronautics and learn to appreciate the tremendous importance to our entire country, of this comparatively new field of transportation, both for commercial use and national defense."

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT SELECTS JACKSON

Jackson, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) The State Highway department has selected Jackson as headquarters for this district and a building to care for the men and machinery is now being erected on South Oak street.

The city is furnishing free water, lights and a site for the building, which will be ready for use within the next few days.

Student at Emory Tells of Attack By Three Bandits

A story of a mysterious attack by three men in an automobile was told Saturday by W. C. Stearns, 24, a theological student at Emory university. Stearns said he was hailed Thursday night by three youths whom he took to be Emory students, while waiting for a street car at Pryor street and Edgewood avenue. He says they drove down Marietta and he remembers passing the municipal market. The next he knew, he states, he woke up in a ditch alongside a plowed field on a country road.

"My first impression was that I had been blackjacked or sandbagged," Stearns said Saturday, "but there was no bruise on me, though there was nausea which suggested chloroform. My pockets had been rifled and I was penniless.

"I saw a town in the distance, and making my way there, found it to be Bremen. I inquired for the Methodist preacher and was taken in, fed and helped as much as possible by Rev. R. P. Tatum. He loaned me $2 and saw me on the Atlanta train."

California Graduate.

Stearns is a resident of Berkeley, Cal., a graduate of the University of California, and is in his second year at Emory. Bremen is about 50 miles from Atlanta.

Iowa Police Chief To Parade

:: :: DISPLAY PLANNED TO WARN PUBLIC :: ::

Bootleggers Through Streets

Des Moines, Ia., May 9.—Parades of arrested bootleggers through the streets of Des Moines, spectacles of bootleggers sitting, like Puritan witches, in neat wooden stocks in public squares, bootleggers riding to jail in "Black Marias" decorated with placards exposing their shame, are all features of the campaign projected by Chief of Police James Cavender, who has decided to base an anti-rum campaign on colorful features people will remember.

Cavender's idea took form last week when police towed a wrecked automobile through the city. Two women had been injured in the wreck, after what police said had been a drinking party. Thus the car was decorated with placards reading "Beware the Poison Bootleggers Sell"—"Don't Let the Bootlegger Fool You!" and similar warning signs.

"For some reason the liquor laws are not now, and never have been, taken seriously by our courts," Cavender says. "Bootleggers arrested by police are brought up in court time after time only to have their cases dismissed by a judge who manages to find some technicality.

"As a result of these practices, there is only one thing left for the police to do, and that is to educate the people to understand that the laws of the land must be enforced. The people must have impressed on their minds where the bootlegger really stands in society."

To do this he plans to adopt a graphic method.

Cavender says that he plans to attach signs to the "Black Maria" used for transporting bootleggers to jail.

The signs, he says, probably will read:

"This is the Bootlegger's Special—Jail Bound," or "Beware of the Demon Rum Else You Follow Them—to Jail."

Parades of the city bootleggers captured by the police dry squads would be weekly affairs under the chief's plan. All persons taken into custody would be placed aboard flat trucks, and placards pinned on them telling their names. They would then be driven through the city.

Arrangements are now being considered for the building of several large wooden stocks in which the sellers of illicit liquor can be exhibited.

German Churches To Start Nationwide Prohibition Move With Addresses From Pulpits

Leaders of Movement Hope To Have 15,000,000 Votes Pledged to Cause Before September.

Frankfort, Germany, May 9—(By the Associated Press.)—A nationwide drive with the ultimate object of putting Germany in the dry column will be launched tomorrow with a series of addresses from pulpits of all denominations. The leaders of the movement say they hope to have 15,000,000 votes pledged to the cause before September.

The national executive committee for local option, encouraged by the response given to the movement in Koenigsburg during the last several days, has designated the week beginning May 10 as a period in which to mobilize the dry sentiment in hope of impressing both national and local legislative bodies with the sincerity of the movement and the determination of its backers to see it through.

The national committee comprises 40 members, each of whom represents an influential political, civic, religious, social or labor organization. Its chairman is Dr. F. H. Otto Melle, director of the German Preachers' seminary of this city, and a pioneer in the dry crusade.

Women Aid Move.

Women figure prominently in the movement, one of the strongest contingents in the prohibition army being the Evangelical Women's league, with more than a million members.

Failure to secure prompt and efficient legislation through the national parliament and local diets has prompted the leaders of the movement to adopt the local option device as a quicker method of gauging public sentiment as regards prohibition.

Not only do they believe local option better suited to deal the liquor traffic a decisive blow, but they believe that a substantial dry vote will have a favorable effect abroad.

Financial Effect.

"Germany spends 2,500,000,000 marks annually for beer, wines and liquors, which is anything but flattering when it is recalled that the Dawes reparation loan amounted to only 800,000,000 marks," one of the dry leaders remarked by way of reflecting on the financial effect of prohibition on Germany's public and private economies.

Thus far the campaign has been waged wholly with meager funds contributed from private sources and the national committee admits that it is often pressed for money with which to pay printers' bills, hall rent and other expenses.

Dr. Melle has received numerous messages from the United States complimenting him on the progress made by the movement in Germany.

SAM MOORE ESCAPES GANG SECOND TIME

Sam Moore, convict in the Seminole county gang, has escaped again, according to reports received at the Georgia prison commission office Saturday.

Moore was serving a sentence of from 1 to 5 years for burglary and had only eight days more to serve when he escaped March 20. He was returned to complete his term, after being arrested in Donalsonville on the charge of attempting to steal an automobile. The escape robbed him of his good behavior credit and he started to work again to finish his term.

He escaped for the second time on May 6, according to the advices received Saturday from the Seminole county warden.

SINGERS OF BARROW TO HONOR COMPOSER

Winder, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Sponsored by the Barrow County Singing convention a special song service in honor of Professor Judson L. Moore, of Bethlehem, will be held at the school auditorium at Winder Sunday, May 17. R. W. Haynie is president of the convention and John B. Williams is secretary. They have active charge of the meeting and are arranging an appropriate program. Professor Moore has taught singing classes in Georgia and other southern states for more than 50 years and is well known at singing conventions. He is held in the highest esteem by his associates and pupils, and this is the third annual meeting held in his honor. Singers in all parts of the state have been invited to attend, and a large crowd is expected.

At the meeting in his honor last year Judge R. B. Russell delivered an appropriate address to an audience estimated to be over a thousand persons.

AIR EXPOPSITION PLANS ARE LAID

Plans for a great aeronautical exposition to be held in Atlanta next October in conjunction with the Southeastern fair were adopted Saturday night at a dinner-meeting of the Presidents' club at the Biltmore hotel.

It is believed, according to speakers at the dinner, that as a result of such an exposition, Atlanta will become the center of the rapidly-developing aerial industry and its allied businesses, just as she is now the center of the automobile industry for the southeast.

Plans were laid for a special committee, which will go to Washington in the near future to confer with government authorities on sending to Atlanta examples of the numerous types of heavier-than-air and lighter-than-air flying machines used in the various branches of government service, for the exhibition here. Efforts will also be made to secure a visit of the Shenandoah, the Los Angeles or a similar great dirigible to this city during the fair.

Another department of the show will be devoted to accessories of the aviation business, and it is believed that such an exhibition will prove as interesting and of as great appeal as the annual automobile show held here.

Recent acquisition by the city of Candler field as a municipal landing field, was referred to as the inspiration for the proposed aeronautical exposition, and speakers expressed confidence that in a few months' time Atlanta will be the center of a passenger and light freight air service linking this, the metropolis of the southeast, with other cities of the south.

The idea for an aeronautical exposition was first conceived by Colonel Fred J. Paxon, president of the Southeastern Fair association, and Victor H. Kriegshaber, chairman of the aeronautical committee. The proposal has been enthusiastically indorsed by Governor Walker, Mayor Sims, Chairman Virlyn B. Moore, of the Fulton county board of commissioners; President W. R. C. Smith, of the Chamber of Commerce, and many other leading citizens.

W. E. FARRAR, DEAN OF MERCER, DIES

Macon, Ga., May 9.—Dr. William E. Farrar, dean of Mercer university, died suddenly at his home here last night from an acute heart attack. He has been ill for several days but his condition was not regarded by members of his family as serious.

During the recent meeting of the Georgia Education association, he fell over a chair while reading a paper to teachers of Lanier High school and since that time he had been ill.

He came to Mercer in 1919 as dean of the college from Bethel college, having declined the presidency of that school to come to Mercer.

For the past six years he had been dean of the arts and science college at Mercer and professor of Greek and Latin. He was 59 years old and was born at Lynchburg, Va. He received his grammar and high school training there and graduated from Richmond college, Va., in 1890. He taught school and in colleges before receiving his M. A. degree from Bethel college. He taught at Union Baptist university, Jackson Tenn., for a number of years before becoming a member of Bethel college faculty.

He was noted for his learning in philosophy and was author of the text book, "Advance in Classical Philosophy in the Nineteenth Century."

Besides his wife, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. T. D. Evans, of Fitzgerald; Miss Clara Bond Farrar, student at Wesleyan college, and Miss Martha B. Farrar, teacher at the Lanier High school here; a son, W. E. Farrar, Jr., a senior at Mercer university. He is also survived by three brothers, Mercer Farrar, of Cranford, N. J.; T. L. Farrar, of Charlottesville, Va., and Howard Farrar, of Bridgeport, Conn.

The funeral will be held from the home here Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Farrar, before her marriage, was Miss Clara Bond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Bond, of Brownsville, Tenn.

Sudden Death at Rome Of O. Willingham Takes Well-Known Citizen

Rome, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—The death here Thursday of O. Willingham, 54, president of the Exchange National bank, removes from Rome one of its well known and best liked citizens. Although a resident of this city for only six years he had become identified with every civic movement looking to the betterment of the community.

The death of Mr. Willingham was unexpected. It was not known that he was seriously ill, death following a serious operation performed five days before his death.

He came to Rome from Cedartown, and had been president of the bank for four years. For two years previous to that time he was in the automobile business here.

His funeral, held in his hotel-apartment, was one of the most largely attended ever held here. The services were conducted by Rev. J. E. Sammons, of the First Baptist church, of which Mr. Willingham was a deacon. Exchange bank officers formed an honorary escort.

Mr. Willingham is survived by his widow; his mother, Mrs. E. P. Willingham; one sister, Mrs. Wiley Casey; two brothers, Ire and E. E. Willingham, all of Cedartown.

Southwest Georgians Enjoy Big Picnic

The picnic of the club was held Saturday at Grant park, members bringing along baskets of delicious food which was spread a la the "good old days." A number of short addresses by members were enjoyable after-dinner affairs.

New Navy Court Ordered to Hear Liquor Charges

Washington, May 9.—A new court will be designated by Secretary Wilbur to try Machinist Frank M. Hendricks at Hampton Roads on charges of surrounding the arrival of the naval transport Beaufort at Norfolk February 24 from the West Indies with liquor aboard.

This decision was reached after receipt at the department of the protest of Hendricks, contending that the court-martial board which had just completed trial and acquittal of Commander D. W. Fuller, commanding officer of the transport, was not competent to consider his case. The contention was that through consideration of the facts in the Fuller trial the court had thrown itself open to the possibility of prejudice.

Whether new court-martial boards will be ordered for the trial of the other four defendants in the case was not indicated today. A delay of several days in the trial of Hendricks is in prospect, as a precept will have to be drawn up, a new board designated, and the officers will have to reach Hampton Roads to proceed with the case.

Under the original plan, one board was to try all of the cases severally.

Manslaugher Verdict For C. L. Strickland: Killed Brother-in-Law

Clyde, Ga., May 9.—Convicted of manslaughter for shooting and killing John Carter, his brother-in-law, near Lanier several weeks ago, C. L. Strickland, following his trial in the superior court here, was yesterday sentenced to serve from one to two years in the penitentiary. He was tried on the charge of murder.

Strickland shot Carter with a shotgun while the latter was beating Mrs. Carter, who is Strickland's sister, it was claimed. Mrs. Carter and Strickland told substantially the same story at the trial. No one else saw the shooting but there were several witnesses who testified to various incidents of the case.

The case of the six men charged with shooting County Policemen Weirs and Griffith from ambush, badly injuring them and blinding Griffith, was not presented to the grand jury as was expected. Sheriff J. C. Bell, stated, however, this fact does not mean that the case will be dropped. He declared the matter will come before the grand jury later.

FRENCH CABINET GETS GERMAN NOTE

Paris, May 9.—The terms of the note, virtually agreed upon among the allies in which they will tell Germany that she must disarm as stipulated by the treaty of Versailles, were laid before the French cabinet today by Foreign Minister Briand. The allied council of ambassadors is expected to approve them next Tuesday and the note will go forward to Berlin immediately thereafter.

The text as it stands is the result of a comparative study of two drafts, one made by the British and the other by the French. There were no important divergencies between the two texts, it was said in official circles this morning and only a few minor details remain to be fixed.

The allies want the German government to have the first knowledge of what the note contains, but it is known that the entente powers will make it clear that they consider the violations reported by the allied military control mission as serious and justifying energetic action.

The note gives special importance to the accounts in the control mission's report of unauthorized recruiting and the constitution of a full staff for a powerful army. The only points on which the allies disagreed centered around the procedure to be followed in case Germany resisted their summons to comply with the treaty.

Whether the occupation of Cologne will be indefinitely prolonged if the Germans refuse to give satisfactory assurances is left to be determined later.

Members of the cabinet agreed that France will reserve the right to reach an agreement with England and Belgium on the essential clauses of the proposed security pact with Germany, before admitting the matter in direct negotiations regarding the pact.

Home Burns.

Wadley, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—The residence of M. A. Evans was totally destroyed by fire here this morning at 9 o'clock, the loss being estimated at $10,000, partly covered by insurance.

It was one of the most beautiful homes in Wadley.

Mrs. Willebrandt Is Awarded Medal For Prison Work

New York, May 9.—Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general of the United States, whose department controls federal prisons, has been awarded a medal by the national committee on prisons and prison labor for outstanding service in prison work during 1924, it was announced tonight.

The award to Mrs. Willebrandt was in recognition of her influence in the reforms in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., and the establishment of an industrial institution for federal women prisoners to be built at Alderson, W. Va. Such an institution, the national committee said in its announcement, has been made necessary by the Volstead act and the increasing number of women convicted of smuggling, violation of the Mann act and other offenses.

The Texas Medical association was recognized for physical examination of inmates of state prisons, made by 65 of its members gratis, disclosing conditions which are said to have brought on a state-wide agitation for better prison conditions.

MACON STUDENT WINS PRIZE IN CONTEST

Macon, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Rembert Starr, a student at Lanier High school, from the Masonic Orphans' home in this city, has won the first prize for the state in the American Chemical society's competition, a prize of $20, it was learned here today.

This automatically puts him into the national competition, for which a scholarship at Yale university is a prize.

Starr's essay in the contest was, "Relation of Chemistry to Health and Disease."

THEATER TO GIVE RECEIPTS TO FUND

All proceeds of the opening shows Monday of the Cameo theater, big new playhouse which opens Monday at 61 Peachtree street, will be turned into the fund now being raised for families of the six firemen who lost their lives last Wednesday in a Decatur street blaze.

"Not our net profits, but entire proceeds will be given this worthy fund," according to Thomas G. Coleman, manager of Atlanta's new playhouse. "We feel that we want to do something for stricken relatives of the men who were crushed and burned in the fire," he said, "and we have decided to give all receipts on opening day to the cause," Mr. Coleman said.

The Cameo theater, the newest addition to Atlanta's circle of high-class motion picture houses, will show only the biggest film successes, at popular prices, after they have been shown at other theaters, thus giving Atlanta movie lovers an opportunity to see the greatest shows at popular prices on what movie men term "re-run" programs.

On Monday the theater will open with "The Thief in Paradise," with Doris Kenyon, Aileen Pringle and Ronald Coleman starring. The usual number of shows will be presented and receipts throughout the day will be added to the firemen's relief fund. Atlanta movie lovers who have had the opportunity of seeing "The Thief in Paradise" appreciate its worth as a motion picture and interest, it is said, is as enthusiastic as when the picture was first shown here some time ago. Other of the most expensive and elaborate picture productions have been billed and henceforth local movie lovers will have this unusual opportunity to see again the outstanding movie shows which have visited this city before.

Mr. Coleman stated Saturday that the Cameo theater is modern throughout; that the latest apparatus has been installed and that every convenience for patrons has been uppermost in arranging the new theater.

Mother's Day Message Sent To War Vets

Washington, May 9.—An illustrated Mother's day message printed in five colors will be presented each of the 30,000 disabled war veterans in hospitals throughout the country tomorrow by the American Legion auxiliary. The message, which will be delivered in each case in the name of the veteran's mother, follows: "The American Legion auxiliary greets you today in the name of your own mother. We are thinking of you, and our hearts are with you as we renew our pledge of thoughtful loyal devotion on this day of days, and beyond today, throughout the whole year.

"We admire your courage, your service to your country, and your plucky smile in the face of adversity.

"To us you are our country's most precious citizen, and we feel that in serving you we are carrying a happy obligation.

"We know that were your mother here today she would give you her blessing and so we say to you for her, 'God bless you'."

CHICAGO MAN DUPED IN BUYING FAKE OIL STOCK

Chicago, May 9.—Charles W. Babcock, president of a truck and motor bus company, paid $25,000 for oil stock he had been told in Miami, Fla., he could resell for $37,500, he has told the police. When time came for the sale the prospective purchasers and the man from whom he bought the stock had disappeared.

Babcock reported he met a Mr. Davenport in Florida, who represented himself as the brother of the president of an Oklahoma oil company. Davenport referred Babcock to Frank J. Gunn, Chicago. Gunn, Davenport said, had 12,500 shares of stock he wished to sell and there were two New York brokers, named Fleming and Simpson, who would buy the stock from Babcock at $1 a share more than he paid.

Babcock came to Chicago, he said, found Gunn and bought the stock after Fleming and Simpson assured him they would buy it from him. He paid for the stock Thursday and sought the alleged New York brokers. They had vanished. Gunn, too, had disappeared.

MERCER AND EMORY DEBATERS MAY MEET TO DECIDE CHAMPS

Macon, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—The debating council of Mercer university announced today that, based on Mercer's debating record for the present year in which five out of five intercollegiate debates have been won, that Emory university would be challenged to a debate to decide the open forensic championship of the south. Emory bases a claim to the southern first honor on a record similar to Mercer's.

Besides having been given judge's decisions over Georgia Tech twice in debate this year, the Mercer speakers have downed Auburn, Florida and Oglethorpe. With the close of this season, Dr. A. P. Montague, vice president, announced that in the past five years Mercer has won 18 out of 23 intercollegiate debates.

Commissioners To Meet In Athens on May 20 For Important Session

Athens, Ga., May 9.—County commissioners from all sections of the state will be in attendance at the 11th annual convention of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia, which convenes in Athens May 20 for three days. The Clarke county commissioners will be host to the visiting officials.

Athens was decided upon as the convention city at a recent meeting of the officers and executive committee of the association held in Atlanta, at which time official notification was sent to all of the county commissioners in the state.

"A hard-surfaced road connecting every county seat in Georgia," is the motto of the association, and this subject in itself will be the center of much discussion by the commissioners. Dr. J. H. Heard, of Macon, is president of the body; J. S. Dunn, Molena, chairman, and Fred Houser, Atlanta, secretary-treasurer.

According to officials of the association, all of the county commissioners in Georgia are urged to attend the convention, many questions of importance to be up for discussion and action.

The commissioners of Clarke county have arranged an elaborate entertainment program for the visiting commissioners.

Hawaiian Army and Navy Forces Are Held Inadequate For Security of Pearl Harbor

Maneuvers Seen as Dramatic Illustration of Deficiencies of U. S. Defense in Pacific.

Washington, May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—War and navy department officials are satisfied that the gigantic war game just concluded at Hawaii served as a dramatic illustration of deficiencies in the defenses of the Island of Oahu which have been repeatedly called to the attention of congress in the past few years.

In advance of receipt of the final report on the maneuvers, these officials do not believe that any striking new defect will prove to have been disclosed, but are confident that the sham battle will enable presentation of the Hawaiian defense problem on a basis of established facts instead of theories.

That the combined naval and military forces now maintained at Hawaii cannot insure the securities of the Pearl harbor naval base against a strong surprise attack is expected to be shown in the report by Admiral Coontz and Major General Hines, chief umpires. The actual problem of the maneuvers was to test the sufficiency and personnel and equipment of the peace-time garrison of Oahu island.

Defects which it is believed the report will point out in the army garrison are:

First, that 13,000 men in the regular army garrison and forming the mobile defense is too small a force by from 5,000 to 7,000 men.

Second, that failure to provide adequate means for interior communications on Oahu, which includes all allied elements of modern military communications, would have rendered doubtful the success of even a larger garrison in defending the island against landing operations.

Air Service Lacking.

Third, that the present strength of the army air service detachment assigned to the Hawaiian islands is not sufficient.

Fourth, that the present equipment of the garrison air service, particularly in long range scouting planes, is wholly inadequate to afford the defending force necessary information of an approaching enemy in time to repel a landing.

On the naval side it is predicted that there will be again disclosed vital weaknesses in the composition of the fleet, among them:

First, lack of modern post-treaty high-speed 10,000-ton light cruisers.

Second, lack of sea-keeping fleet submarines.

Third, lack of large high-speed airplane carriers and of adequate numbers of modern aircraft with the fleet itself.

Weakness of Navy.

In addition, it is explained, that naval weakness will be disclosed from the report of Rear Admiral MacDonald, who was associated with Major General Lewis in the joint defense of Oahu. From that aspect, it appears probable to officers here that lack of mine planting submarines as a part of the regular naval contingent assigned to the Hawaiian islands will be emphasized. It is felt also that the peace-time naval forces at the island should include modern cruisers and naval aircraft with the surface auxiliaries necessary for long range air operations.

Incidental to the presence of the United States fleet in Hawaiian waters, but not arising out of the joint maneuvers, there have already arisen wide discussions of the inadequacy of the Pearl harbor naval base to serve the fleet, such service being the fundamental reason for establishing any defense whatever of the islands. The question has to do with the creation of channels deep and straight enough to permit entry by the heaviest battleships on any tide; dredging within the harbor of an area sufficient to permit the mooring of the entire fleet and erection of additional dry dock facilities.

Kiwanis Club May Be Formed at Monticello At Meeting on May 15

Jackson, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—The Jackson, Madison and Eatonton Kiwanis clubs will hold a meeting in Monticello May 15 in the interest of organizing a Kiwanis club in this city. O. A. Pound, president of the Jackson club, will preside and talks will be made by members of the three clubs.

Citizens of Monticello are showing considerable interest in a Kiwanis club and a delegation of citizens from there were guests of the Jackson club Tuesday night, when talks were made by Past President H. M. Fletcher, of the Jackson club, and W. A. Dozier, lieutenant governor of the central district.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

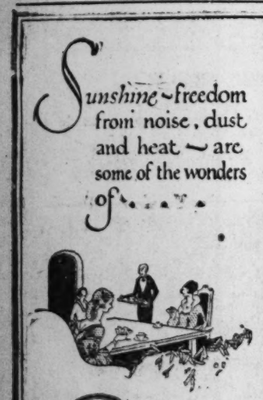

Truth of Trite Old Saying Is Once Again Exemplified.

Years and years ago, when advertising was yet in its infancy, the alluring slogan adopted for use by its cohorts was: "It Pays To Advertise." Trite but true, which nobody denies in these days.

However, it is pleasing occasionally to submit further evidence of the truth of that old saying. As an example, the advertising in these columns of the new dictionary. Of course, everybody needed a new dictionary; yet almost everybody had an old one. Straightforward and truthful advertising, consistently followed up, has been the means of convincing newspaper readers that this particular dictionary is all that is claimed for it, and that the acceptance of the offer is wholly to their advantage.

The result of this publicity has been most gratifying to all concerned. It again proves that advertising pays—when it is placed in the right newspaper.

Holmes Institute Will Stage Annual Concert at City Auditorium May 17

Group of Holmes institute students who will be addressed by leading citizens on May 17 at the annual musical concert of the school.

Mayor Walter A. Sims will deliver the opening address at the third annual musical concert of the Holmes institute, which will be held in the city auditorium Sunday afternoon, May 17, 3 o'clock. Captain George M. Hope, J. H. Ewing, Oscar Mills, Judge O. H. Pucket, John S. Owens, Virlyn B. Moore, M. L. Thrower and I. M. Sheffield will occupy seats on the platform and will speak on general welfare of the colored people in the south.

The concert will be featured by plantation melodies and negro spirituals, which have always been enjoyed by the white people of the south.

A chorus composed of the students of the Holmes institute will sing special selections. One of the most interesting features of the program will be a singing contest between the leading colored church choirs of the city. The concert will mark the tenth anniversary of the Holmes institute which will close May 31.

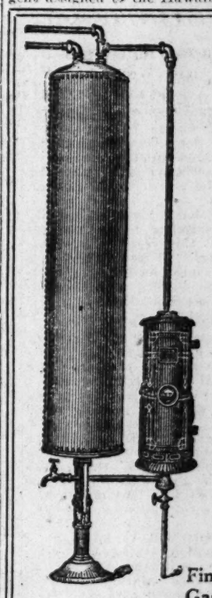

The principal songs which will be sung are "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," "Give Me That Old-Time Religion," "Down by the River Side" and "Old Kentucky Home."

Holmes institute was founded by Rev. B. R. Holmes, president, more than 10 years ago. Rev. Holmes is one of the conservative leaders of his race. He was born and educated in the south.

A new five-story brick building for the institute has been recently erected with a capacity of 500 students.

Proceeds from the entertainment will go for the new building funds of the institute in a campaign to raise $10,000 during the tenth anniversary which will close May 31.

Special seats will be reserved for the whites.

MOTHER'S DAY

The person to whom you owe more than you can ever pay, or even imagine, is your mother.

Go to the church she would have you attend, worship as she would have you worship, be for this one day at least the man she would have you be, and in token of the love and reverence your heart cannot fail to feel, wear the visual symbol of that love—a pure white flower, emblematic of the purity of her love and the steadfastness of her devotion.

Citizens' Education Move Stirs Interest in State

The Citizens' Education movement, organized on April 20, at a meeting of representative citizens from various sections of Georgia, this week will get under way its campaign to arouse the state to an understanding of her educational needs, according to announcement Saturday of leaders. A vice-chairman in each congressional district will be appointed in the next few days.

The executive committee has announced the following statement of objectives for the movement:

"The job of this campaign is to organize the business men, civic and rural leaders to face the facts about the educational needs of the state, and we want them to assume the responsibility for the movement. We can depend upon educators to formulate the details of the legislative program and this movement will have nothing to do with those details nor with any controversial subjects.

"We must arouse the general public consciousness to the importance of an effective educational system in developing the resources of the state. We know that Georgia is able to educate her youth, and we have faith to believe that when the hopes of our citizens are given voice, our legislators will themselves respond to the demands of the situation.

"During the next two months we shall endeavor to present the facts to the people, calling to the task all our newspapers, educators and public spirited citizens. No meeting should be held during this time in which Georgia's Educational Needs are not presented. When the facts are fairly considered and understood, no unprejudiced person in Georgia should ever be guilty of balancing the common school over against the institutions of higher learning, or insisting that one branch of the system is more important than another. We will realize that children, leaders and teachers must all be educated at the same time, and every political unit will stand ready to do its proportionate share in the great program that lies ahead.

"We are collecting all the available data about the situation in Georgia and in a short period will have ready a campaign folder and a campaign booklet for general distribution. We hope in this manner to present as briefly and concretely as possible the situation as it is today. Our office will be organized with a speakers' bureau and will have a strong publicity committee, which will try to reach every possible avenue. We bespeak the heartiest cooperation of the newspapers, the educators and the citizens generally."

SAFETY CONFERENCE TO ATTRACT LEADERS

The Georgia Highway safety conference to be held in Atlanta May 14-15, will be one of the largest gatherings of representative citizens of Georgia ever held, according to James A. Hollomon, president of the Atlanta Safety council.

"Lists of delegates appointed by the state, counties and municipalities, as well as the many civic organizations throughout the state are pouring in," said Mr. Hollomon, "and we are confident that an appreciable reduction in highway accidents will result from the conference."

George M. Graham, president of the Chandler Motor company, who represented the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce at the Hoover conference, will probably be present, as will L. A. DeBlois, representative of the National Safety council at the Hoover conference, and S. J. Williams of the consulting staff of the conference.

The following committees have been appointed:

Reception Committee—J. E. Skaggs, chairman; M. L. Stimson, Fred Gould, J. L. McCord, Henderson Hallman, J. F. Burdine, W. T. Fletcher. Organization Committee—Mrs. Geo. M. Howsmon, Atlanta; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Atlanta; Walter A. Sims, Atlanta; Dr. Elizabeth Broach, Atlanta; James A. Hollomon, Atlanta Stewart A. Marshall, Rome, chairman; Walter R. Richards, Columbus; H. R. Slaton, Jackson; W. R. Lang, Sandersville; L. H. Cobb, Hartwell; E. L. Tanner, Douglas, M. H. Plunkett, Conyers; W. G. Mealer, Gainesville; Mrs. J. E. Hayes, Montezuma.

Law Enforcement—Geo. M. Napier, chairman.

Statistical—Dr. W. A. Davis, chairman.

Construction and Engineering—W. R. Neel, chairman.

Education—Willis A. Sutton.

Traffic Regulation—Judge Oliver T. Bacon, Savannah, chairman.

MRS. C. F. J. TATE DIES AFTER LONG PERIOD OF ILLNESS

Mrs. C. F. J. Tate, well-known Atlanta woman, of 27 Mathewson place, died Saturday morning at a local hospital after an illness of several weeks.

She was actively identified, as long as her health permitted, in church work, being a member of the Gordon Street Baptist church, and a leader in Y. W. A. and G. A. work of the Young People's department of the Atlanta Baptist association. She was a member of the Woman's auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital and for many years had devoted much of her time to that work.

She was the widow of the late Dr. C. F. J. Tate, of Missouri and Arkansas, and later of Atlanta.

Funeral services will be held from the Gordon Street church at 3 o'clock this afternoon, Dr. W. H. Fauts, pastor, officiating, assisted by Dr. F. C. McConnell. Interment will be in West View.

Mrs. Tate is survived by four children, L. W. and David M. Tate and Miss Elizabeth and Miss Bessye Evelyn Tate; two grandchildren, Patricia Anna and Elizabeth Tate, and six sisters.

$5 SALE TO FEATURE F. & W. STORE OPENING

A feature of the new F. & W. Grand store, which will open soon in Atlanta, will be the special read-to-wear department, in which nothing will be sold for over $5. A large shipment of the season's latest style dresses has been received and the store will open a big sale of ready-to-wear at this maximum price.

The opening of the F. & W. Grand store in Atlanta will add another great mercantile establishment to the city. It will be a 5, 10 and 25 cent store but will operate this special "nothing over $5" department.

In addition to the regular line of merchandise carried by this type store, the firm will operate a high class restaurant and soda fount, enabling patrons of the store to enjoy an excellent lunch while down town shopping.

The store is located at the corner of Whitehall and Hunter streets in the building formerly occupied by the McClure company.

In discussing the special $5 department, Mark J. Reinhardt, manager of the store said:

"This will be the only department of its kind in Atlanta, and it will occupy our entire third floor. There will be nothing sold for over $5, and I don't believe the values we will offer in this department will be surpassed by any store in the entire south."

A number of new merchandise men, who will associate with Mr. Reinhardt have arrived in the city and are busily engaged getting the big store in readiness.

MANY AMERICANS PLAN TO ATTEND BRITON EXHIBITION

The second 'British Empire Exhibition," opened last Wednesday at Wembley, near London and, according to cable dispatches received by Sidney Kay, British consul at Atlanta, indications at the opening were for an even greater sucess than that which greeted the first Wembley exhibition last year.

These exhibitions cover the entire range of industry, social economy, art discovery and development in the various portions of the British empire and are proving a tremendous value in educating the Britisher at home and the visitor to London on facts and conditions in other parts ow the world, according to Mr. Kay.

Large numbers of American tourists attended the opening Wednesday last and it is anticipated that the number of visitors from the United States will run well into the tens of thousands during the summer. The number of Americans who are planning vacations in England this year is greater than ever, it is reported, largely on account of the comfortable steamship accommodations which can now be secured at small cost, since the inception of the "tourist third cabin" passage for college students, teachers and other classes who demand the best accommodations and congenial fellow pasengers, but who are limited in finances. This new cabin was first started by the Cunard Line and has since been adopted by most of the other transAtlantic steamship companies.

Foremost Artists of Nation To Show Famous Works at Art Exhibition Here

Beautiful examples of the works of modern American artists which are to be shown in the two weeks' art exhibition by the Grand Central Galleries, which opens at the Biltmore hotel next Saturday. Left, "Daughter of Pan," a bronze by R. Hinton Perry. Right, "Mrs. Fiske-Warren and Daughter," a portrait study by the late John Singer Sargent.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Bringing an exhibit of several hundred of the newest works of the greatest living American painters and sculptors, the Grand Central Art galleries, of New York, will open the second annual Atlanta exhibition at the Biltmore hotel next Saturday. The exhibition will continue for two weeks, after opening Saturday night with a banquet in the main banquet hall of the hotel, at which 400 leaders in Atlanta life will meet a score of the world's greatest artists who have accepted invitations to attend the opening.

Edwin S. Barrie, manager of the Grand Central galleries, has stated that the exhibition to be brought here this year will be superior even to the magnificent showing of 1924 and he anticipates an even greater success than was achieved at that time. The 1924 exhibition attracted 30,000 visitors who went through the galleries, and sales amounting to $40,000 worth of paintings and sculpture were made during the exhibition here.

Topping the list of distinguished paintings which are to be seen here are two pictures by the late John Singer Sargent, the most famous of modern painters, whose death recently in London brought sorrow to artists and art lovers the world over. One of these, a portrait entiled "Mrs. Fiske-Warren and Daughter" is shown above.

Many Prize Winners.

The prize-winning paintings at the exhibition of the American Academy of Designers are being brought here, as well as many other famous canvases. Particular interest attaches to the exhibition of paintings by Van Deering Perrine and J. Olaf Olsen, by reason of the fact that both have developed new ideas in painting which have attracted intense interest in the world of art. Mr. Perrine has developed a study in light, basing his theory on the physical fact that intense light causes material objects to become invisible to the eye, as well as darkness. Mr. Olsen has done some remarkable work in water colors, illustrative of his claim that it is a mistake to class water colors secondary to oils as a medium of expression.

Augustus Lukeman, the New York sculptor, who has recently been engaged by the Stone Mountain Monumental association to complete the Confederate memorial on Stone mountain, begun by Gutzon Borglum, will exhibit a number of his pieces of sculpture and probably will be present at the opening dinner on Saturday. Mr. Lukeman recently has become a member of the Grand Central Galleries, having been proposed by Daniel Chester French, the famous sculpture, of whom he was once a pupil.

Violinist To Apper.

As an added attraction for the banquet on Saturday night, Mr. Barrie has arranged to bring to Atlanta Marie Dawson Morrell, the distinguished American girl violinist, who will give a number of selections during the course of the dinner. Miss Morrell has been acclaimed by critics in all the leading cities where she has played as one of the greatest of American musicians of recent years.

Speaking of Miss Morrell recently, the Musical Observer says: "Her presentation of an ambitious program, calling for violinistic ability of a high order, met with considerable success, and the youthful player gave unquestionable evidence throughout the evening of a decidedly artistic temperament plus individuality of style. Her tone is sweet, bird-like in purity and her uniform surety upon the finger board, particularly in her double-stopping and in the higher registers of the instrument, was deserving of considerable praise."

Miss Morrell will present a short program at the banquet on May 16, which is the official opening of the two weeks' exhibition of paintings and sculpture by the leading modern American artists, to be held here, and her program includes some of the most popular numbers on the modern concert repertoire. Included in the list is "The Gentle Maiden," by Cyril Scott; "Twilight," by Massenet; Paderewski's famous "Minuet," and the ever-delightful "Caprice Viennois," of Fritz Kreisler.

The coming of Miss Morrell to Atlanta is an event of more than passing interest to the ever growing musical colony in Atlanta and her presence adds much to the already wide interest in the art exhibit to be shown.

Invitations To Be Sent.

Invitations to the banquet will be sent out this week. The exhibition is brought to Atlanta under the sponsorship of the art committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, of which J. J. Haverty is chairman. An interesting sidelight on the interest aroused by last year's exhibit is seen in the fact that whereas, prior to that exhibit, Mr. Haverty was the only Atlanta lay member of the Grand Central Galleries, two others became lay members as a result of the exhibition, J. Carrol Payne and Mrs. Samuel N. Inman.

During the two weeks' exhibition daily lectures on various aspects of art will be given by some of the artists who are coming here. Included in this number will be Jonas Lie, who is not only a distinguished painter but who is recognized as one of the finest art lecturers in America. Mr. Lie gave several lectures during the 1924 exhibition and his talks are remembered with extreme pleasure by those Atlantans who were fortunate enough to hear him.

Special tours of the galleries will be arranged for the different days of the exhibit and committees from the Woman's club, the art committee of the Atlanta Federation of Woman's clubs, the city art commission and the various civic organizations, all of which have joined in sponsoring the exhibit, will be in charge each day.

Arrangements will be made for special viewings and lectures for the students in the high schools of Atlanta and Fulton county, and for students at the various colleges and other institutions of learning in the Aendance a he baque Saurday Atlanta vicinity.

Attendance at the banquet Saturday night will be by invitation only, and the lists are being carefully made up by the committee in charge. The banquet hall can accommodate only about 400 in comfort therefore the number invited has to be limited.

After the opening night banquet, and the first tour of the galleries for the benefit of the dinner guests, the exhibition will be open to the general public every day during the two weeks, from 10 a. m., until 11 p. m.

Art Exhibit Violinist

Marie Dawson Morrell, famous American violinist, who will come to Atlanta as a guest of the Grand Central Art Galleries of New York for the banquet at the Biltmore next Saturday night, officially opening the second annual Atlanta exhibit, which will continue for two weeks. Miss Morrell will give a number of solos at the banquet.

FORMER ATLANTAN DIES IN MINNESOTA

George W. Mason, 87 years old, former Atlantan, died in Winona, Minn., on Friday, according to advices received in Atlanta.

Mr. Mason, who was a deacon in the Central Congregational church, and a prominent figure in real estate business here, left Atlnata about seven years ago. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Tolles, of Atlanta, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Starr Peck, of Atlanta.

The funeral will be held Monday in Winona.

FLORIDA TOWN SWEPT BY $1,000,000 BLAZE

Groveland, Fla., May 9.—Fire that started in the planing room of the J. Ray Arnold Lumber mill tonight completely destroyed the plant, causing a loss of $1,000,000, according to the owner.

No lives were lost in the fire, but it was reported that a boy was killed by an automobile and carried off by the driver. This report was not confirmed.

More than 700 persons are employed at the lumber plant, which is the main business concern of the town.

Stone Opens Office For Law Practice In Hurt Building

James D. Stone for many years employed by some of the large corporations of the south in handling legal, collection and credit matters, has opened an office at 1118 Healey building, for the general practice of law.

Mr. Stone is well known throughout this and adjoining states to the legal and business profession as his work heretofore carried him before the various courts located in his territory.

He will cover a large field through associates and loking after local matters personally.

ATLANTA KNIGHTS TO ATTEND CONCLAVE

The largest number of Knights ever attending a conclave of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of Georgia will be sent by Coeur de Leon, No. 4, and Atlanta, No. 9, commanderies to the sixty-fourth grand conclave which will assemble in Athens May 13-14. In addition to every past commander of the Atlanta commanderies and delegations from the commanderies, Sir Knights from all sections of Georgia will be passing through Atlanta Tuesday bound for Athens.

Coeur de Leon drill corps, which was awarded the honor of being the best drilled team of the grand commandery last year at Columbus, will leave Tuesday for Athens to defend the honors in competitive drill before the grand commandery. The entire corps of thirty men will be quartered at the Georgian hotel in that city. Luther B. Stephens, a world war veteran, is captain of the corps.

MISS LAMBETH JOINS ORATORY SCHOOL FORCE

The Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression has added Miss Tom A. Lambeth to its summer faculty. Miss Lambeth is a teacher of extensive training and experience in the field of expression, having studied under some of the ablest teachers of America.

Miss Lambeth comes from Athens college in Alabama, where she is head of the department of expression. She hopes to arrive about June 3, and bring pupils with her for advanced training in the Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression.

May 18 Set for Opening Of Light Opera Seat Sale

Announcement was made Saturday by directors of the Municipal Opera association that seats soon will go on sale for the six weeks' season beginning June 15 at the auditorium. There will be 42 performances of light opera in English every night and Saturday matinee. Seat prices will range from 82 to 50 cents, and there will be no amusement tax.

Seats for any performance of the six weeks may be had at the Cable Piano company store beginning Monday, May 18, it was announced by C. B. Bidwell, the general manager. A special booth has been built in the front of the store and all tickets will be sold here, except those of each current performance, which will be sold at the auditorium from 5 o'clock to 8:30 o'clock at night. The Saturday matinee and night ticket sales will be transferred to the auditorium on Saturdays at noon.

"No patron need hesitate to buy tickets for any future date," said Mr. Bidwell. "While no cash will be refunded, exchanges will be made for any performance of the same week."

Seat prices have been fixed by the directors as follows: Boxes and first 13 rows arena, $2; 14th to 20th rows, $1.50; remainder, $1. Dress circle, first three rows, $1.50, remainder $1. Wall seats, 75 cents. All balcony seats, unreserved, 50 cents each. Performances will be started at 8:30 o'clock at night and 2:30 o'clock in the afternoons. Seat prices for matinee and night performances will be the same.

Lewis J. Morton, stage director, will arrive from New York Wednesday and will organize a class in stage dancing. He will be assisted by Fred Palmer. Both are widely-known stage experts who have helped to prepare many Broadway successes.

Paul Eisler, of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be musical director and will arrive next Saturday to take up his duties. For the last three weeks the big chorus school has been rehearsed by Dr. Karl Riedel, also of the Metropolitan, who will remain through the season as assistant musical director. The chorus will consist of 36 young women and 24 young men, and an orchestra of 40 musicians will be drawn from the Metropolitan Opera orchestra.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

Frank L. Gillespie, founder and first president of the Liberty Life Insurance company, with headquarters in Chicago, died suddenly in his office a few days ago. The Liberty Life Insurance company is one of the first old line legal reserve companies, chartered and operated by negroes, in any of the northern states.

Over 2,000 members of the race attending the quinquennial convention of the International Council of Women in session in Washington, representing 36 nations, walked out of the auditorium Tuesday in Washington, D. C., in protest against seating arrangements of a committee representing the local business houses.

Arthur Waller was recently elected president of the New High school student organization at Elmhurst, L. I., New York. Waller is a scholar and athlete of note.

The Opportunity magazine, published by the National Urban league, conducted a literary contest in which some 732 writers of short stories, poetry, essays, plays and personally experienced sketches, contributed. The prizes were awarded May 1. The successful contestants follow:

The Short Story.

First prize of $100 to "Fog," by John Matheus, of Institute, W. Va.

Second prize of $35 to "Spunk," by Zora Neale Hurston, of Jacksonville, Florida.

Third prize of $15 to "The Voodoo's Revenge," by Eric D. Walrond, of New York city.

Poetry.

First prize of $40 to "The Weary Blues," by Langston Hughes, of Washington, D. C.

Second prize of $15 "To One Who Said Me Nay," by Countee Cullen, of New York city.

Third prize—For the third place there was a tie between the winners of the first and second prizes, "A Song of Sour Grapes," by Countee Cullen, and "America," by Langston Hughes, receiving the same number of votes. The judges decided to award the honor to both and the cash prize to the two contestants receiving fourth place.

Cash price of $5 to "Solace," by Clarissa Scott, Washington, D. C.; cash prize of $5 to "The Wayside Well," by Joseph S. Cotter, of Louisville, Kentucky.

Essays.

First prize of $50 to "Social Equality and the Negro," by Franklin Fraser, Atlanta.

Second prize of $30 to "Roland Hayes," by Sterling Brown, of Lynchburg, Virginia.

Third prize of $10 to "The Negro Poet," by Laura D. Wheatley, of Baltimore, Md.

Plays.

First prize of $60 to "Frances," by G. D. Lipscomb.

Second prize of $35 to "Humble Instrument," by Warren A. McDonald, of Philadelphia, Pa., and "Color Struck," by Zora Neale Hurston, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Third prize of $15 to "The Bog Guide," by Jean Ray, of Baltimore, Maryland.

Brittain To Speak At New Girls' Hi School Exercises

Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia School of Technology, will be principal speaker at the cornerstone laying of the new senior high school for girls next Wednesday, according to the program completed Saturday.

Elaborate exercises are being planned and a number of notables will attend. The school, which was opened at the beginning of the January term, is complete with every detail of modern equipment, and is one of the finest school buildings in the entire south.

Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, will preside, and John T Hancock, president of the education board, will introduce Dr. Brittain.

Following is the complete program: Music by Boys' High orchestra; invocation by Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; laying of the cornerstone by James D. Hambrick, grand master of Masons for the state of Georgia; school song by students of Girls' High; address, "Women in Education," by Dr. Brittain; "Pilgrim's Chorus," sung by students of Girls' High; presentation of Miss Jessie Muse, principal of Girls' High; introduction of a number of honored guests, and music by the Tech High band.

LAKEWOOD FEATURES BIG BAND CONCERT

There will be a big free band concert this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Lakewood park by Barber's American band, under the direction of Clint Barber. Several feature numbers are listed on the program for this afternoon.

Tonight two free moving pictures will be shown, the first will start at 7 o'clock, followed immediately by the second showing.

There is plenty of parking space for every automobile that visits Lakewood this afternoon and the park will open at 2 o'clock and remain open until 11 o'clock tonight.

The program for the band concert contains many numbers of particular merit.

1,600 SCHOOL CHILDREN TO SING IN CONCERT

Sixteen hundred pupils of the Sixth grade of the city schools will sing in the annual spring concert at the city auditorium next Friday night, at 7:30 o'clock. The choruses will be directed by Miss Kate Lee Harralson, supervisor of music of the city schools, and Mrs. B. Z. Herndon of Moreland school will be the accompanist.

Twenty-five pupils from each sixth grade have been selected and will sing art, folk and patriotic songs that are included in the course of study of the sixth grade in the schools.

These pupils will be assisted by the orchestra of Boys' High under the direction of G. W. Walter, the orchestra of the Samuel Inman school under the direction of Mrs. T. D. Albright, and the Harmonica club of the English avenue school under the direction of Miss Meta Scarlett.

The parents and friends of the pupils are cordially invited to be present.

CIVIC CLUBS SUPPORT WILSON COLLEGE PLAN

That Georgia is making an unprecedented repsonse to the proposal to build the Woodrow Wilson college as a national memorial in this state is reflected by the scores of requests from Rotary and Kiwanis clubs and other civic organizations in cities throughout the state for speakers to come and present the plans of the project to them, according to a statement from campaign headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce building. These requests have followed closely upon the meeting held here last week at which men and women from all parts of the state gather to formally launch the movement.

To meet the request for speakers, members of the temporary board of trustees headed by Allen J. Strickland, president, and R. C. Mizell, executive secretary, are forming the nucleus of a speakers bureau and are arranging tours throughout the state to every community where an organization or group of people have asked to be informed of the project. Plans are being made to enlist members of the state executive committee for this activity.

The movement to erect Woodrow Wilson college has turned the eyes of America upon Georgia and will cause more favorable comment than anything the state has attemnted in years, in the opinion of Senator Walter F. George expressed in a statement yesterday. Pointing out that in taking the initiative in building the national Wilson memorial in Georgia, the state has drawn the attention of the most remote part of the nation, Senator George said: "The citizens of the country are looking to see what we will do with this project. Woodrow Wilson college involves an ideal, which will very nearly approach the living ideal of all high purposes and thought to be found throughout the world.

"Georgia's opportunity is a responsibility. We have begun an undertaking of national importance. In beginning it we have declared that Georgia could safely be entrusted with the memorial to Woodrow Wilson who, though he lived in Georgia, belongs to America. When we speak of Woodrow Wilson college we attract men and women in every state in the union as well as the fine spirit of thinking men and women throughout the world."

Actual solicitation of funds for the college will not begin in Georgia until there has been time to place the project before the citizens of each community and inform them of the purposes and aims of the institution.

DR. BOWEN TO PREACH AT WARREN MEMORIAL

Dr. J. W. E. Bowen will preach a Mother's day sermon at Warren Memorial M. E. Church at 11 o'clock today. Parents are requested to be present with children. J. F. Demery is pastor.

Get back that lost weight!

WHEN you start to waste away to a shadow, when the color leaves your cheeks and your poor, tired legs will hardly hold up your weakened body it's high time you started taking a fine tonic and builder like Tanlac.

Tanlac will build you up and make you feel that life's worth living. Made from roots, herbs and bark gathered from the four corners of the earth and compounded under the exclusive Tanlac formula, Tanlac is just what the poor, starved body needs.

First of all it cleanses the blood stream and puts the digestive organs in order. You find, after a few days' treatment, that you want to eat. Pretty soon the welcome color steals back into your cheeks and the scales tell you that you're gaining weight. From then on it's only a short time until you're feeling fit as a fiddle.

Millions of men and women have taken Tanlac with great benefit. More than one hundred thousand people have written us glowing tributes to this wonderful tonic.

First Bottle Brought Improvement

"Pains in my side and back caused me lots of trouble day and night. I could hardly walk my beat. Tanlac fixed me up quick. I noticed the improvement after the first bottle."

Patrolman Wm. J. Bader 324 Paul Ave., Belleville, Ill.

When you know it has worked wonders for so many folks it's folly not to take advantage of Tanlac's help yourself. Don't put it off another day. Get a bottle at your druggist's now and start the good work right away.

Visit Our Downtown Offices

At your earliest opportunity, visit our downtown offices—at Peachtree and Ellis Streets in the Aragon Hotel block. The offices are open each evening until 11 o'clock. See the displays there—the huge panorama, the life-like model of Avondale and the scores of beautiful views of homes and spots on the property.

Our representatives will gladly motor you to the property at your convenience—without obligation on your part.

This $8,500 English Home Built for $5,500

An Unbelievable Value Made Possible by Scientific Construction and Wholesale Purchase of Materials

FORTUNATE indeed will be the happy family to possess this beautifully constructed two-story English gable-home, shown here in picturesque Avondale Estates. Such a value, at $5,500, is matchless in the entire country, and during our home-building campaign, while these unheard-of prices prevail, scores of Atlantans are taking this opportunity to build the home of their dreams — at much less than they pay each month for rent. Where else can you build such a home as this for $5,500? And where else can such a small payment as $1,800 make you its proud possessor? This first payment pays for the lot complete and thereafter your monthly payments amount to exactly $56.68, including interest on a 6% loan and all costs.

Exquisitely designed and constructed of brick, half timber and stucco, with a graceful sloping gable roof, the exterior makes it a superb ornament to its fine surroundings.

Inside, its beauty is sustained, and no detail of comfort or convenience has been overlooked in the planning of the rooms. Furnace-heated with hardwood floors throughout, tiled bath room, excellently appointed kitchen, generous closet space, ample light and ventilation, and an unusual blending of roominess and homelike snugness mark this as an ideal home.

Only the best materials and equipment, employed by our corps of skilled and careful builders, go into homes in Avondale Estates. The same high type of construction admired by the 100,000 visitors who saw the Homes Beautiful is being steadily maintained.

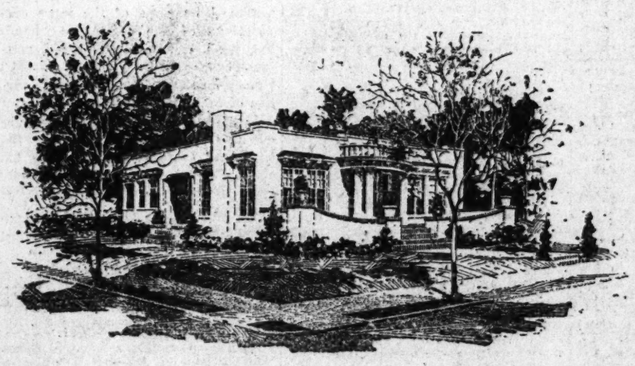

Hundreds Ask:—"How Can You Do It?"

The enormity of our construction program and the resources at our command make it possible to strip the cost of "extras." There is no 5% to be paid an agent on the cost of the house, which is the case when you buy a completed home; no 6% fee for an architect; no contractor's profit of from 10% to 15%. On everything that goes into the home we save you money — on basic materials, including brick, lumber and cement, we save you 10% to 15%; on plumbing and bathroom fixtures, 25%; on electrical fixtures, approximately 35%. All this comes from purchase of materials in carload consignments, the discount advantage being passed on to you — so that we save you from first to last more than 20%.

Those Who Build Now Are Certain To Profit

Values at Avondale are bound to rise as more and more homes are built and more and more citizens move into this glorious residential area. Early purchasers have another distinct advantage in that the home is not only built at such an extremely low price — but because all landscaping of the lot, with shade trees, shrubs and evergreens, is done without additional cost.

Visit Avondale, inquire about this exceptional construction plan—and decide now to make this profitable investment instead of signing another lease. Mail the attached coupon today and secure full information showing how you can profit by this exceptional offer during our Home Building Campaign. There is no obligation, of course.

This Remarkable $10,000 Value At $6,250

We will build this gracefully designed Spanish house, constructed of hollow tile and stucco, including furnace heat and hardwood floors, with every conceivable convenience for only $6,250, and after your initial payment of $1,800, which pays for the lot complete—monthly payments are only $57.19! The same high type construction of all the Avondale Homes, of course, will be followed throughout.

REALTORS WILL HEAR WIGHT ON APPRAISALS

A. S. Adams, president of the Atlanta real estate board, announces that the board will hold a luncheon meeting at the Henry Grady hotel Thursday at 12:30 o'clock.

Ward Wight, of the Ward Wight company, Healey building, will be the principal speaker, and his subject will be "Real Estate Appraisals." Mr. Wight will outline modern methods of appraising real estate. In this connection, he states that the matter of judging real estate values is no longer guess-work, as this procedure has been so perfected and organized that a real estate broker who is familiar with modern methods can investigate in such a manner as to enable him to secure information that will afford him an opportunity to reach an accurate value of the property.

Mr. Wight further states that the correct appraising of real estate is one of the fundamentals of a successful real estate broker, and to be efficient in this respect it is important that every real estate agent in the city of Atlanta be familiar with property values. Mr. Wight is one of the active members of the Atlanta real estate board and has given a great deal of study to appraising of real estate.

President Adams urges members of the board to keep this hour on Thursday open so they can be sure to attend the meeting and hear Mr. Wight. He also asks members to send their reservation cards in to the office of the board at the earliest possible date.

Watkins Company Subdivision Sales Show Big Increase

The Benjamin D. Watkins company, whose two well-known real estate subdivisions, Ansley Park Extension and Linwood, have attracted wide interest throughout this section, announce that the sale of property in these two popular subdivisions is going steadily forward.

Not very long ago Benjamin D. Watkins, president of the firm, became so interested in the possibilities of the tract, now known as Ansley Park Extension, as a center for beautiful homes, that he decided to establish at this point a most attractive home section.

Because of its nearness to the Ansley Park Golf club, Ansley Park Extension won instant approval from all who visited it. So confident was Mr. Watkins in believing that Atlantans would welcome a fine home section of this type, that his company erected twenty-five beautiful new homes for the sole purpose of selling them to those citizens who appreciate attractive home surroundings.

Homes Not for Rent.

These homes were not built for renting purposes, according to Mr. Watkins. They were individually planned and constructed of the finest of material. Every possible detail was included, including hardwood floors throughout, furnace heat, window shades, garages and even linoleum on the kitchen floors.

Of the twenty-five homes built in Ansley Park Extension, only eight are now on the market. Mr. Watkins has seen his prophetic visions for Ansley Park Extension come true, it is pointed out.

In the Linwood subdivision the Benjamin D. Watkins company has done even more intensive work. Here is one of the most beautiful home sections in the entire city, and it was only after a great deal of new work in extending the subdivision was the company able to offer more homes to the eager homeseekers who were determined to have a home here.

Only a few of the newest homes remain. Mr. Watkins pointed out that the extending of Forrest avenue to Forrest road, which is now going on rapidly, will give the north side another main artery, 60 feet wide, from Peachtree street to the Linwood and Druid Hills section. The fact that several of the houses now available in Linwood are on Forrest road, Barnett street and Linwood avenue is responsible for the unusual number of inquiries now being received about this property.

Advantages Pointed Out.

The success accorded the Linwood section is due chiefly, according to Mr. Watkins, to the ideal location enjoyed by the property. Two car lines, Highland avenue and Ponce de Leon, serve the property. The Highland avenue school and the Bass Junior High school are near at hand and the various churches prominent throughout the section are within easy reach.

The Watkins company is predicting a successful season for both of these attractive subdivisions. It is expected that all available homes will be sold within a very short time, since the number of people inspecting the property is increasing daily.

Boggs Appointed By McDuffie Firm As Sales Manager

P. C. McDuffie company announces the appointment of L. J. Boggs as salesmanager, effective May 1. Mr. Boggs takes up his new work with the best wishes of a host of friends who predict a decided success for him in this new field. He is a man of wide experience, having specialized in residential development not only in Atlanta, but in other sections of the country, and enters his new position with a record over a period of years that is indeed enviable. He is very popular in real estate circles and there are few realty men who have a more thorough knowledge of real estate in general or with a keener insight into values.

Mr. Boggs states that he made this new connection feeling that Garden Hills is one of the most desirable and attractive residential developments in the south and offers to the homeseeker every advantage that can be found anywhere and that in offering this delightful home community to the people of Atlanta, everything that can be incorporated in a residential section can be found in this lovely subdivision, which is located on Peachtree road just north of Andrews drive, and which is surrounded by some of Atlanta's most magnificent country estates.

Mr. Boggs is a man of highest standing in the business world, and is thoroughly in sympathy with the growth and development of Atlanta generally, being a booster three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

P. C. McDuffie company is to be congratulated in adding Mr. Boggs to its organization and it is predicted that his tireless energy and enthusiasm will be a very valuable asset to the promotion and sale of this north side property. He will organize a picked force of a few high-class men to be associated with him in the sale of Garden Hills, and it is the ambition of the entire organization to give to the home seeker a service and cooperation that will enable them to plan future homes which will be an increasing joy and satisfaction in a section surrounded by every environment and attraction that could be desired, it is said.

L. J. BOGGS.

WANTED — COMPETENT STENOGRAPHER WHO ALSO KNOWS HOW TO KEEP A SMALL SET OF BOOKS—

By a newspaper, publisher and investment banker at West Palm Beach, Fla.; middle-aged widow or spinster without encumbrance preferred; must be an English scholar and know synonyms. Must know how to keep small set of books that United States internal revenue officials can understand. No objection if handicapped by fast-reddened at nape of neck or a big wart on nose. The job will pay $150 per month to start and if services are satisfactory, there will be advance of $10 per month each year until $180 per month is being paid. Must have health and character as there is no hospital or "Love Nest" in connection with my business. Positive guarantee—"No love slush" from the boss. If you want to know regarding my financial responsibility or standing, write any banker or preacher (the two extremes) in West Palm Beach, Fla. No—I don't and won't ever know the price of board and room rent in West Palm Beach, Fla. Will be in Atlanta, Ga., May 17. If interested, write me to address at the finish of this advertisement and if your communication reads all right, will write you and arrange for interview while I am in Atlanta. Now if "you tote" and use the powder rag and lip stick "regler" save your own and my time. Don't want a religious or political partisan as I let everyone and those with whom I come in contact handle their own religion and want a competent person to handle details of business while I entertain politicians and listen to their "wonderous wisdom." This advertisement may be "ornery" to your thinking but it will prevent later on the statement "I didn't understand." Address applications to Joe L. Earman, 1201 South Olive street, West Palm Beach, Fla.

CLASSIFIED ADS are worth sifting.

LOVE—

And smoke cannot be hidden. Nor can a vacant house or the smile of a satisfied advertiser.

And who would wish to hide any of these? What the natural thing to do is to shout out joy or grief from the housetops—were we not living in the age of modernism.

O'Neal & McLain, Inc., 138 Sycamore street, had a seven-room, furnished house which was alone and empty (which is surely a terrible dilemma) and they didn't want either the house or its condition to be hidden.

So they brought it to the notice of the people of Atlanta by an ad in the "Houses for Rent" columns of The Constitution. Immediately after the ad was inserted the house was rented.

Bring your buying, renting or selling questions to the notice of interested prospects by calling an ad-taker at MAin 5000.

7-Room Brick Bungalow 16 Beautiful Lots
Cascade Road, Opposite Woman's Club Site

NEXT SATURDAY afternoon, May 16, at 3 o'clock, we are going to sell at auction the home pictured above, six beautiful lots on Cascade Avenue opposite the site of the new Woman's Club Home, and ten lots on Huff Avenue adjacent to Cascade Avenue.

THIS beautiful brick-veneer home was built to be occupied by Mr. I. N. Ragsdale, but other plans have necessitated the sale of it. It has seven large rooms, garage, and every city convenience except gas, and is situated on an excellent, large, elevated lot. It is seldom that a home of this type is offered at auction and we urge you to attend this sale where you can buy it at your own price.

THE LOTS also have city conveniences and all lie beautifully. Cascade Avenue is regarded as one of the best home sections in Atlanta and has developed wonderfully in the past year. No other section can be mentioned that has brighter prospects for the future and any one would be acting wisely by attending this sale and buying one or more of these lots. This section is destined to be a home community and you certainly will not make a mistake in building your home here. DRIVE out today and look at this home; select the lots you want and then attend the sale. It is your opportunity. You can buy them at your own price. Every lot and the home will be sold to the highest bidder without reserve.

TERMS: Lots, one-fifth cash, balance $20 per month 7%. House $500 cash, $65 per month subject to loan.

Then Why Take Chances?

OUR NEW FIELD OFFICE

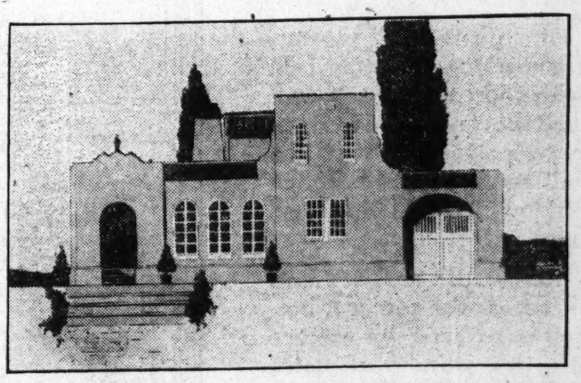

Photo showing our new field office to be opened this week, formal announcement of which will be made later. Salesmen will be on hand to assist you in the selection of your home-site and Wagar & Co., Inc., home builders, will also share our quarters. Mr. W. L. Sellars, associate architect, will gladly advise you regarding your building problems and will furnish plans free of charge to purchasers of lots in Morningside Park. Watch for opening announcement.

Stop and Think Why the Odds Are With YOU

Just Stop and Think Why You Should Not Take Chances

AN investment in MORNINGSIDE PARK eliminates chances and establishes a sure investment for you—

FIRST, because of its location;

SECOND, because of its accessibility;

THIRD, because of its improvement program guaranteed in the body of the contracts and deeds;

FOURTH, because of its aggressive building program;

FIFTH, because of its building restrictions of fine homes;

SIXTH, because of its complete selling organization, which is at your disposal at all times.

THEN why not invest where the odds are all with you.

$6,000—A HOME, Highland-Ponce de Leon section; all there. $1,000 cash.

$3,500 — GRANT PARK section, Kelly street, nice six-room, all improvements, near school. Can lease this to present tenant for $35 month. $500 cash.

ON the state highway. A little farm, 107 acres, house, branch, spring, timber, young orchard; picturesque; just what you want, in the healthiest part of the world. Pay me six and owe me six; that's all.

VACANT lots near best school in town, north side, around Tenth and State streets. $350 to $1,350.

I WANT to trade one of the prettiest apartments in the city, rented for $1,000 per month, to somebody who has time to look after it. No, there is not a note due and no interest due. It takes care of all that and then some. It is not overloaded with a loan. It's easy worth $75,000.

A MAN left about $50,000 here to loan at 8%. Do you want any of it? First mortgage, a few thousand dollars of purchase money, note money.

I HAVE some small acreage tracts in walking distance of the car line with houses on them. I have simply GOT to sell some of this stuff or let somebody have this money or I might take it and go to FLORIDA, TOO.

IT is on the north side; it's rented for $156. I'll sell it for $7,500. Can you beat it?

I HAVE a $6,000 investment in negro property that beats any ever offered in the world. I've seen them all.

"STUCK TO IT"

¶ Sand and cement make stucco. Stucco is generally made this way and is stuck to something.

¶ Plaster is made of lime and sand, or wood fiber or other products and is hung on a lath. Cement Stucco is successful when it is applied to a solid surface.

¶ Stucco must be placed on something that has an affinity with the chemicals in the moist cement where there is a suction so that the chemicals can penetrate and the cement and body can become homogenous. In other words, one piece. There must be some suck from the liquid cement and the body it is placed upon so that they will join together.

¶ Hollow tile being a clay product, and being, to some extent, porous, is of the same chemical nature, and it has been found that cement and the clay bond so that they cannot be separated with a chisel and the two become a solid mass. This forms real Stucco.

¶ Plaster is put on and shoved in the openings between lath or wire and is not "stuck to," but "hangs on." This is not an affinity, and this form of so-called Stucco is plaster, and is not lasting and will not satisfy any builder when put to the weather.

¶ Cracks develop in "hung on" or "pushed in" plaster. Cracks that develop in plaster are due to sappy lath or moisture that has been developed through the wall from the foundation or moisture that has come in from the top by way of the roof between the stud. When moisture gets into wood it will swell and buckle and the plaster not being of the same nature—it being hard and flinty—naturally separates.

¶ This action is impossible in hollow tile and cement. The homes that we have built are of the cement, hollow tile variety. Stucco houses offered by us are eternal. This, together with the wonderful color scheme carried out blending into the hillsides with the beautiful oaks—on a high eminence—take Home-building away from the so-called house builder.

¶ The houses Eternal, like we build, are a joy forever. The older they are the more they will be appreciated. They grow in richness with age. Children and husbands cared for in these homes develop a disposition to return to them, and friends are more anxious to come into them. Life is lengthened by such surroundings.

Mr. Employee of the Georgia Railroad—

When you have been offered an opportunity to buy a home site at your own price that is convenient to your work? You know this property—it has all city conveniences, with an alley in the rear, schools, churches, car service and community centers. Why go out into the country in a new subdivision and buy a home site when you can get one as desirable as the ones we are offering? Call at our office and let us show you a plat of this property. Our representatives will be glad to go over the proposition and explain everything to you.

We have arranged convenient terms of 1-3 cash and the balance in one, two and three years.

You are cordially invited to attend our barbecue dinner; it's free and you may bring your friends with you. Come out and spend the afternoon with us. We will have music to entertain you.

Don't Put Your Money In Houses Built On the Sand

REAL ESTATE is said to be the safest of all investments. Industrial enterprises fail, personal property burns, investments in many kinds of businesses prove worthless---but when you buy a piece of real estate you know that you have something that represents real tangible worth.

But before Real Estate can be considered a safe investment it must be worth the price paid. If it is to increase in value, it must be properly located and in the path of development.

The mere fact that Real Estate in a locality or section is changing hands every few days does not necessarily indicate that it is a good investment. High pressure sales methods, long-time terms with very small cash payments will create an apparent demand for anything. When the original promoters have sold their holdings and withdrawn their support the market collapses and the public takes its loss just as they take their loss in a fake industrial proposition.

The Atlanta Real Estate Board believes in Real Estate—but it knows that it takes a specialized knowledge to make the buying of Real Estate a safe and profitable investment. It admits to membership firms and individuals that have this specialized knowledge, and who will live up to the rigid rules of fair dealing specified in its code of ethics.

In Atlanta only members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board have the right to use the word "REALTOR." That word is your protection. Deal with those who have the right to use it. And you will find your Real Estate investments safe and profitable in fact as well as in theory.

One of Atlanta's most valuable assets is the feeling of friendliness between employer and employee. In the period beginning January 1, 1923, and ending October 1, 1924, the total cost of building construction amounted to $77,000,000. During this period there was but one strike—and that involved only 65 carpenters. Atlanta's supply of competent, intelligent labor is one of the reasons why new factories have come here since July of last year that will add $1,500,000 to Atlanta's pay roll each year.

CHRYSLER BELIEVES IN ADVERTISING

In a recent issue of The Wall Street Journal appeared an article concerning the influence of advertising in shaping the public good will which played so large a part in the recent sale of Dodge Brothers properties. The revelation of the definite advertising process pursued for years in building up a favorable public sentiment for Dodge Brothers attracted widespread attention.

Walter P. Chrysler commenting on the article said:

"I was impressed by it. I was impressed because I can corroborate it in the case of Maxwell-Chrysler.

"The newspapers today say that Maxwell-Chrysler values have recently increased more than $75,000,000. I do not lay too much stress on stock exchange appreciation. But I happen to know all the facts about Maxwell-Chrysler and those facts more than justify this reported appreciation.

Learning From Others.

"You say that in his early days John Dodge loathed advertising. So did I until four years ago. I considered it an economic waste. Like John Dodge, I was primarily a manufacturer. Building up a business meant to me as it meant to him, so building and pricing a product that its salability would be insured. That was and is true—it is a first and necessary requirement of any major manufacturing or engineering operation. But I have no patience with the business man who can set aside the bias created by his own special experience and learn from the experience of others.

"When we took hold of Maxwell, it was depreciated—discredited—almost scorned. As far as I was concerned, the work of rehabilitation began and continued in the factory. Meanwhile, however, another force had been set to work collaborating with our manufacturing efforts and even striking out far in advance of them. When it was proposed to me that something akin to the Dodge process, only more intense be applied, I consented with a feeling of resignation—almost amounting to dismay. I have repeatedly said in public that I had no faith in it for almost a year. Later on I also said repeatedly in public that the Chrysler was primarily an engineering, a sales, and an advertising achievement.

Flood of Recognition.

"It was the Chrysler experience which literally shocked me into an appreciation of the process being applied to Maxwell. I am not ordinarily thin-skinned, but I was actually embarrassed by the over-night flood of recognition which came to us.

"Knowing the past of the product, the process of attaching the word 'good' to the Maxwell—despite the fact that we had moved heaven and earth to deserve it—at the outset almost gagged me. But I saw wthe thing come true in public consciousness under my eyes.

"A year it was pointed out that while Maxwell was doing wonderfully, it still lacked the necessary element of personal public endorsement by myself as manufacturer. By this time I had become almost a full-fledged believer. I permitted this indorsement to be applied to the Maxwell, to which we had made important additions in quality, performance, rondability and appearance.

"Again I was almost dumfounded by the added impetus which the program gave to public appreciation of our improved Maxwell quality. I still believe that advertising can be a terrific economic waste. I also believe it can be as much a power as sound manufacturing, sound finance and sound management."

SPECIAL TOOLS FOR CADILLAC UPKEEP

An important contributing factor in the economy of operation of a specially designed tools for maintenance operations which have been developed by the technical department of the Cadillac Motor Car company during the past eleven years. Some of these devices have reduced time charges on individual oprations to one-fourth and even to one-tenth of what they would be without the special tools.

There are 118 of these devices which are standard equipment in Cadillac maintenance stations. Each has been developed and supplied to distributors and dealers throughout the country for two main purposes—either that a particular operation may be performed with the same accuracy as is used in Cadillac manufacturing, or to reduce the time required for a single operation.

The tools also tell a story of Cadillac engineering practice. Continuity and consistency in the design of the car is indicated in the fact that, out of a total of 118 special tools, 43 apply to every model from the Type 51, the first V-eight produced by the company, up to the new V-3. Fundamental improvements in the current models, however, are indicated in the production of ten new tools for this one type. In all, 84 of the total number apply to the present model.

Among the greatest time-saving devices are pullers for dismantling operations. There are thirty of them, such as a steering wheel puller, a crankshaft sprocket puller. Pushers are also supplied for many operations in the installation of parts.

These tools are part of the equipment of the maintenance station of practically every Cadillac distributor and dealer throughout the country.

Ripley Motor Company Takes Over Agency For Lincoln Cars

It is announced that the Rippey Motor company will succeed the Belle Isle-Street company, Lullwater building, West Peachtree street, as sales and service dealer for Lincoln Motor cars in Atlanta and vicinity.

T. A. Rippey, Jr., president and treasurer of the new company, comes from California, where he has made an enviable reputation as a leader in clean sportsmanship. He is one of the Pacific coast's stellar athletes and has won many prizes and medels for his athletic prowess.

Mr. Rippey is splendidly equipped by temperament and training to direct the policies of an organization selling a car oft he Lincoln's peerless quality.

F. O. Stone, vice president, is to well known to every citizen of Atlanta to need an introduction here. He has served in Atlanta's forefront of business builders for years, and his connection with the new company gives the public double assurance of the high character of the organization and its financial ability to carry out its every promise and obligation.

Mr. Stone's reputation has been built through service to the public and his time-proven service ideals will be followed in building Atlanta Lincoln service to the highest possible plane.

R. E. Culliane, secretary and manager, has been identified with the sale of fine cars since the early days of Atlanta's automobile history. He is known to a host of Atlantans through his long connection with the Cadillac interests. Under his capable management the Rippey Motor company may look for prosperous days ahead and, with the service department brought up to a standard fully matching Lincoln car quality and perfection, Atlanta Lincoln owners will welcome the advent of the new company.

Abandoned Wreck Rebuilt by H. A. Whitmire

Among some of the enterprises Atlanta should be justly proud of are the plants to rebuild automobiles. The above shows a wrecked car right after its wreck and after the H. A. Whitmire company, 57 Hayden street, had rebuilt it.

TWO RECORDS MADE AT STUDEBAKER PLANT

May day was ushered in by employees of the Studebaker corporation of America by two records yesterday indicative of the attitude of American labor toward international Labor day and of the continuing prosperity of steadily increasing business.

In one day, the Studebaker corporation shipped from its combined factories 760 completed motor cars, largest day's shipment in the history of the corporation save one. On May 29, 1923, the shipment was 780.

Studebaker operates the largest gray iron foundry in the world. As a second one-day record to greet May day, the foundry poured 307 tons of gray iron castings, an achievement never before equalled in any one foundry of its kind in the world.

The 760 cars shipped were practically all in response to the most urgent telegrams from dealers all over the United States demanding immediate shipment on orders already delayed.

Though running at maximum capacity, the plants have been unable to catch up with the demands for shipments of cars already sold, for more than two months. The present production capacity is still 25 per cent below the actual current sales, and the number of cars on hand in the hands of dealers is at the lowest point in years.

Inventor Makes Startling Claims For Death Ray

Washington, May 19.—A new kind of "death ray," exceeding in its destructive capacity any previous device, rumored or realized, was reported today to the commerce department as the claimed accomplishment of a German inventor.

William T. Daugherty, trade commissioner at Berlin, forwarded a summary of a publication describing the invention, which is called "heliotaeus," with the startling claim that its mysterious waves are capable of paralyzing life for six hours over a distance of 40 miles, and to an altitude of more than 45,000 feet.

Methods of operation and the source of the energy used were lacking. War department experts pointed out that the highest elevation reached by an airplane as yet is about 39,000 feet so that the new device—if it works—would effectively clear the air in any battle.

Mallet, prominent figure in the military affairs of the state and quartermaster general of the Georgia National guard, has been appointed as adjutant and will have charge of the parade at the meeting of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar in Athens, May 13-14.

A dozen or more members of Alexius commandery No. 22 of Jackson, will attend the conclave in Athens.

HARRIS PROTESTS HIKE IN PRICES OF POTASH

Washington, May 9.—(Special.)—Senator Harris has again called the attention of the department of commerce to the press dispatches from Germany that the German and French producers of potash, who control the supply that is used in the manufacture of fertilizer, were to meet in Paris this week to increase the price of potash, which would make fertilizer cost the farmer an additional amount.

Senator Harris informed the department that the increase in the price of fertilizer this year was so great as to make it almost impossible for the farmers to buy it. When the German and French producers of potash combined about two months ago, Senator Harris called the attention of Secretary Kellogg and Secretary Hoover to it and protested against any advance in price of fertilizer. This was called to the attention of German government officials and they denied, in a statement to the press, that there was any intention of increasing the price of potash, but the press dispatches now say they will. Senator Harris urged the department to take some action that would prevent this increase.

NEW ORLEANS WIFE SUES TWO DOCTORS AND INSANE ASYLUM

New Orleans, May 9.—As a climax to her suit for divorce and an attempt by her husband to have her declared insane, Mrs. Harry M. Holden, wife of a local business man, today filed a petition in district court for $50,000 against the Louisiana Retreat, a local insane asylum, and Doctors C. V. Unsworth and Joseph O'Hara, alienists.

The petition alleges the two physicians and the asylum entered into a conspiracy, kidnaped Mrs. Holden and held her in the institution for a week, during which time, she charges, she was subjected "to cruel and inhuman treatment."

Mrs. Holden alleges she recently was called on the telephone and asked to identify a body thought to be that of her sister, who had disappeared. After taking the taxicab that called, ostensibly to take her to the body, the petitioner charges she was carried to the asylum and held there a week.

ATLANTA-CHATTANOOGA HIGHWAY BOOSTED

Summerville, Ga., May 8.—(Special.)—A meeting in the interest of a paved highway from Atlanta to Chattanooga was held here this week. Several good roads advocates were present and the movement to pave the highway was approved. Honorable Wright Willingham, of Rome, was the principal speaker.

HARRIS URGES STUDY OF WEEVIL CONTROL

Washington, May 9.—(Special.)—Senator Harris has called to the attention of the department of agriculture the great damage which has been done to the cotton in Georgia by the boll weevil and urged that additional investigations be made in Georgia.

The appropriation for the boll weevil control under the agriculture department is $163,000. The department will have two men at Valdosta station, primarily to secure additional information on the value of early versus late dust application for weevil control under the heavy infestation conditions prevailing in south Georgia.

Besides this appropriation for boll weevil control, Senator Harris secured $25,000 appropriation for the chemical warfare service of the army to make experiments with other poison gases to ascertain if some poison cheaper than calcium arsenate could not be found. These experiments were made at the Georgia experiment station at Griffin last year and will be continued there this year. Arrangements have been made for an early crop of cotton and weevils in Florida, in which the work will begin as soon as the field is ready.

In addition to continuing work similar to that of last year, extending the list of poisons to 1,000 or more, it is planned to undertake field tests of the poisons which show promise.

The chemical warfare service assures Senator Harris that they are greatly encouraged in this work.

OBTAIN NEW CLUES AGAINST SHEPHERDS IN POISON MYSTERY

Chicago, May 9.—A second letter, purporting to relate suspicions uttered by Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock concerning William D. Shepherd and his wife, who were indicted by the grand jury for the murder of young Billy McClintock, was received today by Judge Harry Olson, he announced. Judge Olson, who was instrumental in securing the indietment of the Shepherds, refused to make public the letter, said to be from a St. Louis, Mo., woman.

Numerous new angles of the investigation are being followed as the result of a letter received earlier this week from Mrs. Myra Osborne, of Houston, Tex., who asserted that Billy had expressed the belief his mother was poisoned by the Shepherds, and that they also intended harming him. She also said that Mrs. McClintock had referred to the Shepherds as "human barnacles," and had expressed distrust of them.

M'CARL DRAWS LINE AT GAMBLING DEBTS OF FEDERAL AGENTS

Washington, May 9.—Government agents may be reimbursed for living at high priced hotels, making lavish expenditure on social events and buying liquor to obtain evdence for prohibition enforcement, but Comptroller General McCarl draws the line on gambling debts.

In a decision made public today, the comptroller general declined to approve a prohibition agent's expense account that included losses of about $50 at roulette, poker and faro. The opinion was brief, but positive.

GEORGIA WINS FIRST TWO OF JACKET SERIES

Chicks Beat Crackers, 3 to 2, in Third Game

Morton Holds Atlanta Club To 4 Hits; Cullop's Error Helps Memphis Mark Up Win

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

Guy Morton, right-handed Memphis pitcher, is not an Indian. Guy Morton, nevertheless, had the Indian sign on our Crackers yesterday and got away with a ball game for the Chicks by a 3-to-2 score. There isn't any puzzle to it. Morton simply applied too much speed and stuff to the ball for it to be marked more than four times by Cracker clubs.

While Morton was allowing the Crackers their three singles and one double, Hugh Bedient, one of the few big boys of the Cracker firing squad, was having his own ammunition shoved right back in his face by the Chick bats. The Memphis crowd found Bedient for 10 hits, one of which was a triple and three others doubles.

The game gave Memphis the edge on the first series it has played the Crackers this season. It also brought around the Crackers' first rest day. They're off today, going to Birmingham Monday for the first series with the Barons this year. The win for Memphis brought the Chicks into a tie for third place with the Lookouts, while the loss of Saturday's game left Atlanta just half a game ahead of the second place Vols.

Only One Error.

The one big mark of credit that we can give the Crackers for Saturday's game is on their fielding, although without the single error, made by Cullop when he juggled a single by Barber, Chick outfielder, the game might have wound up in a 2-to-2 tie. The Milan outfit had to catch an early train and the game was called at the end of the eighth inning. The eighth was the frame in which Memphis scored its winning run. Gleason, on first on a base hit, made it to third on Cullop's error and scored easily on Taylor's sacrifice fly.

Both teams had their errorless gloves at work yesterday—that is, everybody but Cullop. Dutch Krehmyer at shortstop for the Crackers, made some great stops and spilled the ball into Rod Murphy's mitt perfectly each time he had a chance. Uncle Bert Niehoff stepped out in the fifth and went into short center field to haul in Gleason's fly, when A. Jenkins, Chick shortstop, was on second.

Four double plays were made during the eight innings. The Crackers made two, with the combination of Niehoff, Krehmyer and Murphy, while the Chicks made two, one with the combination of Morton, Gleason and Lefler and the other with just Barbare and Lefler in the cast of characters.

Crackers Start Scoring.

The Crackers nailed the first run of the game, in the first inning, when Wilbur Good caught a fast ball in the small of his back, stole second and scored on Cullop's single to center field.

The second inning found the Chicks bunching hits off Bedient for a tally to tie the score. Taylor pounded a double to left field, went to third when Lefler grounded out to Red Smith and scored on Barbare's fluky double that never left the infield. The ball hit the ground to one side of the pitcher's box. Niehoff came in fast, but the ball struck his foot and hopped over to the short field. Krehmyer recovered quickly, but Barbare was safe on second when nobody covered the keystone. Jenkins followed with a single, sending Barbare to third, but Yaryan hit into a double play retiring the side.

The Crackers went hitless in the second and third innings, but squeezed through with a run in the fourth. Good beat out a hit to short, was sacrificed to second by Cullop, took third on a passed ball and scored on Murphy's sacrifice fly.

Barber counted the Chicks' tying run in the sixth inning when he laid a triple out of reach of Frankie Zoeller in left field and was scored by Rhinehardt's sacrifice fly to Cullop.

Morton Loses Control.

Morton lost a little control toward the end of the game, running his totals bases on balls to five, but he held the Crackers to two hits after their second run was scored and was not in danger. Bedient had perfect control, letting no one get on base on him except by hits.

Gleason, Chick lead-off man, was first up in the eighth. He pounded a single through short, went to second on Barber's hit to center, raced to third when Cullop juggled the apple, and then scored after the catch of Tommy Taylor's fly to Cullop.

RUFUS CLARKE GOES TO TIGERS.

Rufus Clarke, right-hand pitcher of the Cracker club, has been turned back to the Detroit Tigers, it was announced Saturday afternoon. Clarke was released to make room for Jim Yeargin, obtained from the Seattle club, of the Pacific Coast league. This was the second move of the week on the part of Cracker officials to bolster the hurling staff. Courtney was released earlier in the week to make room for Bagby, also of Seattle.

Bobby Jones Indorses Drastic Rules for Amateur Tourney

New York, May 9.—Indorsement of the new rules governing play for the national amateur golf championship, the most drastic of which is the reduction of the qualifying field from 32 to 16 players, is contained in a letter to the United States Golf association by Bobby Jones, present amateur titleholder, made public today.

"With only 16 men qualifying for match play, the effect will be, as I see it, to eliminate those upsets which have featured our competitions in the past," says Jones. "Time and again men, who have barely gained a place in the match play division and who are by no means consistently good performers, have gone to eliminate some one or more of the favorites before lapsing again into their old stride.

"There are those who will contend that some of the real stars will be left out. To qualify among the first 32 in our amateur field would seem, for our top-notchers, to be ridiculously simple, and this very idea has been the cause of nearly all such failures. The real stars of the game can play when they need to."

World-Famous Riders Seek Entries for Motor Races

Applications for entry blanks for the big Dixie Motorcycle rally and Gypsy tours races that will be staged on the Lakewood speedway on June 13, are beginning to reach officials of the meet.

The most important of these are from the world-famous riders who have just returned from Australia where they have been for the last five months. Among them is Paul Anderson, who was seen here several years ago. He rode miles on grass tracks in Australia at the rate of 125 miles per hour. Another is Jim Davis, who rode miles on dirt track that have the same surface as Lakewood in 32 and 2-5 seconds. These were world's records. Davis holds the five-mile record with time of two minutes and 51 seconds. Paul Anderson beat Sig Haugdahl's records for one-half mile tracks covering one mile in 54 seconds. Haugdahl's time was 58 seconds on the same track.

Ralph Hepburn will also ride in Atlanta. He will be remembered as winning the 25-mile national championship event here in September, 1913.

These motorcycle races at Lakewood will duplicate the races in 1919, except that these men will be riding much faster motorcycles than were used in 1919.

The two national championship events that have been granted to Atlanta, the five and 15-mile American championships, carry with them gold medals for 1925.

Two thousand Gypsy tourists will be in Atlanta June 12 and 13 for the national championship.

The program will be chiefly in the form of an entertainment for speed fans, for the management announced just after the disastrous Jass warehouse fire last week in which six firemen lost their lives that 25 per cent of the gate receipts will be turned into the fireman's relief fund.

Tickets were out on sale Saturday. They can be obtained at Chess' place, in the Silvey building, or from any fire department engine house in the city. The tickets sell for $1.10, which includes a seat in the grandstand and war tax.

TWENTY BALL POOLS RAIDED

Chicago, May 9.—Twenty raids on Baseball pools by 20 squads of detectives today resulted in a score of arrests and seizure of a quantity of baseball gambling materials and approximately $500. The literature and blanks used in the pools are printed out of town and shipped into Chicago, the detectives said.

NURMI CLEAR OF GRAFT CHARGES

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, May 9.—Paavo Nurmi, remarkable athlete from Finland, stands exonerated of all charges that he had stepped off the path of amateurism during his running in this country. Hugo Quist, manager of Nurmi's American tour, and Willie Ritola, Finnish distance man, also have been cleared.

A committee of the Amateur Athletic union today cleared the men in a statement, which went as far as to censure Kenneth L. Wilson, athletic director of Drake university, who had brought charges that excessive expense money was demanded for their appearance in the Drake relays at Des Moines two weeks ago.

Wilson, thes tatement said, "should be censured for engaging a representative to obtain Nurmi's entry and for making an offer to Nurmi, which is in violation of all amateur rules."

Wilson Letter Read.

A two-day hearing, conducted by the committee, of which the national secretary, Frederick W. Rubien, was the head, developed the fact that Wilson had been in New York in December and had arranged with a New York newspaperman to represent him in the east. A letter written by Wilson was produced, which contained the following paragraph:

"We could pay him his way back to Ficland or give him the money, either one. Naturally, I want to protect his amateur standing and will trust you to handle this in a diplomatic fashion and let me know how things progress, so we can advertise this feature as soon as possible."

The statement related that Nurmi had been questioned at some length and proved that he knew nothing of arrangements for his participation in the Drake games. Ritola had filed an entry there and expected to compete, but in Chicago, before the date of the relays, Wilson is said to have visited the athletes in the dressing room and requested that Ritola change his distance from two miles to a mile race against Joie Ray. This was refused. Quist said he recalled the sum of $200 was mentioned in connection with Ritola's expenses. Wilson later canceled the two-mile race.

Expenses Approved.

Today's hearing included the suspension of Nurmi by the Middle-Atlantic association last night on a charge of having received excessive expenses for his participation in the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy games last February. These expenses have been checked and approved by the national body, it was asserted.

"The committee feels satisfied," the statement says in conclusion, "that the evidence presented does not in any way involve Nurmi or Ritola, and that they have neither directly nor indirectly received financial benefits through their competitions in this country. The Amateur Athletic union has made a thorough investigation throughout the entire country and has as yet to receive any definite information of any violation of amateur rules by either of the athletes mentioned."

HARVARD ROWS TO VICTORY

Cambridge, Mass., May 9.—The Harvard varsity eight-oared shell swept to victory over Pennsylvania, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Cornell in a mile and three-quarters race on the Charles river here late Saturday evening.

It was nearly dark when the Crimson shell crossed the finish line three lengths ahead of Pennsylvania, in 9 minutes and 11 seconds.

The Penn crew, minus the stroking of R. H. Reeve, No. 6, from the three-quarter-mile mark, where his oar-lock broke, finished one length ahead of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, while Cornell trailed M. I. T. by one length.

GEORGIA TRACK TEAM BEATEN

Athens, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Georgia's track team went down in defeat here today in a dual meet with the Auburn team by a score of 80 to 32.

The local team placed in only six of the 13 events. "Buster" Kilpatrick, of Athens, set up a new state record in the 440-yard dash, finishing in 50 4-5 seconds.

AMERICUS GOLFERS WIN TOURNEY

Americus, May 9.—(Special.)—Representatives of the local golf club, playing in the golf tournament at Fitzgerald Thursday, came within an inch of copping all honors. The local team carried away the honors in the woman's tournament, and the men's team being defeated for first place by a small score. Those playing were Mrs. Lucas Theirs and Mrs. M. H. Wheeler, Frank Harrold, John Sheffield, Middleton McDonald and Luther Hawkins. Competing in the tournament were teams from Hawkinsville, Fort Valley, Fitzgerald and Americus. The Hawkinsville team will play at Americus May 14.

COVENTRY MAY RETIRE FROM TRACK

Baltimore, Md., May 9.—Coventry, winner of yesterday's Preakness at Pimlico, may never race again, Gifford A. Cochran, the colt's owner, said today. A bowed tendon, developed in his two previous races may cause his retirement. He was sent to New York today and may be retired to the stud.

"It is possible he may not run again this season; that he may not run at all in the future," Mr. Cochran said.

SPORT SPECULATION

by George Congdon

Devil for a Witch.
Thomason's Game.
Nurmi Cleared.

"SWAPPING a devil for a witch" isn't a particularly new expression. Nor is it a new expression in baseball. The swapping of Messrs. Courtney and Clarke, left and right-handed followers of the pitching trade, for two right-handed throwers, Jim Yeargin and Jim Bagby by name, has just brought the expression into our cranial cavity for another period of consideration. The expression may be used almost synonymously with "jumping from the frying pan into the fire," or something like that.

Both Jim Yeargin and Jim Bagby have been around the country slinging baseballs for some years. They may be able to win a bunch of games for Atlanta, but if they are still winning pitchers it just seems to us that Seattle wouldn't be so anxious to get rid of them as to release them. Our recollection is that dispatches from Seattle were to the effect that Bagby, in particular, had been released and would leave for Atlanta. That doesn't sound good, no matter how good Bagby may turn out to be in the Southern league.

HARRY COURTNEY, when he's right, is not a bad pitcher. He has not been "right" this season, however, due to a sore spot in his left shoulder that wouldn't be rubbed, coaxed or pounded away. It kept him shooting wild. The wildness kept him from being a Southern league pitcher. However, we are wondering whether Mr. Bagby will come any closer to making the grade than Mr. Courtney did.

In spite of our howl last week for pitching talent in the Atlanta camp, we also sort of disliked to see Rufe Clarke hit the trail for points elsewhere. Rufe was another boy who couldn't quite master the art of control, but he had more luck than a dog has fleas. A lucky pitcher is a fine thing to carry with a ball club. Bert Niehoff proved that last year when he kept Hollis McLaughlin.

RECKON they were celebrating over in Athens last night. They ought to have been, if they weren't. Tech men weren't celebrating. That's certain. For instance, our good friend, Mack Tharpe, who plays football, to say nothing of la crosse, at Tech, and who writes pieces for the paper from time to time, was right sick last night. So sick, in fact, was Mack that he had to peck off his masterpiece in his Knowles dormitory apartment instead of at the shop, and then 300 words was about the best he could do.

J. D. Thomason did nothing more nor less than win his own ball game in Athens yesterday when Georgia won the second game from Tech. Holding a club to eight hits isn't a record-breaking achievement, but couple that kind of pitching with three hits out of four times at bat—one a base-cleaning triple—and you have something closely resembling a remarkable performance. Tech's only chance now is to back up on its haunches here next Friday and Saturday and play like a team possessed.

PAAVO NURMI has been cleared of charges of excessive expenses for his appearance at different indoor and outdoor athletic meets. That's relieving information, for it would be wrecking a popular idol for charges of professionalism to be proved against Nurmi. Nurmi has shown himself to be one of the greatest athletes the world has known. An amateur runner attracts national attention. For some reason or other, a professional attracts none.

The unexpected part of the investigation conducted by A. A. U. was the reprimand handed Kenneth L. Wilson, the one who dickered for Nurmi's appearance at the Drake relays. A fine proposition it was that he made when he outlined the offer that "we could pay him his expenses back to Finland or give him the money, either one." Mr. Wilson sort of opened the door for Nurmi to collect on a rather liberal scale.

WE'VE got our eyes peeled right now for some fellow right handy with the carving knife and needle and thread. After tussling for a few days with one of the little cusses we've reached the conclusion that one appendix in a bottle is worth half a dozen in one's anatomical composition.

Young Colts New To Fame Feature Entries at Kentucky

Eastern entries of most formidable candidates for the fifty-first Kentucky Derby, one of the most popular of American spring annuals for three-year-olds, which will be run over a mile and a quarter course at Churchill Downs, Louisville, Saturday, May 16, before 70,000 to 75,000 persons gathered from the four corners of the continent, with a value of upward of $70,000 in money and gold plate, will be mostly colts new to fame. The east will have no filly representative. Maid at Arms, Man o' War's sprightly daughter, which has been showing first-class form at Pimlico is a Kentucky Oaks but not a Kentucky Derby eligible. Mother Goose, which won last fall's Belmont Park futurity under the H. P. Whitney silks, which Regret bore to victory in the Derby of 1915, hasn't trained satisfactorily.

Quatrain, which won last winter's renewals of the New Orleans handicap and Louisiana Derby, started only once last season. Sweeping Away, winner of the Chesapeake at Havre de Grace, three weeks back, started twice, his companion of the stable of Edward F. Simms, Prince of Bourbon, only once. Hedgefence, winner of the Tijuana Derby revival of early March made his first appearance under silks at Tijuana in February. Chantey, Hedgefence's more formidable companion of the Greentree stable of Mrs. Payne Whitney, showed first at Havre de Grace in April. As Hedgefence had done at Tijuana, Chantey celebrated his first appearance under colors with victory, and one of the colts he licked was Sweeping Away. Overall and Backbone, the strongest three-year-olds of the H. P. Whitney stable, raced three or four times apiece as two-year-olds, but obscurely. They were not backward, but no particular effort was made to get either ready for two-year-old racing.

Robert L. Gerry's Voltaic won a minor stake at Saratoga last August, Walter J. Salmon's Devonshire started three times in July and August without doing better than finishing second. Augustus Busch's Chief Uncas, like Quatrain, a son of Omar Khayyam, the winner of the Derby of 1917, did not race at all. Goldstick won at Belmont Park in September. Of the Derby nominations that won distinction in two-year-old racing Singlefoot only still looks good. Singlefoot, after a brilliant early spring career in Maryland won last fall's renewals of the Laurel stakes and the Eastern Shore and Walden handicaps. He was beaten in the Belmont Park futurity by Mother Goose and Stimulus.

Stimulus, of which Marshall Field third, entertained high hope through the winter failed to stand spring training. So did Master Charlie, winner of the 1924 revivals of the Tijuana Futurity, Colorado and Kentucky Jockey Club stakes and the Hopeful, the biggest 2-year-old gleaner of them all. Sunny Man, winner of renewals of the Whirl, United States Hotel and Saratoga Special stakes, is dead, the victim of chloral poisoning administered probably through the ignorance or carelessness of some employee of the stable of Willis Sharpe Kilmer. Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt's $60,000 imported colt Nicholas, is a failure, not because he can't run, but because he won't.

Young Martin, Blue Ridge, American Flag, By Himself and Candy Kid, the last named winner of last season's Breeders' Futurity at Lexington are going soundly enough, but they don't measure up. The Derby standard is growing higher and higher. Horsemen of these parts have abandoned the practice of taking anything and everything to Louisville for Derbys.

The East's new derby stuff measures up in every direction. It is the consensus of expert opinion hereabout that few derby colts of other years have shown better quality than has been revealed by Chantey, Prince of Bourbon, Goldstick, Devonshire, Backbone and Overall. Quite a lot was written of the doings of Chantey, a son of Pennant and Enchanting and half brother of the gelding Enchantment with which Harry Payne Whitney won the third Kentucky Jockey club stakes, also, of the performances of Prince of Bourbon and Sweeping Away. Pimlico racing has confirmed the Havre de Grace form of these colts.

Believed Winners.

Men and women who have seen them run in Maryland believe that one of them will win at Churchill Downs next Saturday. Chantey and Prince of Bourbon will be preferred if the going is fast, Sweeping Away if there is mud. Sweeping Away, a son of Sweep, won the Chesapeake renewal in mud fetlock deep. Chantey and Prince of Bourbon may be as smart mudders as he is but neither has shown he is.

The east has not yet seen Quatrain, which, like Singlefoot, is Maryland bred. Quatrain's only race of last summer was run at Latonia. After his victories at New Orleans in February and March Frederick Johnson, his New York owner, sent him to Kentucky. His starting in the Preakness, which was renewed Friday at Pimlico, was prevented by an accident that interrupted his training at a critical time. Johnson was part owner of Omar Khayyam when Omar won the derby in 1917.

Backbone is conceded to be the best of the H. P. Whitney derby aspirants and from what he showed in the inaugural of the $10,000 Wood stakes at Jamaica eight days back, Backbone, appearing for the first time this season, took on a bunch that included Voltaic, Swope, Marconi, Felix, Reminder, Blue Ridge and Hedgefence and made them look bad. He raced from behind, after covering a mile in 1:38 4-5, to win at one mile and seventy yards in 1:43 and a fraction. He is a son of Whisk Broom II and Stamina. Whisk Broom, greatest of the sons of Broomstick, sired a Latonia Derby winner in Upset and equally great horses in Whiskaway, Flags, Gnome, John P. Grier and Hedgefence.

Voltaic Looks Good.

Voltaic looks a good derby prospect on his showing in the Wood. He hung valiantly to his work. He and Devonshire, a son of Gainsborough and Fortuna, she a daughter of Spearmint, are the most dangerous English bred colts in the Derby, now that Nicholas has flivvered. Devonshire did not beat Prince of Bourbon and Goldstick at Pimlico, but he is still green. Both Walter J. Salmon, his importer, and Thomas J. Healey, his developer, are confident he will improve.

Goldstick was bred in Pennsylvania by Archibald Barklie, who has been prominent in eastern sport for more than a quarter of a century. Mr. Barklie used to specialize in jumpers. He has gone in for production on a big scale. Goldstick is a son of the French bred Golden Broom, a son of the American stallion, Sweeper II, and the American mare, Zuna.

Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords won a Saratoga Special in 1920 with Golden Broom, which did not race after his 2-year-old season and did not have a chance to show whether he would go on or not. Golden Broom's first 2-year-olds raced last season. Most of them were fast, but didn't hang on. Goldstick looks a stayer.

TWO BENEFIT GAMES SET THIS WEEK

While the Crackers are battling the Birmingham Barons in the smokey city, The Atlanta Constitution's baseball team will stage a contest Thursday on Spiller's field for the benefit of the widows of the firemen whose lives were lost in the Jass warehouse fire. The opposition will be furnished by the Black & White Cab company.

Just one day previous to this, the Georgia Railway & Power company's nine and the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets will engage each other in a diamond combat.

The Constitution-Cab game should be an interesting affair, as these two teams have lined up against each other in two engagements and each team has been successful in capturing one game.

RUFUS CLARKE TURNED BACK TO DETROIT

Rufus Clarke, right-handed pitcher with the Atlanta club, will catch a rattler for Detroit, or some other point where baseball is played, during the next day or two. Clarke was turned back to the Detroit Tigers yesterday by President Dan Michalove under an optional agreement.

Clarke was turned back simultaneously with the purchase of Jim Yeargin, Pacific Coast right-hander, who will start at once for Atlanta from Seattle, the club he was with last season.

Clarke is the second member of the Cracker pitching staff to be released since April 15, when the squad was cut to 18 men for the first month of the 1925 season. Harry Courtney was sent back to the Pacific Coast league Friday, after failure to come through satisfactorily for a left-

Courtney's place will be taken by Jim Bagby, former Indian right-hander, who several years ago was a power with the Cleveland American league club.

Clarke has not pitched a great deal this season for the Crackers, but has had luck with him in most of the games in which he has worked.

Last year Clarke was one of the best pitchers Birmingham had, although his record was not good, due to the poor playing behind him.

When he was obtained during the winter Clarke was looked on by the Atlanta bosses as one of their best pitching bets. His principal trouble during his stay with the Crackers has been his wildness.

Clarke will stay in Atlanta until he receives orders from Detroit relative to whether he will go to the American league club or elsewhere.

TWO CONTESTS AT FORT TODAY

Two fast amateur baseball games await the Sunday baseball fans this afternoon at Fort McPherson, for Fort McPherson and the Ramblers will meet in the first game at 2 o'clock, and the Honor Feds and Atlanta Joint Terminals will meet in the final game at 3:30 o'clock.

There is plenty of parking space for every automobile that visits Fort McPherson Sunday afternoon.

ARMY TEAMS WIN COUPLE

West Point, N. Y., May 9.—Army teams won two of their three athletic contests today. The cadets lost to New York university on the diamond, 6 to 3, but defeated the University of Pennsylvania at la cross, 8 to 4, and triumphed over Boston college and New York university on the track. On the track meet, the Army scored 68 points against 43 for Boston and 24 for New York university.

Thomason Pitches Great Game and Knocks Triple With Three on the Paths

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—For the first time in six long years the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech met on the diamond here Friday and Saturday afternoon and just as happened in 1919, the Red and Black of Georgia triumphed over the Gold and White of Georgia Tech, winning the first game, 4 to 0, and the second, 7 to 3.

Saturday the largest crowd ever assembled on Sanford field gathered for the second of the series. Extra seats were erected to accommodate the throngs of visitors. It was estimated that approximately 7,000 people witnessed Saturday's game.

James David Thomason, captain of the Bulldogs, whose college baseball days are rapidly coming to a close, hurled, and well did the Red and Black veteran cover himself with glory. Though surrendering eight hits he pitched a beautiful game and as on Friday, he figured in the hitting role. Four were fanned and two walked.

"Scroup" Enloe was the Jacket choice as slabman, and he lasted for only four innings. The Bulldog batsmen had a big day off his offerings, eight hits being earned off his delivery. Of this number four were of the extra base variety and included in this lot were a brace of doubles, a triple and a homer. Both Conn and Enloe walked one man.

Conn Pulls Through.

When Enloe was sent to the showers, Johnnie Conn relieved him and kept the situation well under hand the rest of the day. True, on several occasions he was in tight places but he pulled out of the holes well.

Georgia scored three runs in the third inning. Arenowitch, first up, singled, and was sacrificed to second by Johnson. He took third when Middlebrooks singled, and when Satlof drew a pass the hassocks were filled. Richardson sent a roller to Moreland, who caught Arenowitch at home plate. Captain Thomason poled out a three bagger, cleaning the bases. The ball took a bad bounce and went by Wilder into deep left.

The remaining Bulldog tallies came in the fourth stanza. Frain was an easy out and Tulley, next up, singled. "Billy" Arenowitch caught one of Enloe's and sent it to deep center for four bases, scoring Tulley ahead. Johnson followed with a single and went to second when Wilder bobbled the ball. Middlebrooks flew out to Wilder and Wycoff muffed a throw at first, letting Satlof live and Johnson go to third. Nolan Richardson doubled, scoring Johnson and Satlof.

Angley Scores Denicke.

Tech's first run came in the fourth. "Skinny" Denicke, first up, was safe on Satlof's miscue. Wilder fanned and when Captain Palmisano singled Denicke went to third. Angley lifted a long sacrifice fly to right field, scoring Denicke, and Wycoff ended the inning when he went out, Middlebrooks to Tulley.

With one down, Wilder slammed out a double in the sixth, Palmisano made the second out, and Angley pulled Wilder's stunt, sending him across the plate. Wycoff's neat single sent Angley romping home.

Standing out among the Red and Blacks with the hickory was the performance of Captain Thomason. Three hits out of four attempts was his record and including were a single, double and triple. "Billy" Arenowitch, with a homer and single during a trio of trips to the pan, stands second for honors in the batting department.

Tom Angley was the only Jacket to find Thomason for more than one hit. A total of three were clustered by the Jacket right fielder and one was a timely double. Wilder also hit one for two sacks.

Fast Fielding.

Work afield by both the Jackets and Bulldogs was of a high caliber. Two excellent plays were executed by the Red and Black in the second inning when Angley hit safely but was run down between first and second, Richardson, Thomason and Tulley figuring in the play. Merkle reached first in the same inning on a walk, but was caught off the bag by Thomason.

Moore and Arenowitch caught several long fly balls, as did Merkle, for the visitors.

Georgia and Tech play the final two-game series next Friday and Saturday in Atlanta.

The Georgia student body, so enthused over the Bulldogs' two-game victory, staged a second parade in as many days. A monster bonfire was held on Herty field late Saturday night and a dance was held for the visiting Tech students, here in large numbers.

ATHENS OPENS DOORS TO JACKETS

BY MACK THARPE.

Athens, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Some 12,000 wild-eyed baseball fans saw Bill White's Bulldogs clinch the first half of the Tech-Georgia series Saturday afternoon on Sanford field and an even larger crowd is expected to witness the renewal of hostilities on Grant field next Friday and Saturday.

Georgia now rests in a most advantageous position and all they have to do now is to win one of the remaining two games. If they can do this, and they feel confident that they can with Andy Chambers on the mound, they will be justified in calling it a successful season.

The hospitality shown the Tech supporters in Athens was all that could be expected and the Georgia students put themselves out of the way to make the Tech boys feel at home. A Pan-Hellenic dance at Woodruff hall Friday night and a tea-dance Saturday after the game did much to cement the tie of friendship.

Just before the game the annual senior parade passed in review of the grandstand and all the dignified seniors were clad in costumes of every description. Among the paraders was a mule polo team which created quite a stir when one of the mules threw its rider just as he reached the reviewing stand.

Although the Jackets did not display their much vaunted hitting strength in this series, it is expected that they will reach top form for the Atlanta games. They will be more accustomed to Grant field, just like Georgia was to Sanford field, and the result will probably be the reverse of that Saturday.

Johnny Conn pitched excellent ball after relieving Enloe and no doubt he will start one of the Atlanta games. Georgia did not do much to his offerings and Coach Clay will probably send him to the rifle pit in an effort to win back the lost ground.

FOUR G. M. A. MEN WIN PLACES ON ALL-PREP BALL TEAM

Petrels Beat V. P. I. When Parrish Hits Homer

Terrell Also Loses Ball For Lope Around Bases; Game Closes Local Season

BY B. H. VINCENT.

Clay Parrish's bat was responsible for the Petrels' final victory of the 1925 season on Hermance field yesterday. The Petrels had trailed the V. P. I. nine for six innings, with only two hits being credited to them, when the big firstsacker came to bat in the seventh and poled one of Cummitt's fast ones over the center field fence to score Terrell ahead of him. The smack gave the Petrels a lead that the Virginians could not overcome during the remaining frames. The final score was 9 to 6.

The Petrel infield reverted to an old custom again in this game by booting the ball all over the lot. These miscues combined with timely hits, helped the V. P. I. nine to run up an early lead against the Oglethorpe club. The Petrels hammered away at the offerings of Cummitt but the V. P. I. infield gobbled up everything that the Petrels hit in its direction and with the Virginians hammering the offerings of Lefty Willis for safeties in every frame until the sixth the situation was looking gloomy for the Petrels.

Lefty Willis, as in most of the games in which he has worked this year, found the enemy particularly hostile toward him in the early innings. To start things off Gallup poled one over the left field fence for the circuit in the opening frame. The Virginians went runless in the next inning but came back strong in the third and scored two more runs on two hits and two bobbles by Wall and Partridge.

Partridge Scores on Error.

Although the Petrels did not get a hit off Crummitt until the sixth, Jay Partridge gave the spectators a thrill in the third when he raced from first home when Arrington dropped his fly near the left field foul line, and gave the Petrels their initial run. Duke Terrell injected some badly-needed pep into his faltering mates in the sixth when he slammed out a single for the Petrels' first hit of the game. Parrish followed with a single that sent Terrell across and sent Porter, who had drawn a free ticket to the third sack. Willer let one get by him and the Petrel catcher crossed with another run, but the birds were still one run behind when Willis grounded to Bond for the third out.

Parrish put the game on ice for the Petrels in the seventh with his homer over the center field fence, but Duke Terrell, was not to be out done. He slapped one over the fence for the circuit, that sent Willis and Partridge scampering across with two more runs that served to increase the Petrels' lead beyond the hopes of the Virginians whose ninth-inning rally fell short.

The Petrels left this morning for Nashville, where they will meet the Vanderbilt Commodores tomorrow.

Pirates Rally and Win.

Philadelphia, May 9.—The Pittsburg Pirates rose in their might in the eighth irning today and took from the Phillies what looked like a safe game for the locals. The score was 6 to 5. Up to the eighth, Clarence Mitchell held the Pittsburgers to five hits and two runs and then lost his cunning. Betts came to the rescue, but it was too late.

Wearing Out the Green

BY WALTER TRUMBULL

I WOULD not play like Hagen:
'Twould be a bore, I ween,
Never to make a small mistake
The length of tee to green.

Suspense is golf's attraction;
I say in positive tones
Too true a stroke becomes a joke:
I would not play like Jones.

Sometimes I'd rather dub one.
Now tell me, if you please,
If in a round you ever found
Three better lies than these.

THESE silly persons who tell you that golf isn't exercise only show their ignorance of the game. They evidently don't know that a course is composed of tees, fairways, woods, swamps, sand traps and greens.

The average golfer playing a round walks about four miles on the fairway, two miles through the woods, a mile through the swamp and three miles through sand. That's a total of ten miles walking, accompanied by constant lung exercises at top voice—exercise enough for anyone.

Mr. Suffren Mark declares that the most difficult hazard to get out of at his course is a special assessment.

The last special assessment at the Deficit Golf and Country club was levied for the purpose of stocking the water hazards with goldfish.

Try to employ a straight left arm
To guide your golfing game:
It keeps the player safe from harm
And points the path to fame.

Babe Ruth can pull a ball over the right-field fence just as easily in golf as in baseball, but it doesn't give him the same joy.

Low blood pressure is one thing which it is easy to correct. All the patient has to do is miss a six-inch putt.

Some day we are going to find a country that never heard of golf, and then we are going to go there and become a champion.

HE IS not fair to outward view;
His neck is burned and red;
His ears are set somewhat askew
And stick out from his head:
He's knockneed; yet each golfer thinks
His form is most divine,
For he can step out on the links
And shoot a seventy-nine.

So, if some Jovian decree
Could grant us one request,
We wouldn't give a whoop to be
Apollo at his best;
Such symmetry of line or limb
We'd cheerfully resign
To have the golfing form of him
Who shoots a seventy-nine.

MR. SOOPER DUB sends us an interesting query. It seems that Mr. Dubb played a ball out of a hazard into the open mouth of a caddie, who was standing laughing at him. As the caddie had been having his teeth straightened and the wires were still on them, Mr. Dubb claims it was ground under repair and asserts his right to drop a ball, without penalty.

This claim would have considerable justice, but it develops that, in his agitation, the caddie swallowed the ball and Mr. Dubb was unable to recover it within the five minutes permitted.

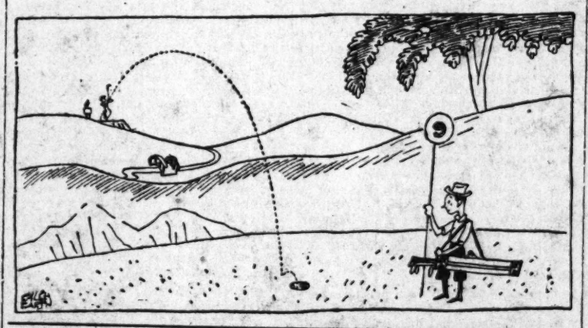

A ball driven into ground under repair must be found to allow the player to lift it. Therefore Mr. Dubb was wrong. The ball should have been treated as though lost elsewhere in the rough.

The gallery may or may not remember a player's straight drives, but it never forgets the time he hooked out of bounds.

Summer skies, summer flowers, summer golfers—and some are not.

Myatt, Cleveland catcher, also hit a home run.

MATHER CHIEF LEAVES FOR FLORIDA MEETING

Cotton Mather, member of the firm of Mather Brothers, wholesale and retail furniture dealers, left today for Orlando, Fla., where he will attend a convention of the Florida Retail Furniture Dealers' association that convenes in that city this week.

Mather Brothers at present have five retail furniture stores in Florida, and Mr. Mather says that while on this trip he will complete arrangements for the opening of two other stores in that state, at Tampa and Lakeland.

Only a few days ago announcement was made that Cotton Mather had consummated a deal with the Archibald Hardware company of Sarasota, Fla., whereby the Mather firm assumes controlling interest in a large retail furniture store in that city, with a capital stock of $100,000.

VETERAN POLE CHAMP AT 45

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Stanislaus Zbyszko, the Pole, was considered too aged to be of use to the wrestling trust—the mysterious organization that "arranges" most of the "big" wrestling matches and schedules the results. Zbyszko was supposed to have reached 45, an age when most athletes are too stiff in the joints to compete any more. Zbyszko had shriveled away to almost normal proportions—normal, that is, in comparison to what he used to look like as world's Graeco-Roman champion 25 years or so ago, when he was a human hippopotamus. Consequently Zbyszko was hovering around the tank towns taking on matches where he could find them.

Big Munn, Nebraska football player and ex-boxer, threw Strangler Lewis and unexpectedly became world's champion wrestler. Big Munn was an independent worker, not under trust control. His succession to the championship produced much indignation and many violent protests. Unless he came in he was likely to cause a mixup in the smooth running wrestling machine. Big Mum began laying out his own wrestling program. He wrestled a few prefectly safe opponents and threw them. He threw the aged Zbyszko, who looked rather fat and soft and who didn't offer much resistance. A few weeks later Munn said he was going on a long trip to Europe.

To get a little traveling money Big Munn took on Zbyszko again, in an eastern bout in Philadelphia. Zbyszko, champion years ago, still had a reputation and could help draw a good gate. Besides which Zbyszko was undoubtedly growing softer and fatter. Munn had that impression, and Zbyszko didn't contradict it.

Works as Munn Did.

Zbyszko threw Big Munn in eight minutes, eleven seconds, picking the cornshucker giant up and throwing him to the floor much as Munn threw Strangler Lewis a few months ago.

In the intermission Munn's backers sent out word that Munn had tonsilitis and wasn't feeling very well, and would the obliging Mr. Zbyszko take on one of Munn's wrestling partners for the second bout and excuse the champion for the rest of the evening?

Mr. Zbyszko refused, and Munn had to come out and wrestle again, only to be thrown a second time in four minutes. That Made Zbyszko world's champion again, age 45. The inside story of this event is that Zbyszko fooled Munn. He learned all about him in the first match, then trained into shape and beat him.

When Stanislaus Cganiewicz Zbyszko was a young fellow of about 35 few wrestlers cared to meet him.

At that time Georges Hackenschmidt was king of the grapplers, and Zbyszko challenged him without result. Georges was interested just then in learning the American style of wrestling, catch-as-catch-can. Zbyszko followed Hack to America on one of his trips, and a match was arranged in New York. It was a handicap match. Hackenschmidt to throw Zbyszko twice in two hours or lose the match and purse. Hackenschmidt tried every trick he knew for two hours, but he didn't throw Zbyszko. I went down to Hack's dressing room after the match to see what his alibi would be.

"Ah, but no," said Hackenschmidt. "I did not have hard luck. I did the best that I could. He was too strong for me. I had no idea he was so strong. I could not throw him. I could do nothing with him. I am very tired. He is better than I am. I am fortunte that he did not throw me."

Zbyszko Weighed 245 Pounds.

At that time Zbyszko weighed 245 pounds. His height was 5 feet 10 inches. His neck was 22 inches, chest 55 inches, waist 42 inches. He had 23-inch biceps and a 19-inch forearm—the biggest ever recorded among athletes. His wrist was 13 inches, thigh 32 inches, calf 19 inches. He was almost hideously out of proportion, dwarfed by monstrously-broad shoulders and huge masses of muscle. His neck was so short and thick that ordinary wrestling holds slipped right over his head.

Stanislaus was thrown once, by Frank Gotch, the American champion. Frank was a clever wrestler and trickiest and most guilful of all mat men. He never gave Zbyszko another chance At that time Zbyszko knew nothing about catch-as-catch-can wrestling, and Frank's favorite invention was the toe hold.

During the war Zbyszko was in Russia. In 1917 he was grabbed by the blosheviki, who demanded to know what the Pole was do

BIRMINGHAM AND VOLS FACE CRACKERS THIS WEEK

Red Smith Still Leading Hitter in Southern

Ty Cobb Is Paving Way In American as Fournier Hits Stride in National

Third Baseman Smith, of Atlanta, has dropped from his high average of .500 to the more conservative figure of .455, which is, however, high enough to make him the leader among the Southern association sluggers. Pitcher McBee, of Little Rock, has a courtesy lead of .545, but as he has only been at bat a few times it has no bearing on the real figures. Crowder, of Birmingham, has the unique distinction of having figured in 11 games but has only been at bat nine times.

Next to Smith in importance are Anderson, of Chattanooga, and Barbare, of Memphis. Both are over the .400 mark. Niehoff, of Atlanta, and Davis, of Nashville, have continued their good stick work.

Gulley, of Little Rock, and Cullop, of Atlanta, are tied in home runs with five apiece. Taylor, of Memphis, has been the star performer in intermediate hits with nine triples to his credit.

Speed on the bases is looking up. Lewis, of Nashville, is setting the pace with 11 stolen sacks. Stewart, of Birmingham, is his nearest competitor with only one behind.

Crarkers Hitting .323.

Atlanta as a team is hitting at almost the same clip as last week, .323. Nashville has fallen back slightly, while Chattanooga has gone to third place.

New Orleans has come from near the bottom to set the pace in fielding. Little Rock is only six points behind. Mobile, which was second last week, has dropped to the rear, having taken Birmingham's place.

McLaughlin, of Atlanta, tops the pitchers. He has three victories and no defeats. Clarke, his teammate, has four and one. Wiltse, of Mobile, and Toney, of Nashville, has each two victories. Brillheart, of Memphis, has improved his record by winning four and only losing one.

Georgia Peach Leads.

Ty Cobb, coming back into the game with a rush, went to the top among the American league batters just as fast. In two games he became the leading home run hitter of the league by putting the ball into the wide open spaces for five circuit clouts. These with his six hits in six times at bat helped to give the .500 percentage.

George Sisler, first sacker for the Browns, has been less spectacular than the Georgia peach, but none the less effective. He has been in twice as many games as Tyrus, which make his .433 the more impressive. Taking the number of games into consideration he is the actual leader in the race, although he figures sixth. The fact that he hit safely in the twenty-second consecutive game in the final against the Tigers gives some evidence of his work.

Two other veterans are coming to the front, Heilmann, of Detroit, and Tris Speaker, of the Indians. Heilmann is just below Sisler in stick work while Severeid, of the Browns has an edge over Tris.

Combs Next.

Earl Combs, of the Yankees, is apparently getting back into form. The former association player is nearest to Cobb in the rating with a clouting average of .467 for 16 games.

Before Cobb started on the rampage there was little of the spectacular in the home-run department, Simmons, of Philadelphia, and Myatt, of Cleveland, being second with four each.

Johnny Mostil, of the Chicago White Sox is a lonesome figure on the basepaths. He has stolen 13 bases and no one is within hailing distance of the speedy outfielder. Eddie Collins, who held the record last year, has only been able to mark up three.

The Athletics and Browns are battling for the team hitting leadership. The Mackmen having the edge with one point. Washington and Cleveland are right behind the first two.

New York and Philadelphia are just as close in the fielding department only one point separating the two. There is a general crowding towards the top of the rest.

Two Philadelphia pitchers are among the topnotchers in hurling, which largely counts for the leadership of the Athletics. Gray has won four games and lost none while Rommel has won four and lost one.

Fournier Starts.

When Jack Fournier, of the Robins, starts hitting it is usually an all-day job. He is known among his rivals as a "streak" hitter. In other words when he starts he is a hard man to stop. Jumping in the percentage 24 points in one game he attained the lordly average of .500, but adversity hit him the next game and he fell back to .473, his present mark.

It is probably well that Jack is getting a good start as none other than Rogers Hornsby is in the offing. The Cardinal second sacker is quite a distance behind at present but he is coming which is the threatening part. His .444 has landed him second.

Snyder, of New York, always dangerous this time of the year, is third in the rating. Fonseca, discarded by Cincinnati, is the life of the party in Philadelphia, the second sacker being fourth in the list among the heavy performers.

Looking Natural.

It is beginning to look more natural all along the line with the old reliables showing among the leaders. Bottomley, of St. Louis, has been hitting at a fiendish clip. Moore, of Pittsburg, hasn't weakened, while Mokan, of the Phillies, and Wheat, of Brooklyn, are holding up their ends. Southworth, who couldn't get started last year, is doing better this. Roush, of Cincinnati; Cuyler, of Pittsburg; Meusel, of New York, and his teammate, Frisch, are heading the right way.

Hartnett, of Chicago, leads the long-distance performers. Fournier is the nearest, while Hornsby, Kelly, of New York, and Wright, of Pittsburg, have had their bats in working order. Wright incidentally, furnished the sensation of the week with an unassisted triple play.

The base stealers in the oler circuit are still in comatose condition and nothing worth while has happened.

Philadelphia, which as a team has been flailing the ball with a vengeance, led in team hitting. Brooklyn is doing its best to keep up. The Giants are third. Chicago, weak in hitting, has been playing the best game in the field. Cincinnati has done almost as well. Although Bentley, of New York, technically leads the pitchers with three victories, the work of Luque, of the Reds, with four won and one lost has been the most noteworthy.

TECH FISHMEN WIN FROM VANDERBILT

BY GORDON KEITH.

Two southern college records fell as Georgia Tech's fast moving swimming team swam circles around Vanderbilt's water stars in the "Y" pool Saturday night. The Jacket entries amassed six firsts and six seconds out of eight events for a total of 52 points. Vandy made things interesting and copped two firsts, a second and seven thirds for a 24 point total.

Norfleet lowered the southern record two-fifths of a second in the 100-yard breast stroke when he led the field to win in 1:20 2-5, and the Jackets relay team cut a fifth of a second from the record of 1:24 3-5 in the 160-yard relay. The stars to contribute the new relay record were Bruce, Norfleet, Wardlaw and Noyes.

Tech had things completely its own way in four events, placing both first and second in the fancy dive, 220-yard free style, the breast stroke, and the 100-yard free style. Vandy grabbed first place in the 40-yard free style and the plunge, but the Jackets managed to have a man close behind in each event and kept the visitors from walking away with the events.

Connelly Wins In Diving.

As usual, the prettiest part of the meet was the fancy dive, which Connelly of Tech won. Vandy entered six divers, while Tech tried only two, but the Jacket artists finished one-two after a close race. Several difficult dives were made, but the winner's ability to hit the water cleanly was perhaps his biggest asset. De Bardelben, of Vanderbilt, made several sensational dives, and he pushed the winners close for first honors.

High point man of the meet was Hollingsworth, of Tech, with two first places for 10 points. He won the 220 and the 100-yard back stroke. Norfleet and Noyes, both of Tech, were second with seven points each, representing a first place and two points for swimming on the winning relay team. Norfleet won the breast and Noyes the 100-yard free style. Vandy's highest point winners were Guy and Williams, each with five points. Guy won the 40-yard free style and Williams the plunge for distance.

In the swimming events, the most interesting was the relay. The relay was run first, and counted eight points. Tech got the lead with the first swimmer, and though the Jackets never relinquished their advantage, the record setters were pressed hard throughout and was leading the Vandy swimmer by only a very few yards at the finish. The closest event of the day, however, was the 40-yard free style, where three men finished within two feet of each other.

Summaries.

Relay—won by Tech; team composed of Bruce, Norfleet, Wardlaw and Noyes. Time, 1:24 2-5 (new southern record).

40-yard free style—first, Guy (V); second, Bruce (T); third, Rutherford (V). Time, 21 seconds.

220-yard free style—first, Hollingsworth (T); second, Wardlaw (T); third, Silver (V). Time, 2:47.

Fancy dive—first, Connelly (T); second, Glover (T); third, deBardeleben (V).

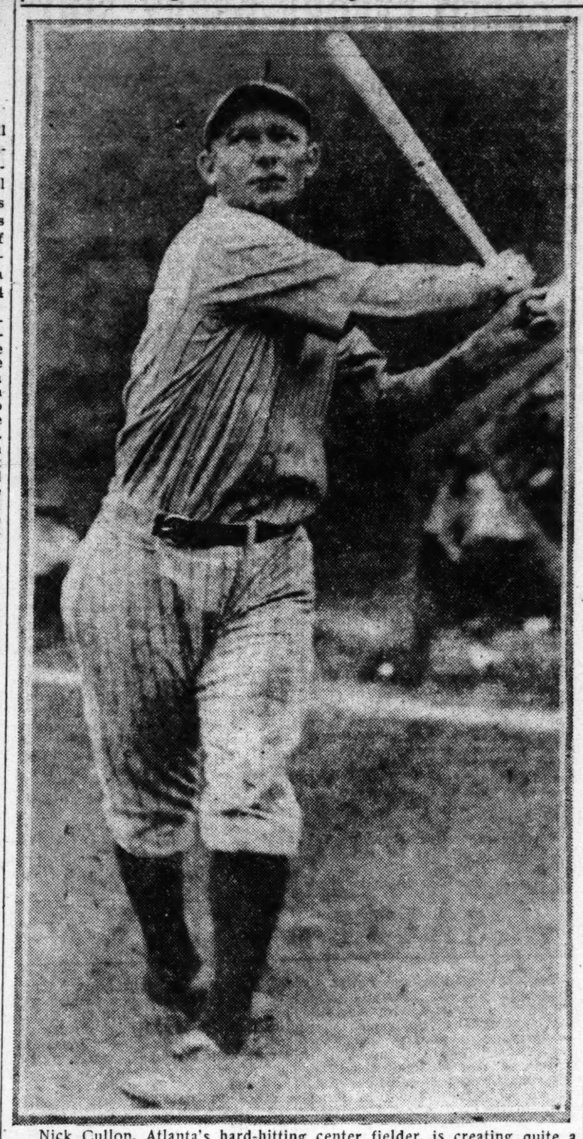

Plunge for distance—first, Williams (V); second, Bloodworth (T); third, Fletcher (V). Distance, 49 feet.

100-yard breast stroke—first, Norfleet (T); second, Glover (T); third, Vaughn (V). Time, 1:20 2-5 (new southern record).

100-yard free style—first, Noyes (T); second, Bruce (T); third, Nance (V). Time, 1 minute.

100-yard back stroke—first, Hollingsworth (T); second, Rutherford (V); third, Bloodworth (T). Time, 1:14 1-5.

Cullop Destroys Fences

Nick Cullop, Atlanta's hard-hitting center fielder, is creating quite a sensation in the Southern league this year with the vicious cut he takes at the ball. He has accumulated six home runs to date, and is tied for the league lead. He is seen here completing one of his swings.

Farmer Boy's Colt Shows Promise of Racing to Fame

BY W. H. GOCHER.

Hartford, Conn., May 9.—The free legged pacer Harry B. in Crozier's stable is beginning to attract attention by his track manners and speed. Last December this gelding was sent to the New York Sale by J. A. Rhoades of Phoenixville, Pa. He was knocked down for $225 to a buyer who gave his name and address as J. Acker, New York. At present the horse is owned by two or three people living near Hartford, one being a dealer in horses at Cromwell. This was a rather low figure for a sound gelding foaled in 1917 and which according to the owner's statement worked a mile in 2:11, last half in 1:01, over a half-mile track after being trained sixty days.

The sale catalogue reported Harry B. as being by Star Pointer, Jr., 2:15 1-4, out of a mare by Anderson Wilkes. After he paced Charter Oak Park in 2:22 with a last quarter in 32 seconds, J. A. Rhoades was asked for a little information in regard to him. He replied that Harry B. was shipped from Indiana to Bellville, Pa., with a carload of horse and mule colts when he was six months old. D. C. Rhoades of Hummelstown, Pa., brought him in and gave his pedigree as it appeared in the sale catalogue.

A farmer boy purchased Harry B. at the colt sale and in time sold him to George Brindle, of Belleville, Pa. He worked him one season at Lewistown, Pa., where he showed a mile in 2:16. J. A. Rhoades purchased him in 1921. He turned the horse over to Al Kline. He worked him two months over the mile track at Belmont Park, Philadelphia, where he paced 2:11 and a half in 1:01. From there he was shipped to Kutztown where he would do nothing but go to the outside of the track. Later on Harry B. was started at Lewistown, where he was distanced after finishing fourth in the first heat won by Jerry S. in 2:18 1-4. He was also unplaced at Newport and Port Royal.

From that time until last season Harry B. was used as a road and saddle horse. In 1924 John Street trained him for a few weeks but he acted badly and was sent home. Now Harry B. is on his way to make a name for himself in the Bay State Circuit.

Roy Martin has moved his horses from Rockville to Charter Oak Park. He has five head. His record horses are White Hackle 2:11 1-4, by San Francisco, and Hollywood Fancy 2:16 1-4 by Peter the Great. The latter is a sister to Hollyrood Bob 2:04 3-4. She was injured in a race at Cherry Park in 1923, but has recovered. Before leaving home Martin lost by death the four-year-old gelding Bob Doble, by Belwin. He had a two-year-old record of 2:10.

Frank Whitcomb, of Springfield, Mass., has made a change in his stable which James Small trains at Charter Oak Park. He exchange the chestnut gelding Red March 2:14 1-4 by Prince March and some money with Squire Brothers for the three-year-old gelding Ovation, by San Francisco out of Leone the Great, dam of The Great Belwin 2:08 1-4 and Leonewah 2:09 1-4. Lon McDonald sol this gelding at the last "Old Glory" sale for Hugh McCaffrey, of Peru, Ind. Squire Brothers purchased him for $500. They shifted him to a pace and worked him in 2:15 over the half-mile track at Windsor before the transfer was made. Ovation is a tall bay gelding with a broad white stripe in his face and acts like a good horse.

Fred Brusie has been busy with the three-year-old filly Frances Brown. She has been in 2:24, last quarter in 33 seconds. This filly was bred at Walnut Hall farm. She is by San Francisco out of Smooth Silk by Walnut Hall.

Alvin Pointer and the three-year-old gelding Volo Guy by Peter Volo are getting ready for the races. They have been in 2:24, last quarter in 31 seconds. In 1923 while in a race at Plattsburgh, N. Y., Alvin Pointer broke a bone in one of his hind pasterns. The insurance company which carried a policy on the little pacer settled the claim and marked him dead on their books. He is now on the go again. Recently when another application was made to insure him it was turned down with the comment "You cannot insure a dead horse." A few years ago Budd Murray had the same thing happen with his pacer, Junior Hal 2:05 3-4, who is still on earth and in training for another campaign.

Fred Belwin will have Miss Mertine L. by Perrigo ready for the word when the Bay State circuit opens at Worcester. She has been in 2:17. The Belwin gelding, Conclave, has been in 2:18. He is a brother to Prince Charming and Charm.

Miss Binland, 2:15 1-4, by Binland, is now in Harry Brusie's stable at Charter Oak park. She arrived from Springfield, Ohio, a few days ago.

The 2-year-old chestnut Peter filly, Miss Etta, has been in 2:25. A few days ago when being worked in company she trotted a quarter in 32 seconds. Very few trotters have as much whizz as this baby. Her stable companion, Alice Etawah, has recovered from a cold which put her on the shelf for a couple of weeks. She is on the move again.

Trades Pacer.

Harry Brusie has traded a pacer and some coin with Belcher Williams for the 4-year-old gelding Etawah Watts. He brushed a quarter in 33 seconds the first time out. This youngster was in Roy Martin's stable in 1923. He drove him a quarter in 32 seconds.

The showing made by the Peter Volo 2 year olds in Harry Brusie's stable will prompt many a man to purchase a well-bred youngster that is going cheap at a sale. The returns show that last December as yearlings Purple Volo sold for $250. Tippie Volo for $300 and Neill Volo for $430. Purple Volo is out of Purple Silk by Directum Spier. Kitty O'Neill, 2:07 1-4, the dam of Neill Volo, is a sister to O'Neill, 2:07 1-4 and Tippie Volo's dam. Martha Tipton by Walnut Hall carries a record of 2:09 1-4. If they do not meet with any mishaps this trio will be trotting in 2:20 before the first of June.

The 3-year-old gelding Slickaway, by Belwin, out of the dam of Fayette National, 2:08 1-4, has been in 2:20 1-4. He has a good way of going and will learn to trot fast.

WOMEN START TOURNEY TUESDAY

BY MRS. CLARENCE BRADLEY.

The Atlanta Woman's Golf association will hold its first match play tournament of the year over the East Lake golf course, beginning with the qualifying round Tuesday morning, May 12. Match play Wednesday will be continued daily until the finals are played Friday.

Mrs. Don M. Dickinson, the association representative at East Lake, will have charge of the tournament and will be on the first tee to start the players off in regular order. This will be a handicap tournament, the handicaps to apply in the matches only. There will be eight in each flight and the usual trophies will be awarded the winners and runner-up of each flight.

There will be a nine-hole or baby flight for those who do not care to travel the full 18 holes. The usual trophies will be played for, except the first flight. Those making the first flight will play for a Bradley knitted golf dress, offered by E. H. Jordan & Sons. Anyone who is not a member of the association and wishes to play in this tournament may join Tuesday and play in the tournament and all other tournaments sponsored by the association during the year.

The East Lake golf course is in fine condition for the tournament, while the dried-out condition of the fairways will be a severe test for accuracy from the tees and on the fairways, the fine condition of the putting greens will more than make up for the unlucky shots and the players should be able to cut down the score on the greens.

This tournament should bring out the woman golfers of Atlanta, particularly the beginners. It will give them an opportunity to compete with the better players and with the liberal handicaps arranged by the handicap committee, it will give the beginners an advantage over the more experienced players. It will also give the players tournament practice that should improve their game.

Mrs. Dozier Lowndes, southern woman's golf champion and president of the Atlanta Woman's Golf association, requests that the qualifying rounds and all the matches be played in the morning, owing to the crowded condition of the course in the afternoon.

ARCHITECTS PLAN TOURNEY

Architects and draftsmen of the southeast will play their annual golf tournament at the East Lake course Saturday, it was announced Saturday by F. Graham Williams, who is planning the tournament.

The entrants will assemble at the East Lake course at noon, play during the afternoon, and finish off the day with a dinner in the evening.

The tournament has been conducted for two years and has been a big success. New trophies are offered annually.

Southern Race Entering Fifth Week With Teams Bunched; Crackers Leading

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN

Today—Mothers' day—the Crackers are enjoying their first off day of the season before swinging into the fifth week of 1925 Southern luague competition, with the Birmingham Barons and the Nashville Volunteers playing hosts and guests, respectfully.

The headquarters of Bert Niehoff and his sluggers Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will be a hotel in Birmingham, after which the Georgia delegation will return to its native heath for a couple of games with the Nashville crew, which is pushing the home club for top honors. Friday and Saturday.

After playing through a week of more or less unsuccessful campaigning, the local contingent finds itself exactly where it started the week—barely leading the league with the Nashville aggregation one-half game behind.

Southern league standings show that the race to date has been very keen, with no club entirely out of the money. The Crackers, leading the league, have won 15 out of 26 starts to date. Nashville is second, with Chattanooga and Memphis tied for third. New Orleans is fifth, while Birmingham, Little Rock and Mobile are bringing up the rear in order named.

Dobbs Heads Barons.

The Birmingham team is managed by Johnny Dobbs, a picturesque character in the Southern league who has managed clubs in most every town in the circuit.

Many changes have been made in the Birmingham lineup since last season, but Dobbs has coralled a very formidable aggregation, though it has been slow at getting away this season. Stuffy Stewart, Bruce Hartford and Del Lundgren are the only three holdovers from last year's team.

When the Vols come here for their two games Friday and Saturday and the Cracker-Vol series in Nashville next Sunday, it will be a good time to eliminate this "half game" business and put one or the other definitely on top. On the other hand, the Lookouts or Chicks may have the coveted position by that time. The race is close at any rate, with four and one-half games still separating top from bottom.

Vols Surprise Folks.

Manager Jimmy Hamilton is bringing a strong crew of Volunteers here. Nashville was figured at the beginning of the season as something of a second-rate club, but has turned out to be anything else but that and at present is causing Nieheff and his gang more worry than any other club in the circuit. Lefty Keenan, Axel Lindstrom, Lee Mackey and Ray Friday are among the more prominent of the holdovers on the Nashville team. In addition to these, Hamilton has an aggregation of players who are proving to be the sensation of the league thus far.

The Crackers, however, with Bagby and Yeargin, former St. Paul Burlers, to bolster the faltering pitching staff will be out to stretch the margin of difference between Atlanta and the next club in the race.

LOUISIANA STATE DEFEATS TULANE

New Orleans, May 9.—Louisiana State university defeated Tulane university, 67 to 45, in a track and field meet here today. A hard wind prevented good time being made in any of the running events.

EMORY SPLITS GEORGIA NET MATCH

Emory and the University of Georgia split their dual tennis meet Saturday, each team winning two of the four matches played. This was the first tennis meet entered by either school this year.

In the feature match of the day, Mosley, of Emory, defeated Everett, Georgia's best offering, in straight sets, the scores being 6-1, 7-5. This match was somewhat of a disappointment to the large audience, Mosley failing to unloose his powerful drive at any time throughout the two sets. Everett played an excellent defensive game, but was beaten chiefly by Mosley's net play.

The first match won by Georgia was between Gallaher, of Georgia, and Walker, of Emory. Gallaher used a swift drive and a good offensive game in general, and won from Walker, 8-6, 5-7, 6-3.

In the Branscomb-Denny match, Denny, of Georgia, started off by taking the first set, slamming every ball for all he was worth. Branscomb began to take everything Denny had, however, and sent them back hotter than they came. Denny won this match, 5-6, 6-4, 6-0.

The closest match of the meet, and probably the one which brought forth the best tennis, was the doubles match. Georgia's pair, Everett and Gallagher, started a series of drives followed by brilliant network that finally nosed out Branscomb and Walker, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2.

The next tennis meet to be entered by either Georgia or Emory will be the Georgia state tournament, to be held at Emory May 18. Tech, Oglethorpe, Mercer, Georgia and Emory will enter teams in this tourney.

TOURNEY WON BY THOMASVILLE

Thomasville, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Thomasville defeated Quitman on Glen Arven Country club golf links here recently in the Georgia-Florida Golf league by a score of 12 to 9. The game was very close throughout and was not decided until the two last players had putted out on the eighteenth hole, which was won by McDougald playing for Thomasville.

WEST VIRGINIA BEATS PITT.

Pittsburg, May 9.—University of West Virginia defeated University of Pittsburg in a dual track meet here today by a score of 78 1-2 to 56 1-2.

Benefit Baseball Contests To Be Played for Firemen

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Atlanta's sporting fans, especially those who love baseball, will have an opportunity to contribute to a worthy cause in connection with a baseball game next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Spiller field, when Tech and the Georgia Railway & Power nine will meet in a game where all the proceeds from the sale of tickets, score cards and other things that go to make a baseball game complete, will go to the relief of the families of the six Atlanta firemen who were killed in action last Wednesday morning on Decatur street. Tickets are on sale at every fire engine house and at Tom Pitts'.

Tickets for the game are selling fast. An unofficial check late Saturday afternoon showed more than 5,000 tickets have already been sold and others were going just as fast. A total of 10,000 tickets were distributed among the 18 fire stations and men off duty Saturday were busy in the downtown section.

Get Gross Receipts.

All of the proceeds of the game will go to the relief of the families of the six firemen killed while fighting flames last Wednesday morning on Decatur street. There will be practically no expense attached to the advertisement of the game and everyone connected with the benefit game is giving services free of charge in order to swell the figures that will go to the distressed widows.

Not only are those who buy tickets giving to a worthy cause but one of the best amateur ball games of the season is certain to result when Tech and the Georgia Railway & Power company teams meet.

Tech is making a strong bid for southern collegiate honors and getting ready for the final series of the year Friday and Saturday with the Georgia Bulldogs and it will be a fine opportunity to see the Jackets in action for the last few games of the season.

Georgia Railway & Power company, amateur champions of the city for the past three years, is much stronger this year than ever before and because of its strength, the power nine was not permitted to be a member of any of the amateur leagues this season. The power company team has been playing an independent schedule in preparation for a semi-pro season this summer.

Tech is far above the average amateur team and the power company nine is also out of its class in amateur circles and no better, no closer matched game could be arranged for the benefit occasion next Wednesday afternoon.

are playing in great schools in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico and passes to Sarasota bay and with the new moon May 22 they will be striking, and the tarpon season will be on in these waters for sixty days.

AGGIES BEAT 'BAMA ON TRACK

Starkville, Miss., May 9.—The Mississippi A. & M. college track and field team, Southern Conference champions, defeated the University of Alabama team, 103 to 22, in a dual meet here today. The Mississippians won first place in every event except the shot put, and made it their third consecutive year without a defeat.

BLACK CRACKERS PLANNING SEASON

The Black Crackers, colored baseball club, will have its opening game during the week of May 25. This club is being reorganized by the Business Men's club. It will play games with teams from Tennessee, Kentucky and Ohio. Home games will be played while the Atlanta Crackers are on the road.

H. Y. Peek, secretary of the club, is booking games with other good colored aggregations and promises a good schedule.

"How absurd the old fashion mazazines appear!" "Not so absurd," answered Miss Cayenne, "as the present fashions would have appeared to our grandmothers if they could have seen them."—Washington Star.

DR. H. N. ALFORD WINS SHOOT

The preliminary shoot at the Atlanta Gun club for the state meet, held Saturday, was won by Dr. H. N. Alford. He shot two strings perfectly, dropping only one bird in the other two.

J. R. Cothram was next, with a score of 97. Walter Huff, Macon professional, was also in second place, but his score does not count, as he is a professional. Arthur Cuscaden, of Miami, Fla., was fourth with a score of 96. Other high-point men were W. H. Perrin, J. M. Mallard, Dr. J. S. Derr and Dr. J. C. Wright.

Walter Huff was good in the doubles, making a perfect score of 24 for the day. Second was Dr. J. G. Wright with 22 dead birds, and Dr. Alford, state champ in doubles, took third with 21.

COLQUITT HI WINS COUPLE

Arlington, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Arlington High school lost another game of baseball to Colquitt High on the latter's diamond Thursday afternoon by the score of 10 to 7 in a well-played and interesting affair.

The outstanding features of the game were the sensational outfielding of Gleaton, for Arlington, and the hitting of A. Kimbrel, of Colquitt. Kimbrel collected five hits, one a home run, and another a triple. Davis led in the stick work for Arlington with three sameties.

BEARS SHUT OUT BY BENNING

Fort Benning, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—The Fort Benning soldiers held the Mercer Bears scoreless here today when they defeated them, 7 to 0, in a game that was fast from the start and full of thrills. The game was featured by the way in which the soldiers wielded their war clubs.

Furman Sweeps to Victory in S. I. A. A. Track Meet

Millsaps Star Breaks Pole Vault Record

Birmingham, Ala., May 9.—Furman university of Greenville, S. C., swept through the field of Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association track and field contestants here this afternoon and captured the meet with 62 points. Birmingham Southern, hostess for the occasion, came in second with 39 points, followed by Mississippi college, which tallied 26 points.

Young, the lone entrant from Millsaps college, set a new S. I. A. A. record for the pole vault with a record leap of 12 feet and four inches. This bettered the association record by seven and one-quarter inches.

Furman took ten first places to cop the meet. Meeks, of Furman, was the high point man, scoring 15 points. He was followed by Young, Millsaps star, who made 13 points. Hammett, Smith and Creamer also aided Furman materially in copping the meet by their good work.

Centre college, using the services of Berryman, finished fourth with 18 points. Millsaps took fifth place, scoring 13 counters, and Mercer trailed with seven points.

Summaries:

100-yard dash—Hammett, Furman, first; Smith, Mercer, second; Lipsey, Birmingham Southern, third; Yeldell, Furman, fourth. Time, 10 1-5 seconds.

TAYLORSVILLE CLOSES SCHOOL WITH PROGRAM

Taylorsville, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Taylorsville high school closed Friday evening with an interesting program.

The term was one of the most successful that has been held for a number of years. The principal, Z. V. Penland, organized during the year both a boys' and girls' basketball team and trained them until they successfully competed with all the school teams of the neighboring towns, Cartersville, Rockmart, Cedartown, Aragon and Rome.

This is the first year that the school has ever had an organized well trained team of any kind of athletics.

GOAT GETTING STRATEGY OF GOLF

BY OLIVER MEGRIM.
(Strategies Used by Great Players to Win Important Matches.)

(Copyright, 1925, in U. S. and Canada by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

If you've ever attended a baseball game you have seen have the coachers of one team will try to rattle the pitcher of the opposing team.

It is common practice for a football eleven to cente. its attack on one of the opposing players so as to wear him down and upset him.

In golf, as in baseball and football, "getting the goat' of one's opponent is often attempted by the exponent of "inside golf."

Sometimes this is easy. Even among players who have attained the highest degree of excellence on the link there are nervous, tautly strung ones who are not impervious to the right kind of verbal assault.

In the semi-finals of a big professional match play tournament in England one of these nervous individuals, whom we will call Emith, was pitted against a hard-headed crafty competitor who can take the name here of Brown.

Talks to Caddie.

Neither got any marked advantage for a long time. Finally, on the 26th hole Brown, having concluded that Smith must now be on rather a keen edge, remarked to his caddie—but so that Smith could hear him—"It's all right, boy.I can win this match any time I want to!"

He won the hole then being played. Then, perceiving that Smith had fully absorbed his boast, he stepped upon the 27th tee and with the remar, "I think I'll start in now," addressed to his caddie, but really directed at Smith, waded into his drive with all his might, getting an unusually long ball.

A more phlegmatic man would not have been upset by Brown's remarks, but Smith was riled. He tried to outdrive Brown and shot wildly, hooking his ball into bad rough. He needed a seven to get down. Thereafter he was very much off his game and Brown went into the finals easily. But he was defeated there.

The advantage of Brown's strategy was that even if Smith had outdriven him from the 27th tee his advantage probably would have been but temporary. Stung by the long drive bee he would have kept on trying for long shots and would have gone wrong sooner or later.

Tomorrow—Allowing an Opponent to "Cool Off."

PROTEGES OF JOHNNY COX FLOPPED BEFORE DERBY SHOT

:: :: PEGLER HEARS WAIL OF MANAGER :: ::

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 8.—Every year Broadway Johnny Cox picks up a new fighter somewhere in the tall weeds or backwoods of the country, adorns him with a celluloid collar for parade occasions and a set of purple trunks for the random auctions in the ring, and grooms him for the Kentucky derby, which is a horse race, not a prize fight. And every year thus far his fighters have been shot from under him, so to speak, leaving Broadway Johnny Cox flat on his surroundings, which in some cases have been extremely rural. They have been inhospitable, too.

Johnny was prospecting along the Ohio river levee as the Cincinnati Limited snorted into town, watching a couple of muscular colored men handle the freight.

"Get away from me and ask no questions," Johnny said, plucking a log from the soupy flow of the Ohio. "I'm as flat as a pool table and low in the mind. I get me a great fighter this winter down in Noo-Orleens and we win a half a dozen good panics. We stop Bobby Barrett in a round and Joe Metranga in 11 and Sailor Joe Dundee in a couple of riots and then—"

"What happens then, Broadway?" "And then," Johnny said, "we take Pal Moran for a little strut down in Noo-Orleens, week ago Friday, and this boy of mine he leaves the chin out in the rain and gets slapped for a suit of pyjamas."

"He gets stopped you mean, Johnny?"

"Stopped!" exclaimed Broadway Johnny Cox. "He gets slapped back into rompers. He's sucking his thumb and telling everybody he wants to be a fireman when he grows up, last time I see him."

Johnny's boy was named Young Leonard. He was and is a good fighter at 135 pounds, but he made the mistake of scaling down for Moran, who is built light for a modern lightweight.

"I'm gathering logs to make me a shirt."

Two years John coddled along Al Pettingill, the flyweight champion of the south, for a big fight at Louisville on the night before the running of the derby, which is known among bushwhacking fight managers as "the derby shot." But Al was negligent enough to let someone massage his chin with a right-hand swing shortly before the derby day and Johnny's time was canceled, as they say in vaudeville. Johnny has had several others who also failed him within a few weeks of the big date in the middle-western knuckle calendar.

Derby Shot Gone.

In 1924 he managed to nurse Billy Britton, the middleweight, along to derby night and Britton beat a fellow named Harry Fay, who never was heard of before that time and hasn't been heard of since.

"But this Leonard," said Johnny, "he was very careless. He leaves the chin out in the wet and gets hit just before the derby. Can you imagine such a sap? Honest, can you, with the derby shot waiting?

"That'd make a good piece for the raft to float me down to Louisville," Johnny said, with a longing gaze at a derelict beam, "but let it go. I'll probably referee the bantamweight championship fight between Charley Phil Rosenberg and Harry Gordon Monday and pick me up a couple of yards of money. Then I'm going to that derby and work in Jim Maloney's corner. Jim's Boston heavyweight. You can swing out on a limb and sing about this Maloney. He'll whip Dempsey. He can fight. He ain't my fighter, either, but he got the derby shot against Sully Montgomery, the guy that used to play on the Centre college football team. He'll iron his rebel ass flat as a raft and float down the Ohio to Louisville for the derby," Johnny said. "There's 30 berries in the pouch, which I owe the guy at the hotel. Do you know anything about the current in this crick? It ought to get me there by week from Saturday, hey?"

SALLY LEAGUE

Beasley Wins Pitchers' Battle.

Charlotte, N. C., May 9.—Charlotte swept the series with Asheville here, winning the last game today, 2 to 1, after a pitchers' battle between Beasley and Peterson. Beasley was in several tight holes, but each time, backed by air-tight fielding, was able to pull out unscathed except in the first when Alexander's error put Johnson on first from where he scored on an infield out and Spikes' hit. Stripp hit over the fence for one of the Hornet's tallies and Beasley singled behind Staley's triple for the other run.

Knoxville Wins On Errors.

Columbia, S. C., May 9.—Knoxville, touching up Bennett and Phillips for a total of 15 safeties, took the final game of the series from Columbia this afternoon, 14 to 9. A number of costly bobbles also contributed to the defeat of the Comers. Jones, Knoxville hurler, in excellent form, allowed only six hits. Three of these, however, were home runs.

MOTOR CLUB MAKING MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

A. P. Philips, Jr., manager of the Atlanta Motor club, is actively promoting the membership of the club and has just mailed a number of sales letters dealing with the work which his organization promises to do for its members. These letters were sent to a number of representative Atlantans and were accompanied by membership applications.

According to Mr. Philips, the membership of the Atlanta club compares at this time very poorly with clubs in other sections of the country and it is his ambition to make it one of the largest in the southeast, if not in the country.

The membership is nominal, according to Mr. Philips, who says it is ten dollars a year for each individual member, and that he hopes to bring the Atlanta membership to where it will compare favorably with other cities of Atlanta's size, where memberships are as high as twelve and fifteen thousand, larger cities having a membership of as high as fifty thousand and more.

During the several years that the local A. A. A. club has been in existence it has never been honored by a large membership, but the friends of Mr. Philips believe that his personality and his assurance of better service for his members will meet with a ready response and that the membership will grow rapidly.

Tires Are Important Item of Automobile Operating Expense

A most important item of automobile operating expense is tires.

Aside from road and climatic conditions, many factors influence tire mileage, chief among which are proportion of car weight to tire size, distribution of car weight, spring suspension and spring flexibility.

Automobile manufacturers regard tire mileage as an important factor and are vitally concerned in the production of automotive transportation that best conserves tire life.

That definite and appreciable progress has been made is evidenced by a comparison of present-day tire mileage with that of a decade back.

Ten years ago 3,500 was considered fair tire mileage. Today, less than seven or eight thousands miles from a set of tires is unsatisfactory.

Some of this increase in tire life is attributable to better roads and better tire construction. Much of it is due to the successful efforts of automobile manufacturers to reduce and properly distribute car weight, to provide correct spring suspension and to absorb through the medium of springs of the right resiliency many of the road shocks that pounds tires to pieces.

The manufacturers of the Star car take just pride in the success attending their efforts to lengthen tire life.

It is not unsual for Star owners, under favorable conditions, to drive 15,000 miles on a set of tires. A considerable number of Star owners have reported driving 20,000 miles on a set of tires, though to achieve this remarkable mileage it is obvious that road conditions must be ideal and care exercised in the proper inflation of tires.

Three hundred and forty-five Star owners reported to the home office at New York driving an aggregate of 3,577,505 miles on 345 sets of tires—an average of 10,370 miles per set of tires.

143 Star owners reported driving an average of 17 months per set of tires.

MOTOR TRUCK FLEETS RAPIDLY INCREASING

White Roll Call Graphically Depicts Growth of Truck Transportation.

How closely motor truck transportation is woven into the industrial life of the country and the tremendous strides this form of transport has made the last few years is graphically shown in a tabulation recently compiled by The White company listing the owners of 10 or more White trucks and showing the growth of these truck fleets year by year. Known as the White Truck Roll Call this tabulation forms an excellent barometer of business conditions and shows unmistakably that increased truck usage and business expansion go hand in hand.

Truck transportation, while comparatively new, is sufficiently old to have become a major factor in the country's transportation program. Since 1910 its growth has been exceedingly rapid and leaders in the motor truck industry predict that its greatest expansion is yet to come. There are now approximately 2,150,000 motor trucks in use and about 375,000 new trucks are being placed in service annually.

The White Roll Call shows that at the first of the year there were 837 of the country's foremost truck owners—in all lines of business, all localities—operating 31,093 White trucks in fleets of 10 or more. This is an increase of 80 owners and 2,927 trucks over last year's record. Giving an idea of the growth of truck transportation this same list of owners 15 years ago were operating only 51 trucks.

The first White Roll Call published in 1916 listed only 86 owners operating a total of 2,538 Whites in fleets of 10 or more. Back in 1910 but a single firm—W. & J. Sloane, of New York—owned as many as 10 Whites. This pioneer fleet has grown to 37.

On the present roll call there are 35 owners operating in excess of 100 trucks each. The owner of the largest individual fleet is the Gulf Refining company with 1,738 trucks, representing an investment of more than $5,000,000. The company purchased its first White truck in 1911.

A few of the other large fleet owners are The Associated Bell Telephone companies with 1,183; the Standard Oil Company of New York, 842; Union Oil Company of California, 759 and the City of New York, 711.

In addition to the users who operate fleets of 10 or more there are many thousands of owners operating White trucks in fleets of less than 10 and in single installations. The total value of all White trucks and White busses on the road is well in excess of $350,000,000.

RIBS DOUBLE LIFE OF PIERCE-ARROW BRAKES

Many automobile owners do not realize that the ribbed brake drums, which are a feature of Pierce-Arrow four-wheel brakes, serve a practical and not an ornamental purpose, according to L. E. Corcoran, general sales manager of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company.

Heat causes brake lining to deteriorate prematurely. The ribs on Pierce-Arrow brakes dissipate so rapidly that the brakes remain cool. Because of this brake linings last nearly twice as long. The ribs, likewise, reinforce the drum, keeping it perfectly concentric.

In order to machine the ribs into the drums, the factory has to use a high carbon steel forging that is nearly three-quarters of an inch thick, weighing 55 pounds. After machining, the drum weighs only 18 pounds.

SPEED REO WAGON

THE GOLD STANDARD OF VALUES

Speed Wagon Design and Construction Safeguard the Owner's Investment

American business has bought more than 100,000 Speed Wagons, to serve in every class of commercial haulage, because the Speed Wagon is fundamentally sound in vital elements:

The Speed Wagon is the most economical 2500-pound commercial car in the world, according to initial investment, price per pound pay-load, per horsepower or any other basis of computing relative values.

No other vehicle combines so much power and ruggedness per pound chassis weight, is so capable of easy owner-attention, nor is so widely backed by service facilities.

The Speed Wagon makes hurried travel safe on highway routes or on city streets.

The stability of Reo as an institution guarantees the permanence of the Speed Wagon, thereby insuring the maximum resale or trade-in value.

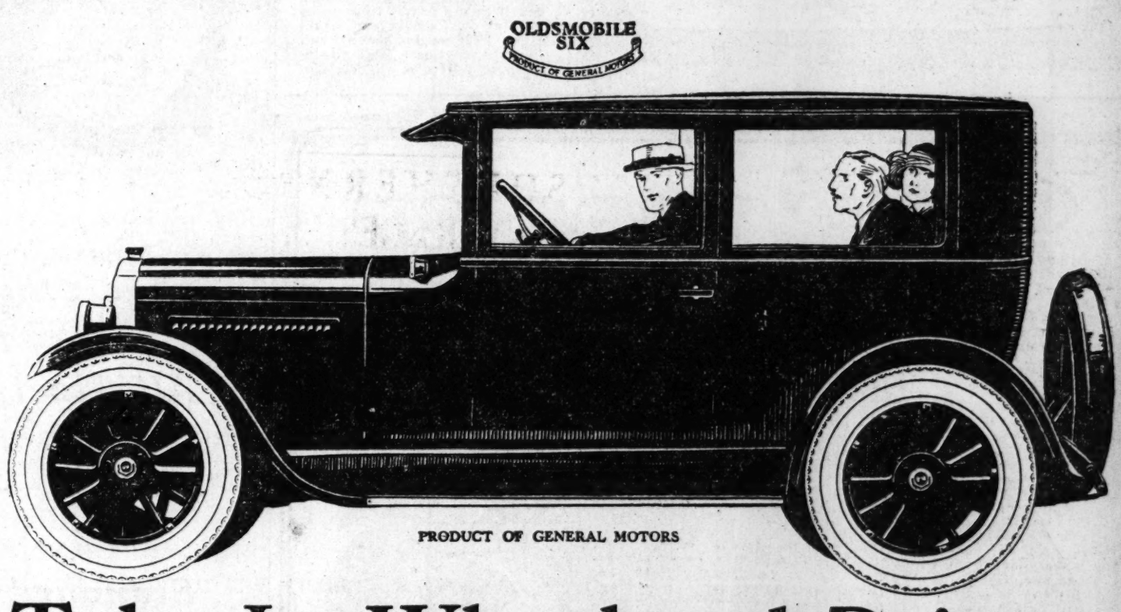

—Economical capacity range from 500 to 2500 pounds.
—Twelve standard bodies; nine with open and closed cabs.
—Designed and manufactured in the big Reo shops—not assembled.

Motor cars on the average cost 29 per cent less today than they did before the war, while commodities in general cost 67 per cent more, according to "Facts and Figures of the Automobile Industry" in 1925 edition which is now coming off the presses.

This 96-page booklet is published annually by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. It summarizes, from the government sources and its own researches, the main facts, historical and current dealing with motor transportation.

Production registration, exports service, commercial vehicles, highways and taxation are among the topics covered. While the rechecking of production and registration figures shows little change from the advance data published earlier in the year, the booklet contains many new studies along the taxation, highway and other lines previously printed.

Cars Cost Less In Terms of Farm Products.

With the average retail price of a car now selling at $825, automobiles cost 29 per cent less today than before the war. Stated, in agricultural terms, the farmer today needs only one-third as much wheat, less than one-third as much corn, one-half the amount of cotton, or one-half the number of hogs to buy an automobile today, compared with the relative cost of cars and farm products in 1913.

The above comparisons are only a few of the differences that exist.

There is really no need for such congested traffic in the business district of Atlanta. From a recent check up of the different storage garages in the downtown district, it was discovered that there is room for 8,000 cars. Now taking all the parking space on the streets, it was found that by parking end to end on every main and cross street from Ellis street south on Peachtree to Trinity avenue and Whitehall; from Washington street west to the Spring street viaduct there is room for slightly over 2,800 cars.

If the merchants here will only follow the lead of merchants in our great middle western cities and arrange with these various garages to let their patrons store with them for a limited time—say not more than two hours, we firmly believe that the greater part of this congestion will be eliminated.

Atlanta is certainly considered the educational center of the south. During the last week three of the leading automobile factories held sales conferences and service schools here.

For the first time since 1918, the Oakland Motor Car company, ushering in our new prosperity era, held a conference and sales convention. The wholesale men working out of this district under the direction of H. M. Robins, supervisor of districts, were given a special course in better merchandising, while the dealers under E. V. Jolliffe, instructor of sales promotion, were taught the benefits of Oakland flat rate service system. These men are real pioneers in the automobile industry and if attendance is indicative of appreciation their stay here must have been gratifying.

C. H. Dickert, service manager for the Willys interest in this territory, was tutor to a score of service managers who were here to learn the functioning of all new features of the new Willys Six.

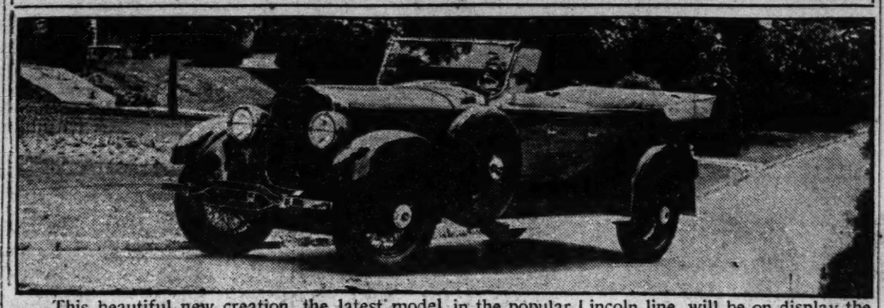

Mr. Colin Campbell, vice president of the Durant Motors company, was the guest of J. Elmo Green, salesmanager for the southeastern district for Star and Durant cars. Mr. Campbell has just completed a tour of the 18 branches operated by this company throughout the country, where he has held conferences on the merits of his products and the given the wholesale men full advantage of his unlimited knowledge of automobile merchandizing.

NOW WE ASK YOU, didja ever go to as many classes in one week. Well, we did.

To keep up with the constant growth of their business, the Southern Bearing and Parts company found it necessary to get larger quarters. In their new home at 449 Peachtree street, they found what be believe to be the ideal place, not only to meet their great needed increase in floor space, but it gives them the privilege of being right in the heart of automobile row.

We want to welcome to "Automobile Row" the Rippey Motor company, whose announcement appears in today's paper. It is taking over the Lincoln franchise of the Bell Isle Street company. If you are not acquainted with Mr. Rippey, let us introduce you now. T. A. Rippey, Jr., who hails from California, is none other than the son-in-law of one of the country's largest bakers, now if he can deliver Lincolns as fast as his dad-in-law makes cakes, Ford might just as well move the plant here. With all sincerity, we believe he will be a winner.

Lincoln Sport, Displayed by Rippey Motor Company

This beautiful new creation, the latest model in the popular Lincoln line, will be on display the coming week in the showrooms of the Rippey Motor company, located at West Peachtree street and Grant place.

RIGID INSPECTIONS GIVEN CHEVROLET CARS

One employee in every six in the motor assembly plant of the Chevrolet Motor company plant at Flint, Mich., does nothing but check the rigid standards required in the motor parts and the accuracy with which they are fitted together.

There are 2,776 employees in the motor plant. Of these, 463 are inspectors, who demand a precision too minute for detection by the unaided eye.

Before the engine block starts down one of the assembly lines it is given a triple inspection for possible irregularities or defects, each inspector checking his predecessor. Next it is washed, dried under compressed air and again inspected for cleanliness. If a dirt spot is discovered, the casting is sent back to the washer.

Almost endless tests mark its progress down the assembly lines, precisions being gauged down to one-thousandth of an inch. The moment an inspector detects any variations from standard, the motor is taken from the line. If the defect is only minor, the motor is sent back on the line for adjustments or replacements subject to subsequent reinspection. If the variation from standard is fundamental, the motor is disassembled.

As the motor is built up, all parts and fittings are subjected to constant examination and reexamination. Precision is law. For instance, the fit of piston pins into the piston must be so exact that the pin may be pushed into the piston hole by the mechanic's thumb but will not fall out of its own weight. The clearance at this point is about one-twentieth of the diameter of the finest human hair. This is called a "push-in" fit.

After being built up, the motor is "run in" by electric motors at 1,200 revolutions per minute for about two hours to work in the bearings and piston rings.

The motor is then "taken down" for inspection of the bearings, cylinder walls and all moving parts. When it passes the inspectors, it is reassembled and operated under its own power, while experts listen for any possible noise, their methods being comparable to a doctor's use of a stethoscope.

If the motor sounds "sweet," it is returned to the assembly line for final equipment and painting. The last man on the line is an inspector. From his hands the motor goes to the various car assembly plants.

No Increase in the Price of Firestone FULL-SIZE GUM-DIPPED BALLOONS

MOST MILES PER DOLLAR

The extra quality built in by the extra process of Gum-Dipping, the economy of these wonderful tires and the added mileage obtained from them during the past two years, has created such a large demand that over 75% of Firestone's mammoth production is now Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords.

This naturally has greatly increased the total sales volume and the huge Firestone factories are now taxed to capacity, on a 24-hour schedule to supply the demand.

This large volume, produced under the most economical tire manufacturing methods, permits Firestone to sell these extra-process Full-Size Balloons at no extra cost to car owners. And this is in the face of the greatly advanced cost for crude rubber brought about by the operation of the British Rubber Restriction Act.

Bear in mind that Gum-Dipping means longer mileage—greater economy. But there is no extra cost to tire buyers!

Enjoy the safety, economy and comfort of Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords this summer. Any one of the Firestone Dealers listed below is prepared to equip your car now at low cost—with liberal allowance for your old tires.

Bargain Day Offered Motorists by Prior Tire Company Annex

It's bargain day again. This time the car owner who likes to see his bus looking as spic and span as a Dutch kitchen will benefit, for the Prior Tire company annex, located at 170 Spring street, is offering two washes for the price of one.

As an introductory offer, any owner who had his car cleaned at the Prior Tire company annex before May 10 at the regular price, was given a coupon good for another wash without charge at any future date.

Through such innovations as the two-for-one washing deal now offered, the Prior Tire company annex has won a position in the washing, lubricating and polishing field that is as enviable as the place held by the Prior Tire company in the tire field. As distributors for Hood tires, this company has built up a tremendous tire business and the sign "Here Comes Help," carried by every truck in the larges service fleet operated is well known to every Atlanta motorist.

PAUL HOFFMAN HEADS STUDEBAKER SALES

New York, May 9.—The directors of the Studebaker corporation, at their recent meeting, elected Paul C. Hoffman as vice president in charge of sales to succeed H. A. Biggs, resigned.

Mr. Hoffman entered the employ of the Studebaker corporation in 1911 as a salesman in Los Angeles. In 1915

PAUL G. HOFFMAN,
Vice president in charge of sales for Studebaker Corporation.

he was made sales manager of the Los Angeles retail branch, and in 1917, branch manager of the Los Angeles district.

He served in the artillery division of the army in 1917-18, and upon leaving it in March, 1919, purchased from the corporation its retail business at Los Angeles and became a Studebaker dealer on his own account. The Paul G. Hoffman company, starting business with $60,000 capital, now has $1,500,000 assets.

Mr. Hoffman has been quite active in the civic affairs of his city. For the past two years he has been president of the traffic commission, a voluntary organization of business men formed for the purpose of studying measures of relief from traffic congestion, including rerouting of streets and city planning. He is a director of the chamber of commerce and chairman of its roads committee, also a director of the California Bank of Los Angeles.

In securing Mr. Hoffman for the important position of vice president in charge of sales, President Erskine feels that he has obtained a man ideally suited for the work. Mr. Hoffman's headquarters will be at the general office at South Bend, Ind. He has been elected a director of the corporation and a member of its executive and finance committee.

H. A. Biggs, who is being succeeded by Mr. Hoffman, is retiring from active business. His services to the corporation and administration of the affairs of the sales department for six years were highly satisfactory and successful. His numerous friends in the automobile industry as well as in the Studebaker organization will miss him. He is compelled to establish his residence in a milder climate, and expects shortly to move from South Bend to southern California.

PRIEST MAKES RADIO RUN ELECTRIC LIGHTS

London, May 3.—Father Maurice Beckett, of Westminster cathedral, whose hobby is experimenting with high frequency currents, or wireless electricity for lighting purposes, announced recently that he had progressed to such an extent that he had been able to light a 50-candlepower lamp with is system of wireless.

"And what's more," he said, telling of his work, "at my last public performance I sent the waves through a peer of the realm and two of my brother priests as a part of my program of entertainment."

Carter Edwards appearing in "The Marlboroughs," now touring England, claims to be the oldest actor still playing.

MARMON ANNOUNCES UNIFORM PARTS RATES

Establishment of flat and uniform rates for motor car parts manufactured by the Nordyke & Marmon company, effective April 1, was announced by H. H. Brooks, sales manager of the Nordyke & Marmon company in a letter sent to Marmon distributors and dealers. The new policy is of distinct advantage to purchasers of Marmon motor car parts as the price for each part is the same in all parts of the United States with the exception of the territory west of the Rocky mountains, where the prices will be 10 per cent greater.

The uniform rate policy was adopted after an exhaustive survey of the parts problem by the statistical department of the Nordyke & Mormon company. Under the new system with a few exceptions the Nordyke & Marmon company will pay the transportation charges and excise tax on all freight shipments of parts listed in the Marmon regular parts catalogue. The list prices of parts will prevail in all distributor and dealer establishments, removing the confusion attendant to the old system, where the prices varied in different distributor and dealer establishments.

"The interests of the purchaser of Marmon parts were paramount at all times in the study of the parts problem which preceded the adoption of the flat rate system," said Mr. Brooks. "Tourists traveling from one part of the country to the other now will find the prices for parts the same wherever they go, an obvious advantage. List prices of parts also are being changed to conform to the new system and the new prices may be learned upon application to any Marmon dealer or distributor.

BETTER AND BETTER

Dependable ten years ago, and five years ago, and more dependable than ever today, Dodge Brothers Motor Car simply represents the latest phase in a process of continual betterment.

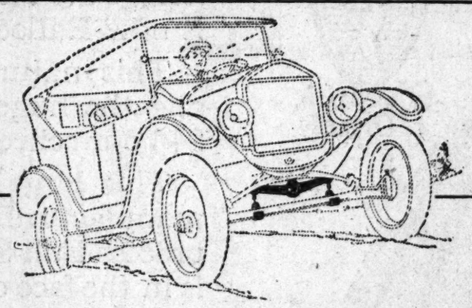

The first cars Dodge Brothers built established a world-wide reputation. The cars they are building today incorporate the accumulated refinements of those ten intervening years.

That important improvements in the comfort and appearance of the car are made from time to time, implies no basic departure from Dodge Brothers traditional policy of progressive rather than seasonal development.

This Correct Shock Absorber Does Triple Duty

Wagner "Triple Action" gives you complete relief from motoring discomfort and driving strain in these three distinct ways:

1. Direct acting coil springs at the ends of the arms absorb all the small bumps.
2. Patented friction head at the center controls violent spring-action—both upwards and downwards.
3. The two arms, operating independently of each other, prevent all body lurches and eliminate roll and sidesway.

Wagner Triple Action Shock Absorber for Fords

Thousands of Ford owners who have equipped their cars with the Wagner Triple Action Shock Absorber, are praising it as the one simple and efficient device that absorbs all road shocks. That's because it is correctly designed and because it gives them "Triple Action" instead of ordinary single action.

Drive over to your Ford or accessory dealer—he will explain to you, in a few minutes, just how "Triple Action" works, and how it gives your whole family big car comfort and saves repair bills.

Quickly installed—30 minutes is all it takes.

Dresses

Crepes and Georgettes $15.00

In excellence of quality and beauty of styling these dresses measure up to a standard much higher than the price indicates. The group has been a matter of pride for us all season, as well as keen pleasure to the many women who have selected from it. Flat crepe, flowered chiffons and georgettes in the newest styles. Remarkable in every sense.

Striped Wash Silks $5.75

You can't have too many tub silk dresses—and you can certainly afford to have a large number when they are to be had at such a price as this. The quality of material is splendid, the patterns and colors thoroughly good-looking and the styles as attractive as you'd care to choose from. You won't find better values than these at $5.75.

Linen and Broadcloth $3.98

The best dresses that you've seen in many a day at the price quoted are here in this group at $3.98. They are of linens and broadcloths—and are hand-made throughout, a fact that lends a double significance to the value. Many styles showing hand-drawn work, colored pipings, buttons and so on. Very sharply underpriced.

About Wedding Invitations

These absolutely necessary articles for the wedding occasion are subject to criticism more than any other feature.

Even the wedding dress is not scrutinized so closely as the invitation, for the latter goes into the hands of strangers as well as of every invited guest and is apt to be considered the forerunner of the style which characterizes the wedding.

These days, most people are well informed concerning the requisites for stylish invitations.

The material of which the envelopes and sheets are made should be of approved shade of white; the shapes should be those that fashion has most recently decreed and the engraving should be done by artists whose reputation insures the highest degree of skill. All these requirements are met in the extensive plant and more than forty years' experience of the J. P. Stevens Engraving Co. This house has established a high standard of product known all over the United States; the imprint of its name upon an envelope is a guarantee that the invitation is of correct form, latest style and finest quality. Every wedding invitation or announcement engraved by this house bears its imprint.

If you are particularly interested send for samples and prices which will be sent free of charge in a plain package. Address J. P. Stevens Engraving Co., 103 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Georgia.

Miss Marjorie Clinton Weds H. C. Smith at Methodist Church

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Clinton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William G. Clinton, and Henry Clifford Smith was solemnized at the Ponce de Leon Avenue Methodist Episcopal church Saturday afternoon at 5:30 in the presence of a large number of friends. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Dr. William G. Clinton.

The church was artistically decorated. Palms and ferns were banked around the altar and on either side were tall candelabara holding burning tapers and tall baskets of pink roses were placed at intervals among the green. The altar rail and choir loft were entwined with graceful southern smilax and roses. The ends of the pews were draped with pink tulle and pink roses.

Mrs. C. A. Titus at the organ rendered a program of nuptial music preceding the ceremony. Mrs. Sam A. Johnson sang "The Birthday," "All for You" and "Beloved It Is Morn." The wedding march from Lohengrin was used as a processional.

The ushers who entered first were Dr. L. H. Muse, Dr. T. E. Cook, George Gunnell and John J. Clinton.

Next came the matron of honor, Mrs. Evan E. Evans sister of the bride. Her gown was of apple green georgette and she carried an arm bouquet of Premier roses and lavender sweet peas.

The little flower girl, little Miss Mary Ann Clinton, niece of the bride, entered next wearing a frock of point d' esprit over pink crepe de chine. She carried a basket of sweetheart roses.

The lovely bride entered with her brother, Dr. Loyd B. Clinton, who gave her in marriage. Her gown was of ivory satin made in straight line effect and draped with chantilly lace. Her veil of tulle was arranged in cap effect caught with a lattice of roses and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, David M Smith, brother of the groom.

The wedding party left the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march. A supper was served at the home of the bride's parents to the wedding party and members of the family. The home was decorated with garden flowers carrying out a pink color scheme.

Mrs. W. G. Clinton, mother of the bride, wore a gown of cream Venetian embroidery over orchid crepe with hat to match. Her corsage was of pink roses and lavender sweet peas.

Mrs. Annie Smith, the mother of the groom, wore black silk crepe with hat to match and corsage of lavender sweet peas. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for a short trip and will be at home after June 1 at 790 Piedmont avenue. The bride's traveling dress was an ensemble of tan charmeuse with hat and accessories of powder blue.

Among the out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. L. B. Clinton, of Carthage, Mo., and daughter, Mary Ann; Mrs. Evan E. Evans, Neodesha, Kan., Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Smith, Miss Emily Smith, Charles Smith, Jr., George Smith, all of Montgomery, Ala.; T. P. King, of Mobile, Ala.

Miss Margaret Pugh, Of Alabama, To Wed Don Watts

Cordial interest is felt in the recent announcement of the engagement of Miss Margaret Pugh, of Mobile, to Don Watts, of Birmingham, formerly of Atlanta.

Miss Denton To Wed Mr. Barnes, Of Newnan

The announcement in today's paper of the engagement of Miss Margaret Medina Denton to William Young Barnes, Jr., of Newnan, Ga., centers the interest of a large circle of friends and relatives of the young people throughout Georgia and the south. Miss Denton is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Richard Watson Denton, Sr., and the late R. W. Denton, Sr., the granddaughter of Captain Richard Watson Denton, of Columbus, Ga., and Lieutenant Osborne Skeen Spence, of Fairburn, Ga., who rendered distinguished service in the war between the states.

On her maternal side, Miss Denton is descended from a long line of distinguished ancestry, being a member of the Beall family, of Maryland and Virginia, Chief Justice John Marshall, George Walton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and other foremost makers of history. On her paternal side she is descended also from some of the foremost makers of the political and social history of the state and the south, her paternal grandmother being Mrs. Fannie Walker, of Madison, Ga.

Miss Denton is a charming young girl of distinctive brunette coloring. She is a graduate of the Girls' High school, later completing her education at the Georgia Normal & Industrial school at Milledgeville, Ga., taking an active part in all phases of college activity. Through her gracious charm and personality, she has drawn to herself a wide circle of loving friends.

Mr. Barnes is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Young Barnes, Sr., of Newnan, Ga., and counts amongst his ancestors some of the most distinguished makers of Georgia and southern history. Mr. Barnes rendered distinguished service as a member of the aviation corps during the late world war. He is one of the most prominent and successful young business men in Newnan, being associated there in the automobile business with his father. The young couple will live in Newnan, where Mr. Barnes will introduce his bride to a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Harwell, Jr., Recent Bride To Be Honored at Reception

Mrs. Frank Harwell, Sr., and her daughter, Mrs. John Walter Rutland, were hostesses at a beautiful tea on Saturday afternoon at Mrs. Harwell's home in Decatur, in honor of Mrs. Frank Harwell, Jr., a bride of last month.

A color motif of pink and white was used and carried out in the decorations and refreshments. Roses, snapdragons and other garden flowers in artistic arrangement in silver baskets adorned the mantels and consoles in the reception rooms.

The table was covered with an exquisite Italian cloth of cut work and filet, which the bride brought back from Europe. A silver basket of pink roses and white deutchia, encircled with pink candles in silver candlesticks, tied with pink tulle, formed the centerpiece. Silver compotes held the pink and white candies.

Coffee and tea was poured by Mrs. Ralph Northcutt, of Marietta; Mrs. John Jervis and Mrs. Montague Boyd.

Mrs. George M. Napier and Mrs. William Alden received the guests at the door.

Mrs. Frank Harwell, Sr., Mrs. Frank Harwell, Jr., Mrs. John Walter Rutland, Mrs. John Howard Boston, the bride's mother, and Mrs. Paul Francis Aiken, of Cartersville, formed the receiving line.

Mrs. Frank Harwell, Sr., was gowned in ecru lace trimmed with French flowers.

Mrs. Frank Harwell, Jr., made a lovely picture in her wedding gown of white duchess satin, embroidered in seed pearls and tiny mirrors.

Mrs. John Rutland wore powder-blue georgette embroidered in bronze beads.

Mrs. John Howard Boston wore pink chiffon studded with rainestones.

Mrs. Paul Francis Aiken was gowned in terra cotta Spanish lace.

Miss Anna Harwell wore a becoming costume of chiffon in flesh and deep pink, trimmed with bow knots and French flowers.

Others assisting Mrs. Harwell and Mrs. Rutland in receiving were: Mrs. Paul Lovejoy, Miss Anna Harwell, Miss Katharine Aiken, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, Mrs. Stephen Christie, Jr., Mrs. R. B. Ridley, Mrs. John Ridley, Mrs. B. R. Beck, Mrs William Cole Jones, Mrs John de Saussure, Mrs. Donald Hastings, Mrs. Charles Currie, Mrs. Ben Head, Misses Marguerite and Agne Adams, Miss Delia Johnston and Miss Claire Louise Scott.

Hicky-Bicknell Engagement Is of Widespread Interest

Widespread social interest throughout the south centers today in the announcement made by Daniel Hiriart Hicky, of the engagement of his daughter, Margaret Louise, to William Leon Bicknell, formerly of Panama City, Fla., but now of Atlanta.

Miss Hicky is a beautiful young woman of the lovely brunette type, and possesses rare graciousness and charm of manner which have endeared her to countless friends. Her late mother was Miss Bessie Aline Whitehead, a feted belle and beauty of Georgia and Tennessee. Miss Hicky attended school at St. Agnes academy, in Memphis, Tenn., and later at O'Donohue hall, in North Carolina, and Sacred Heart Parochial school, in Atlanta, where she was a most popular student.

She is descended of distinguished lineage, her maternal grandfather being Colonel Joseph Tarpley Whitehead, a prominent and influential citizen of Walton county. She is related to the Whitehead families of Georgia and Virginia, and the Hampton family, of South Carolina, former governor and United States Senator Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, being a cousin.

On her paternal side she is the granddaughter of the late Colonel Philip Hicky, of New Orleans and Baton Rouge, La., and is related to the Towles family of that state, and the Custis family, of Virginia, which gave to the country its first lady of the land, Martha Custis Washington.

Miss Hicky is a niece of Mrs. Raymond Thompson, of Atlanta; Mrs. Charles Arthur Whitehead, of Macon, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Pickens Magee, of New Orleans, Louisiana.

Mr. Bicknell is the elest son of Mrs. William J. Bicknell and the late Mr. Bicknell, formerly of Panama City, Fla. He is a very popular young business man of Atlanta, being prominently identified with the Commercial Credit company, of New Orleans.

The wedding will be a social event of Monday evening, June 8, taking place at the home of the bride-elect on East Fourth street.

Atlanta Woman Gives Graphic Description of Bull Fight

Glad to See One Once But Never Again, Says Mrs. Louise Worsham

By Bessie S. Stafford.

Back in Atlanta again after an interesting trip over Europe is Mrs. Louise Horine Worsham. In conversing upon her travels, the writer drew her into a vivid and realistic description of her conception and understanding of a bull fight in Barcelona, Spain. She expressed herself as being glad she had seen the national sport of the country once, but that she wouldn't care to see it again. As she talked, so interesting was her description, that one could almost hear the shouting of the crowd, the music, and visualize the lights, the sea of excited faces, and the bewildered animal as he was turned from his dark stall into a ring where matadors were dressed in really beautiful costumes of satin or velvet, in different colors, embroidered in gold and silver, wearing soft kid slippers, silk stockings, a tiny hat, and the little queue of hair at the back of the head. The movies have made us all familiar with the costumes, but Mrs. Worsham says that the lithe, perfect grace of the man is beyond description when he holds a cape of satin, red, purple, blue or green, lined with some vivid color, which he flaunts before the bull, sidestepping just in time to avoid being gored to death. Everything seems to be done in front of the animal to enrage him beyond endurance, tire him out and confuse him. He bellows, leaps into the air in his efforts to free himself from the long sticks with spring barbs to which are attached brightly colored ribbons, and plunged into the animal's bleeding shoulders.

The toreador does his deadly work, that of dispatching the bull as quickly as he can, in front of those deadly onrushing horns, plunging his sword into the back of the neck to sever the spinal cord if possible. This act requires great skill, enormous strength, incredible speed and agility, for oftentimes the first blow fails to kill and the toreador must get out of the way very quickly. One slip, one mistake of necessity costs a life, so, it must be a pretty hair-raising performance.

Summertime at St. Bernard's Farm.

Summertime, in all probability, will find Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Woodruff happily domiciled in the splendid old mansion on their Virginia plantation, at Mount Bernard farms. It is located nearby to the quaint old township of Maidens, and is on the main highway between Richmond and Charlottesville, about 27 miles from the last capital of the Confederacy. The house was built more than 125 years ago on the banks of historic James river, which flows along for quite a mile bordering on the scenic frontage of this famous country estate. In the 1,400 acreage, there is a deer preserve of 250 acres, where graceful, timid little animals roam through native forests. Fishing and hunting are afforded at Mount Bernard farms, and quite a bit of farming will result from tilling the rich soil.

Ante-bellum servant quarters still shelter descendants of those who lived there during the Civil war, and life for them will continue as in days gone by for the new owners, and their son, Henry Woodruff, who will scarcely change any of the traditions which go with their Virginia home.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff stopped over in Virginia for this week-end, returning from New York, after seeing Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woodruff set sail for Europe last week. They are on board the Berengaria, just nearing its English port.

Reliable Whisperings.

Society is no end interested in the reliable whisperings that one of the prettiest girls in town will soon wed a very desirable, tall and exceptionally good-looking bachelor.

The maid-in-question has enjoyed social life in the national capital, where she has very wealthy relatives who own one of the most palatial estates there, and at whose home she spent her first winter of young ladyhood. She entered the whirls of diplomatic and cosmopolitan life in which Washington sets the pace and is famous, making a most favorable impression, for she had many eligible suitors in her train. Her savior faire and extreme good looks, two very advantageous fundamentals, together with her sparkling wit and sunny nature, brought her in contact with the most fashionable people. Here in Atlanta, with an equally charming younger sister, she has been equally admired.

The handsome Romeo is popular and prominent in Atlanta's social, club and business circles. He, like his bride-to-be, is southern-born and bred. It's only a matter of a brief time, in fact, maybe a week or so may intervene, before the engagement is announced, with wedding bells ringing for them before the summer is very far advanced. And, there will be a bombardment of rose petals to take the place of the proverbial rice.

"On The Shelf Club."

Now comes the word that last year's debutantes will form an "On the Shelf Club." It sounds most original and is running true to their manner and form of doing things. It is a case of the king—or should we say "the queen is dead." "Long live the queen."

This attractive coterie of little girlies who made their formal bows in 1924-25, are gracefully paving the way for next season's crop of charming debs. Through the activities of the "One the Shelf Club," they will keep up with one another, and form a sentimental link in friendship's chain throughout the years to come.

In olden times girls saw younger sisters and friends planning their debut with a pang of fear and regret but not the independent, resourceful girl of today. Remembering the fears with which they entered the portal of young ladydom and knowing that they have acquired poise and much useful knowledge since that day nine moons ago they laugh at the thought of the novices coming out this year and plan great times when they are relieved of the role of first season debutantes and can have more good times than ever before. Jealous! No indeed say they, we are going to have the time of our sweet young lives this coming season.

Will Visit American Consul.

It almost goes without saying that an interesting summer awaits Miss Julia Memminger when she goes in August to Bordeaux, that important seaport city in southern France. She sails on the Pittsburg the third week in May, chaperoned by her cousin, Mrs. Glen Griake, a notable personage in Charleston society. On reaching England she will join her mother's sister, Miss Marie Hastie, another blue-blooded South Carolinan, and the trio will spend a month in London—on the Thames.

After traveling through Germany, Switzerland and Holland, Miss Memminger repairs to Bordeaux to visit her uncle, Lucien Memminger, American consul, for a month or six weeks.

After several months spent in Paris, she will take part in the brilliant, sparkling life along the Reviera, which acts as a magnet to those who visit Europe. Towards Eastertime Miss Memminger will turn her steps homewards, and is planning to arrive in America just in time to see Magnolia Gardens in the full beauty of blossom, and to spend a week or so with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Hastie, who own these historical gardens in the Palmetto state.

Another Matrimonial Cruise.

One hears that still another beauteous Atlanta girl of the brunette type whom Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., rather expected to find here as representative of southern beauty, may go on a matrimonial cruise next fall.

Just when it will be is a matter of speculation however, until after she goes on for a royal good time at the commencement exercises of a prominent eastern college. Her believed-to-be fiance will be graduated in June and she will attend a house party given at his frat house.

This northern beaux has all the ancestral background to match with the fair Atlantans, whose relatives are recruited from Georgia's most exclusive class.

Surprise Dance Honors Joseph Barnes.

Mrs. W. J. Barnes entertained at a surprise dance on Saturday night at her home on Ponce de Leon place in Decatur, in celebration of the sixteenth birthday of her son, Joseph Barnes.

Garden flowers were used to decorate and a color scheme of yellow and white was carried out.

Those present were Misses Lucile and Eleanor Lynn, Rosa Lee Camper, Aileen and Mildred Higgens, Annette Barry, Eleanor Higgens, Margaret Broyles, Emily Doughman, Ruth Shelton, Elizabeth Dans, Bobby Kroner, Roddy Gould, Arthur Joe McGhee, J. R. Edwards, Bill Edmonds, John Steele, Reece Lindsey and Joseph Barnes.

W. J. Gardner Celebrates Eighty-Sixth Birthday.

W. Z. Gardner celebrated his 86th birthday on Wednesday, May 6, at his country homestead near Orchard Hill, in Spalding county, with a surprise birthday party and reunion of his children and many grandchildren and great-grand-children.

The house was beautifully decorated with ferns and cut flowers. Many useful and pretty gifts were received by Mr. Gardner.

At noon the guests assembled around the long dining table, where a feast was served in the regular old-time hospitable Georgia style. The table was spread on the wide porch and vases of cut flowers were used for the decorations.

Mr. Gardner served during the war bewteen the states in Virginia as a member of the 53d Georgia infantry regiment under General Longstreet and told many incidents of his war days, which were enjoyed by all present.

In the afternoon the guests were all invited into the living room and many old-time songs weer sung, closing with "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." Mr. Gardner made a speech of thanks and welcome to all and he stated that he hoped all would be spared to meet again next year. John L. Reed, of Griffin, Ga., responded for the relatives and Mrs. E. B. Williams, of Atlanta, responded for the friends.

Those present were W. Z. Gardner and Mrs. Nannie Z. Taylor, of Orchard Hill; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Slade, Miss Sara Slade, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Miller, Mrs. Mary Watkins, Ernest Watkins, Jr., Miss Mary Alice Watkins, Harrison Slade and Mrs. E. B. Williams, of Atlanta, Ga.

DeKalb Voters Holds Meeting.

The DeKalb County League of Women Voters held its annual social meeting and luncheaon at East Lake club on Friday, May 1, with 60 present. The president, Mrs. Bittick, assisted by the vice president, Mrs. Willie Davis; the treasurer, Mrs. Olin Stanton; Mrs. W. H. S. Hamilton and Mrs. Gould cordially welcomed the members and friends.

Mrs. Gay, of the Atlanta league, outlined in a clear, forceful talk the provisions of the two bills which are being indorsed and urged by the league this year, the "Tax Amendment Bill" and "Children's Code," after which Mrs. P. H. Gibbs introduced Paul Lindsey and John Wesley Weekes, members of the legislature from DeKalb, who spoke on these bills. W. M. Rainey, county school superintendent, was given the opportunity to bring before the league interesting information concerning conditions in the county schools.

The speaker for the day, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, delighted her audience with an inspiring talk on the privileges and responsibilities of citizenship.

A short business session was held following the luncheon, at which the resignation, as secretary, of Mrs. J. C. LeHardy, who has served the league for nearly four years, was accepted with regret. Mrs. Wellington Stevenson was appointed temporary secretary. Mrs. Hamliton and Mrs. Gibbs were asked to serve as co-chairman on legislation and public welfare. Names of valuable new members were added to the roll, among whom were members of Agnes Scott faculty and Miss Eleanora Raoul.

It was announced that a benefit bridge party would be given on the first Friday in June and all friends of the league are asked to keep this date free, and each one is cordially invited to the party.

Miss Fincher Weds Dr. A. B. Eberhart.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Fincher, of Jackson, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Thelma, to Dr. A. B. Eberhart, of McDonough, Ga., which was solemnized on April 4 at St. Paul's parsonage, Atlanta, Ga.

Fraternities Win Boxes at Club For Tech Show

The Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Chi, Pi Kappa Alpha and Pi Lambda Delta fraternities drew the four boxes for the Tech nightperformance of the new play of the Georgia Tech Marionettes, "The Bad Man," which is to be presented at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium Friday and Saturday nights, May 15 and 16.

The drawing to determine which of the fraternities shall occupy the boxes and which the various rows was held at the Georgia Tech Y. M. C. A. Saturday noon, with the following fraternities participating: Chi Psi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, Pi Lambda Delta, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Nu, Kappa Alpha, Theta Chi, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Chi, Delta Sigma Phi, Phi Sigma Kappa, Phi Kappa Sigma, Alpha Tau Omega, Chi hi, Gamma Tau Delta, Delta Tau Delta, Delta Tau Delta, and Beta Theta Pi.

The Tech night performance of the Marionettes is one of the events of the year for the college set. The members of the Tech fraternities with their friends occupy the individual rows and the gaily decorated boxes. The Tech night performance is to be given on Saturday night, May 16, this year.

Reservations for either the Friday or the Saturday night performance of "The Bad Man" may be made by calling the Tech Y. M. C. A.

Miss Sara Tuck Weds Mr. Nance.

Arlington, Ga., May 9.—A marriage of cordial interest to many friends throughout this section was that of Miss Sara Tuck and S. T. Nance, Jr., both of Arlington, Ga. The couple motored to Bluffton, Ga., Sunday morning, May 3, where the ceremony was performed at the Bufftton Baptist church, Rev. H. M. Melton officiating.

Following the ceremony they took a short motor trip to points of interest in the state and returned here Monday afternoon, when they will make their home with the groom's family.

Mrs. Nance is a charming and well-educated young woman and has a number of warm friends here. Her former home has been at Logansville, Ga., but for the past two years she has been a teacher in the Rowena consolidated school. Mr. Nance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Nance of Arlington and a native of this city. His profesion is electrical engineering but recently he has been employed as assistant postmaster at the local postoffice.

Mrs. Irving Thomas Offers Cup for Best One-Act Play

The Little Theater Guild of Atlanta is offering a loving cup, which has been given by Mrs. Irving S. Thomas to the amateur dramatic club of this city presenting the best one-act play. This is being done to encourage one-act plays, to encourage dramatic art, and to encourage self expression, also because of Mrs. Thomas' great interest in the work of the Little theater movement in Atlanta.

Mrs. Thomas' interest in Little theater work is known throughout the entire south for her untiring efforts in obtaining for Atlanta the lovely theater at the Atlanta Woman's club, known as the Lucile King Thomas auditorium.

Four schools have entered the contest for the loving cup this year, owing to the fact that the auditorium could be obtained for only one night. Those competing will be the dramatic clubs of North Avenue Presbyterian, Central Night, Commercial High and Boys High schools. The Little Theater guild is planning next year to present another cup and it is desired that many amateur clubs and schools will compete.

The plays will be given at the Lucile King Thomas auditorium of the Woman's club on the evening of May 23. The cup will be given to the players whose play is best presented. An individual prize will be given to the person showing the greatest histrionic ability and to the club which has the most attractive setting a prize will be given.

Other work being done by the Little Theater guild at this time is a series of patriotic tableaux. "The Remembrance Hour," which is to be given for the war mothers during their convention in Atlanta next week. Several plays are being rehearsed by the guild that will be announced at a later date.

Tickets for these four one-act plays may be obtained from any member of the dramatic clubs of the schools mentioned above, or at the auditorium on the evening of the plays, May 23.

Formwalt School Wins Banner in Contest.

Formwalt school was the winner of the 1924-25 banner in the violin class contest for the south side schools. The contest was held Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Steinway hall. Last year the banner was won by Lee Street, and the preceding year, which was the first year of violin teaching in the schools, the banner was won by J. L. Key.

The winners in the scale playing contest were Miss Anne Russell Banks, of Lee Street school, and Ben Striplin, of Joe Brown, Jr., High.

The purpose of these classes is to assist in discovering any talent among young children and to provide expert training in classes for one year at the end of which time it is necessary to give the pupil private instruction.

Parents are urged to procure the very best instrument possible and of the correct size for the child and to encourage him to continue through the school year if the best results are to be attained.

Resume of Year's Work Given By Civic Club of West End

The Woman's Civic club of West End is just completing its first year's work. Few presidents have the distinction of forming an organization and placing it in a permanent home in one year's time. Mrs. Murray Howard, president of the Civic club, with the unfailing cooperation of the members, has won that distinction.

With the purchase of a home during the last weeks of the present administration, as the climax of the accomplishments for the year, the officers will step aside next Wednesday, and stand ready to give the new administration their hearty support.

In speaking of the resume of the year's work, Mrs. A. J. Merrill said: "No appeal has been made by the state, district, or city federation which has not been cheerfully met. To quote one of the city officers, in an address to the club, 'cooperation is the club's middle name.'"

Every department is well organized. The Blue Birds, with Mrs. Swann Burnett as leader, and Mrs. J. S. Nichols as honorary chairman, meet monthly, with a new form of amusement supplied each time.

The "teen age" group, under the chaperonage of Mr. and Mrs. Sefton Strickland, is bringing the young girls and boys together in wholesome and enjoyable gatherings, their last meeting taking the form of a picnic to Stone mountain.

The Tallulah Falls committee, Mrs. Edward Hardaway Smith, chairman, with the gift to the Tallulah Industrial school of $757 and a library valued at $500 to its credit; the hospital committee, Mrs. C. C. Shipley, chairman, with thousands of bandages made for Grady, substantial help given Base Hospital 48, the Red Cross, and the Needle Work guild; the civic committee, Mrs. Otis Witherspoon, chairman, which supplied numbers of needy families with food, assisted with the formation of the Atlanta Smoke Abatement league, through the untiring efforts of Mrs. Tully Brooke, Mrs. G. H. Howard and Mrs. D. O. Cogbill, and did many other deeds for the civic betterment of the community, are probably the outstanding committees of the year.

The programs have been inspirational with such speakers as Dr. W. A. Smart, Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, Colonel Frederic Paxon, Dr. James A. Routh, Mrs. R. K. Rambo and Mrs. Willard C. Patterson, while the citizenship and the Americanization committees gave special educational programs under the direction of Mrs. Berry Hinton and Mrs. Tom Body. Music of the highest type has accompanied each, arranged by Mrs. J. A. Murphey and Miss Pauline Landon.

The literary department, directed by Mrs. J. W. Mozley, has spent a profitable year in the study of the prescribed course, with splendid papers prepared by the members, and the foremost literary men and women of the city as speakers.

Uncle Remus' birthday was remembered with an appropriate program arranged by Mrs. R. Taylor Connally, with Dr. Marvin Williams as lecturer.

The old ladies from the home on West End avenue have not been forgotten. The automobile committee, Mrs. O. M. Bowling, chairman, has supplied them with many rides, while a tempting lunch was given them at the clubhouse by the welfare committee, Mrs. H. M. Simpson, chairman.

The year book, which is being prepared by Mrs. Jesse Manry, will hold all reports. Mrs. A. H. McDonald, Mrs. C. C. Berry, Mrs. H. A. Watts and assistants have shared the responsibility of financing the various activities.

The box containing the preliminary ballots of the club will be opened in the presence of the executive board Monday, May 11, at 2:30 o'clock at the clubhouse and the election of officers will take place Wednesday, May 13, at 3 o'clock at the same place, 324 Gordon street, and the old year will be finished and the new begun.

Mrs. Hess Is Hostess To Sewing Circle.

In the unique and interesting setting of the Three Oaks Tea room on Kirkwood road, Mrs. Kate Green Hess entertained a circle of her friends on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. J. D. Dunwody, hostess of Three Oaks, is also a member of the sewing circle, and assisted Mrs. Hess in making the occasion an enjoyable one. The reception room, parlor and long dining room were tastefully decorated with cut-flowers from Mrs. Dunwody's old-fashioned flower garden. At 4:30 o'clock the dining room was thrown open and the guests enjoyed a round-table reminiscence of old Kirkwood and the close friendship of her people.

The members of this particular circle are: Mrs. J. D. Dunwody, Mrs. W. D. Paden, Mrs. Henry Hill, Mrs. H. E. Clark, Mrs. Lewis Rogers, Mrs. Eugene Daniel, Mrs. W. A. Fleming, Mrs. Jane Langley, Mrs. Vernon Shearer, Mrs. Allen Ripley, Mrs. Henry Burr, Mrs. William Schley Howard, Miss Sarah Ripley and Mrs. Kate Green Hess.

Play Presented At Marist Hall.

"The Garden Ghost," a light comedy of 1815, was presented by the seniors of Sacred Heart school at Marist hall Friday, May 8, at 2:45 o'clock to a large audience.

"The Garden Ghost" was written and personally directed by Miss Mary Lynes, a former graduate of Sacred Heart school and a member of the Sacred Heart alumnae. A ghost dance by Mary Margaret Duffey preceded this delightful play.

Mrs. Harmon To Entertain.

Mrs. Thomas R. Harmon will be hostess at an informal bridge tea Tuesday afternoon at her home in the Blackstone apartments.

The hostess will be assisted in entertaining by her niece, Miss Estelle Lindsey.

Twenty friends of the hostess have been invited.

Stunt Night Will Be Featured at Jewish Alliance

The Young Judaean stunt night will be held Monday night, May 11, at 8 o'clock at the Jewish Educational alliance. A most delightful program has been arranged by the program committee. A dress rehearsal was held Thursday night, May 7, and every stunt that has been prepared is original and unique. They promise laughter galore. The following is the program: Opening chorus, "One Ninety-eight Please," "A Night at the Cabaret," tableaux, "The Country Wedding," "The Girls of Yesterday and Today," "School Days," "Down on the Farm," "FOJ Broadcasting" and "Satisfaction Guaranteed."

According to the above, one notes the variety of acts. Special costumes and scenery has been gotten to fit each act. Three prizes will be awarded to the three best stunts. Each club is competing for the prizes. Competition is keen, and the participants intend to do their best. They are all out to win. Competent people have been selected to act as judges, and each stunt will be given considerable thought.

The program is in charge of the following committees: Max M. Cuba, chairman; Rose Goldstein, publicity; Tillie Alterman, tickets; Sarah Freeman, Lottie Geffen, program; Nannie Cramer and Rebecca Golden, stage settings. The proceeds of this affair will go towards the Young Judaean convention.

Among the participants are: Mollie Raum, Fannie Weingarten, Hattie Gershcow, Rose Severdlin, Eva Moldrow, Esther Fineroff, Ida Weingarten, Mary Heinall, Ada Frank, Pearl Prager, Sylvia Smullan, Mary Lee Wender and Rosalie Bach.

Kiwanis Club Will Sponsor "Ladies' Nite" at East Lake

An interesting social event planned for next week will be "Ladies' Nite," sponsored by the Atlanta Kiwanis club and given Tuesday evening, May 12, at the East Lake Country club.

J. Sherrard Kennedy is chairman of the entertainment committee and has planned a program which will be replete with interesting features.

Dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock to 250 guests.

It will be in some respects a dinner-dance, interspersed with entertainment features, and in addition a souvenir will be at each lady's plate, while quite a number of attendance prizes will be drawn for and distributed among the ladies present.

Robert E. Jones, prominent attorney, is president of the Kiwanis club and A. A. Lavaque is vice chairman of the entertainment committee. Warner's Seven Aces will play during dinner and for dancing afterward.

This will be one of the most brilliant affairs taking place during the forthcoming week.

Fashion Show Held in Decatur.

The "fashion show" given under the auspices of the Decatur Woman's club Friday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Pattillo, on Clairmont avenue, in Decatur, was a great success.

Mrs. W. J. Barnes and Mrs. Neal Hartley were in charge of arrangements and every one participating enjoyed it thoroughly. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. R. N. Pelot and Dr. W. S. Young for being most tacky attired. An orchestra furnished music throughout the evening.

Mrs. Baker Honors Club.

A delightful party of the past week was the one at which Mrs. E. L. Baker, Jr., entertained the members of the K. C. club of the Fulton National Bank girls at her home at 107 Park street, Tuesday evening.

Bridge was played during the evening, and the prizes for top score were won by Miss Alice Hamilton and C. L. Longino, while consolation prizes were won by Miss Wraye Marsh and L. A. Phillips.

The guests included Miss Frances Barksdale, Alice Hamilton, Mrs. E. L. Baker, Jr., Wraye Marsh, Ruby George, Ida Berchenko, and Charles Lochridge, Bill Barlow, C. O. Witchie, C. L. Longino, L. A. Phillips and E. L. Baker, Jr.

Mothers' day will be fittingly celebrated at the Y. W. H. A. by dispensing with the business meeting in the afternoon and giving a program for Sunday evening. Refreshments will be served and a general invitation is issued to members, mothers and friends.

Mrs. N. H. Bach, president of the "Y," will preside at the following program: 1. Reading of the president's proclamation and extract from congressional bill inaugurating Mothers' day, by Mrs. Herbert Taylor; 2. Songs, "Little Mother of Mine" and "Mighty Lak a Rose," by the Junior "Y" Glee club; 3. Piano solo, prelude in G Minor, Rachmaninoff by Ann Lessnoff; 4. Address "The Significance of Mothers' Day," by Mrs. A. P. Hirmes; 5. Violin solo, Meditation, from Thais, by Sam Proger; 6. Carnation Salute by Jeanette Schulmaister; 7. Movie Pictorial.

"Is cheerfulness a matter of temperament or cultivation? How can one acquire that enviable state of mind more desirable than vast riches?" These question will be discussed in an address by Mrs. Wesley Peacock, who will speak on "The Psychology of Cheerfulness," at the open forum meeting of the Y. W. H. A., at Washington and Clarke streets, at 11:30 o'clock Sunday morning. These forums are free to the public and all are invited to come and participate in the open discussion following the main address.

Fine Arts Cottage at Tallulah Given Library by Mrs. Lorenz

The art department of the Atlanta Woman's club assembled an unusually delightful group for tea Friday afternoon at the club. Mrs. James R. Little, chairman of art, entertained as guests of honor, Mrs. Max Lorenz, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson and A. C. Wyatt. The occasion was the formal presentation by Mrs. Lorenz of an extensive collection of books and a photographic outfit to the Tallulah Falls school, through the fine arts department of the club. These are given with the understanding that a Fine Arts cottage is to be established at the Tallulah Falls school, owned by the fine arts department of the Atlanta Woman's club, and bearing the name "Max Lorenz Studio." Among other things this cottage is to contain two or three rooms for guests interested in arts and crafts and for members of the fine arts department of the club to use at will. The books will form a nucleus for the living room and the photographic outfit for a studio.

Valuable Donation.

This valuable donation includes an Encyclopedia Britannica, a group of standard dictionaries, a valued collection of histories, Harvard Classics, a complete photographic outfit, one thousand negatives, a portfolio of etchings entitled, "One Hundred Masterpieces," and nine handsome volumes from the International Correspondence school on "Electric Railway and Lighting," presented in 1907 to Dr. Max Lorenz, who had just completed his course. Dr. Lorenz is described as "A foreigner born in Vienna with the spirit of America, who dropped into a lumber camp to earn his living, learn the language and study sociology—one deeply interested in the upward, onward of the world."

Generous Gift.

The donation will furnish a wonderful vision for these mountain children. Mrs. Lorenz, through her very generous gift, will open to many young minds avenues of thought and fields of exploration that would otherwise be closed to them. It is her plan to add to this collection from time to time as the cottage actually materializes.

After tea the guests adjourned to the "Galleries Intime" to view the garden pictures of A. C. Wyatt, one of the honor guests. Of particular interest was the painting recently made of the magnificent oak tree in the court of the Woman's club, a tree beloved by all the club members and their children. Mr. Wyatt is an English artist, a horticulturist, who came to this country to paint some of the beautiful gardens of America.

Violin Class Contest Is of Interest.

A very interesting program presented during music week was the violin class contest for public schools on the south side, conducted by Miss Mary Douglas, which was held Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Steinway hall.

Those taking part were Helen Theodocion, Deonecia Karras, Mary Karras, Catherine Boolukos, Robert McAllister, Anne Russell Banks, Laura Steele, Mildred Curry, Woodrow Wood, Jack Gamadanis, Wilber Carroll, Elenor Wise, Marion Choen, Alexander Strachan, Marvin Sugarman, Sidney Kuniansky, Samuel Lewis Gordon, Frederick Breed, James Farrow, Carlos Campbell, Randolph Longino, Lola Ridley, John Edward Quinn, Ben Striplin, Dorothy Dudley, Harriet Steele, J. H. McElroy, Augusta Smith.

The beautiful 1924-25 class banner was won by Formwalt School and the winners for the best scale playing were Miss Anne Russell Banks, of Lee Street school and Ben Striplin, of Joe Brown Junior High.

At the close of the contest the second-year pupils of Grant park played Schubert's "March Militaire," which was enthusiastically received. Misses Anne Russell Banks and Mary Kendrick, of Lee street played "Sing Me to Sleep," by Green. Three other numbers which were beautifully rendered were "Noel." German folk

Humane Society Will Hold Pet Parade May 13

The Atlanta Humane society will hold a pet parade on Wednesday, May 13, at 3:30 o'clock, at 844 Forrest Road, Linwood park, "Better Homes" No. 1. Every one in Atlanta is invited to come and bring some pet animal which must have on a collar and be on a leash. There will be no charges of any sort and the children are especially invited.

Prizes will be awarded for the animals showing the best care, regardless of kind or breed; also the most aristocratic, the best mutt dog, the largest animal, the smallest animal, for the best stray dog and cat which has been rescued from the streets and cared for.

Those taking part in the parade shall report at 3 o'clock with their pets and places in the parade will be assigned to them. The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. H. S. Wagner, Mrs. E. P. McBurney, Mrs. T. H. Grace, Mrs. Stacy E. Hill, Mrs. Robert G. Lose and Mrs. Katherine Weathersbee.

At the same time a silver loving cup will be awarded to the child under 16 years of age who has done the most acts of kindness for animals in the past year. This is open to every child in Atlanta, and those that have not already sent in their report should mail them to the office of the Atlanta Humane society, 902 Flatiron building, before Tuesday, May 12.

Judges will be Harry Stilwell Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. J. Carroll Payne and Mrs. T. T. Stevens.

Mrs. C. Talmadge Dean, of Des Moines, Iowa, who before her marriage April 29 was Miss Allene Herring.

Miss Boyer Is Honored.

A very pretty combination bridge party and china shower was given Wednesday, May 6, at the home of Mrs. Nelson Brandt, 120 Montgomery Ferry drive, to honor Miss Jessica Jane Boyer, an attractive May bride-elect.

The invited guests were Mrs. L. L. Boyer, the bride-elect's mother, and charming sister, Virginia Boyer; Miss Jean Drager, Mrs. R. MacDougal, Miss Martha Lamar, Mrs. W. Kirkpatrick, Miss Bobby Blandford Delgar, Mrs. Frank Dean McNew, Miss Shabney Clark, Mrs. Harris Hinton, Miss Martha Yarbrough, Mrs. Alex Courtland Keese, Mrs. Hugh Wright, Mrs. H. G. Carrithers, Mrs. H. S. Mobley.

Joseph E. Brown To Hold Exercises.

The graduation exercises for the Joseph E. Brown Junior High school are scheduled to take place Thursday afternon, June 4, at 4 o'clock, at the Park Street Methodist church.

At that time 250 boys and girls will be awarded certificates showing that they have completed the junior high course of study, and are eligible to enter the several senior high schools of the city.

This class will have the distinction of being the first class ever to graduate from the Brown Junior High.

District Meetings Will Feature Tallulah Falls School Speakers

Interest in the first biennial council of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, to be held at Tallulah Falls on the invitation of the board of trustees of Tallulah Falls Industrial school for mountain girls and boys, June 9 to 12, is being stimulated by district meetings during the present month in the majority of the 12 districts into which the state organization is subdivided. The eighth district will convene in Hartwell on May 22, Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, president of the Georgia federation, and Mrs. John Ottley, president of the board of trustees of Tallulah Falls school are invited to address the meeting, as also Mrs. R. K. Rambo, chairman of the department of public welfare. Columbus was the scene of the fourth district meeting held on May 2 and marked by an exceptionally large attendance, the voting delegates numbering 136 and the meeting being attended by a host of visitors besides. Stress was laid throughout the meeting on the approaching gathering at Tallulah Falls and the school there owned and conducted by the federation. Mrs. Brantley, honor guest of the occasion, spoke eloquently on the present and future of the federation, declaring the Tallulah Falls school the "heart of the federation," and citing its wonderful influence in binding together the various groups throughout the state. Mrs. John King Ottley, head of the school's trustees, and Mrs. Willard C. Patterson, chairman of press and publicity for the school, were also speakers who emphasized the wonderful work being carried forward at Tallulah and which will be brought to a fitting climax on the second day of the council by brilliant dedicatory exercises, followed by a barbecue on the school grounds. At the Columbus gathering it was announced that a large delegation from the fourth district will attend the council because of the unusual opportunity to become intimately acquainted with the school and its pupils and the outdoor diversions being planned.

Council Is Different.

The fact that this council will be of an altogether different character from the meetings as held in Georgia and that the gathering will be in effect a vacation in the mountains was declared at Columbus and at preceding district meetings to be especially appealing to women who have been active in home and public affairs during the winter months. Women are being advised to attend the council prepared for outdoor pastimes and provided with clothes of simple daytime type as there will not be any formal entertainments or dressy occasions.

By many the council is already referred to as a "suitcase convention." While there will be no formal reports given at the council or any election held, it is anticipated that much inspiration for another year will be derived from the addresses which will be made by district presidents and which will reveal that no club year has ever been more prolific of club achievement. Not only will the council meeting mark the successful completion of the three years' campaign for a "Greater Tallulah," it will also show a year in which great progress has been made in systematizing club work and injecting approved business methods into every undertaking. This is declared to be in large measure due to the insistent emphasis on a business administration given by Mrs. Brantley, who has lent immeasurable effort and influence to putting the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs on a sound and efficient basis, in which continuity and correct financiering ar firmly established.

Will Meet in Calhoun.

The seventh district federation will meet in Calhoun on May 14 and 15 as the guest of the Calhoun Woman's club in the log cabin clubhouse of the convention and will be presided over by Mrs. Oscar Peeples, of Cartersville, president of this district. The ninth district will meet in Clayton June 5 and 6. The 10th district met the latter part of April in Sandersville with Mrs. W. F. Wilhoit, of Warrenton, presiding, and awarded a gavel for the best work of the year to the Washington county federation for having written and published a county history, for use in Washington county schools and costing approximately $600. The 12th district convention preceded the 10th by a few days and was held at Cochran. The keynote of the meeting was "advertise Georgia" and part of the time was devoted to a symposium on "How We Can Best Advertise Georgia Through the Clubs." The district pledged the clubwomen's efforts in boosting Georgia products and giving them preference over others. The fifth district convention was held the middle of April and the hostess organization was the Peachtree Road Woman's club. The 11th district met early in April in Quitman. The first district met the first part of April in Statesboro. At all district meetings emphasis had been laid particularly upon the first biennial council to be held in the future on alternate years from regular conventions. Every club is entitled to send its president or alternate to the council and the remainder of the body eligible to vote will be composed of the state officers and executive board. All visitors will be welcomed and indications at district meetings are that many clubwomen are planning for the outing.

Woodberry Hall Closing Program.

Woodberry Hall commencement opens on Saturday afternoon of this week, May 16, with the class-day program. The alumnae will hold its annual meeting, and elect officers, and welcome the alumnae of 1925.

Miss Sally Parker will make an address and preside, as class president. The last will and testament will be duly read by Miss Lillian Williams, second honor graduate, and the class prophecy by Miss Lorraine Ozburn. Miss Virginia Patterson, first honor graduate, will give the class history and Miss Sally Parker, also first honor graduate, will read the class poem. Famous sayings will be said by Miss Julia Clendennin, and the class grumbler, Miss Dorothy Mahoney. Miss Martha Bullard will describe the celebrities of 1935. Miss Mahoney will sing an original ode to Woodberry. The alumnae response will be given by Miss Margaret Hardy, class of '24. The tree planting on the terrace will complete the program.

The senior class will attend All Saints' church in a body on Sunday, May 17, for the service, and be welcomed with appropriate words by the rector, the Rev. W. W. Memminger.

On Monday evening, the eighteenth, the graduation exercises at the Atlanta Woman's club will be unusually brilliant. The baccalaureate address will be made by the distinguished United States senator, Walter George, and Bishop Mikell will give a message to the class. The 19 graduates will be attended by their maids from the junior class with garlands of roses.

A reception in the banquet hall will close the program.

Sunday School Class Is Complimented.

An interesting and enjoyable affair of Thursday evening was the "Backward Party" given by Miss Ora Clark at her home on Brown Mill road in honor of Miss Rosa Berman's Sunday-school class of Trinity Methodist church.

Enjoy the Out-of-Doors In a Bradley!

CLEAR blue sky, soft golden sands, dashing, splashing waves—and a Bradley! Complete is the picture and perfect is the comfort to the seeker of outdoor joys when Bradley is the bathing suit chosen for the dip in the surf or pool. So widely recognized has the Bradley become as the ideal bathing suit that everyone is aware of its trimness and smartness of fit, its becoming and up-to-the-minute styles, its elasticity and firmness of knitting that make the Bradley the perfect bathing suit—that place Bradley in a class by itself.

And for just these reasons Bradley is the suit which H. G. Lewis & Company have chosen to handle exclusively. Quality, individuality and style have ever been watchwords at Lewis' and in selecting the Bradley they have kept them carefully in mind. Have you seen their wide selection on second floor? There are suits for all ages and sizes in any color or style you should prefer. Gay and brilliant in both color and design are some of them, while others in subdued tones and solid colors express the more conservative. Their unsurpassed beauty and grace of line make the Bradleys, such as seen at Lewis', the kind that not only the "beach bather" will seek, but the most ardent enthusiast of swimming itself, for who does not wish to look attractive and smart on the beach? Warmer days are fast approaching, and the pools are expected to open very soon, so while the assortment at Lewis' is complete, select yours—for remember that the Bradley reigns supreme in the realm of sports togs.

Their Final Triumph!

ALL joys come to an end sometime—and the joy of having the Lyric Players with us seems to be no exception to this very unkind rule, for next week in the great play "Cobra" they will bid farewell to their Atlanta friends and admirers. How we will miss the lovely Helen Joy, of that irresistible sweetness, air of dignity and refinement that at once mark her as one to the manner born; and the versatile Fred Raymond, who makes us laugh and cry at will, but makes us love him most of all. The others, too—Marion White (that naive coquette), John Holden (youthful and likable chap that he is!), Will Lloyd (perfect villain—or devil—which shall I say?) and all the rest—who will not mourn the loss of every one of them?

And one other—the "man behind the scenes"—the genial and splendid manager, Monty Salmon himself, we will miss most of all. He has confided to me, however, that the Lyric Players are saving the best for the last in their final play, "Cobra." It is the story of two men—close friends since college days. One of them is deceived by the girl he marries—by the cobra. Don't miss this unusual play in which your favorite Lyric Players will achieve their final triumph and end their stay in a blaze of glory. We'll bid them farewell and Godspeed—and then pray that they will soon come back again.

Who doesn't thrill at the very mention of a circus! But a flying circus with dare-devil, breathless, hair-raising stunts that hold enormous crowds in rapt silence and tense excitement will be a great treat to all—from the small innocent child who gapes wide-eyed at the floating, darting "bird" silhouetted against the sky, to the most staid, the most logical of college professors who view it logically as one of the greatest scientific phenomena of the age. The three-day program, which began yesterday afternoon and will continue today and tomorrow afternoon, features the famous Gates aeroplane and is being staged by The Atlanta Constitution at Tuggle field in Decatur.

Where Shopping Is a Genuine Pleasure

AT this time of the year more than any other we are especially particular concerning the meats we select for the table. Not only do we want sweet, tender, wholesome meats, but we want to be certain that every precaution has been observed in keeping meats of all kinds in the most perfect condition from the moment they are first prepared for the market until they reach the hands of the consumer.

This ideal condition for caring for meats will be found the strong feature of the Purity Markets (80 of them in all) operated in the Rogers' stores. No, it will not be necessary for you to even leave your grocery store after selecting your groceries in order to buy your meats—for there is your meat market under the same roof with your groceries at your nearest Rogers store.

You, no doubt, have noticed that these Purity Markets have recently been completely remodeled with snow-white, sanitary, latest improved fixtures. The equipment is as perfect as scientific experts can make it. Most unique and efficient are the plate-glass refrigerated display cases which have just been installed. They have been especially designed and built for the Purity Market Company. They not only add to the attractiveness of the market, but they give the customer the assurance that the fresh, wholesome meats displayed in the cases are always free from heat and dust and other undesirable contacts.

And, of course, these markets in the Rogers stores handle only the very highest class of meats—the very best obtainable throughout the great markets of the country. Besides this, the Purity Market Company manufacture their own especially fine sausage, that is made fresh every day in their own immaculately clean kitchen on Whitehall street. They also make a specialty of sliced bacon, which is fresh every day. In this department alone they have built up a long list of patrons.

If you have not already chosen your meats from the unusually fine assortment at Rogers', do so at your earliest opportunity. Experienced market men will gladly give you the benefit of their wide knowledge and will serve you with the courtesy and helpfulness that characterizes Rogers'. You are sure to find shopping here a genuine pleasure.

A LITTLE BOY'S POCKETS.

A cherished knife, a grimy ball of string,
Some pebbles, shells, and nails, a safety pin;
A bit of putty and a curtain ring,
A marble and a tiny piece of tin;
And in the other pocket folded square
His handkerchief reposes white as snow,
Untouched by hands since first he put it there,
A small boy's handkerchief is just for show!

I pick his little suit up from the floor,
And hang it carefully upon the hook.
His weighty pockets tempt me to explore.
I have to laugh as cautiously I look,
Replacing carefully—I'll not mislay
The precious treasure of his magic day!

How much do YOU pay for the privilege of saying

"CHARGE IT?"

IF YOU went to your banker to secure a loan for thirty or sixty days, or 10 months, and he should charge you interest at the rate of 22 1-10%, you would consider it exorbitant and doubtless immediately refuse to pay it.

Yet do you know that when you buy Home Furnishings, such as Rugs, Draperies and Furniture, you pay on the average of 22 1-10% more to enjoy the privilege of saying "Charge It." Our experience has proved that in many instances you pay even a higher premium for long terms.

By operating on a strictly cash basis, we are able to sell home furnishings on an average of 22 1-10% less than we formerly charged for the same merchandise on terms.

Wouldn't you rather pay cash and save this amount?

Although we are new in name, all of our Salesmen have had years of sales experience in Atlanta, and are thoroughly qualified to serve you. Any one of them will be glad to show you our stock.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LVII., No. 331. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1925.

"In the Month of May Comes Mother's Day"

Sentiment Reaches Its Zenith Today In Praise of Mother

Sentiment rises to its zenith today in celebration of that all-embracing mother-love—the embodiment of loyalty and tenderness of affection!

Churches will be filled to capacity to hear anew the beautiful scriptural injunction, "Honor thy father and thy mother," and countless roses will be worn as a symbol of the purity and sweetness of maternal love—a red rose for the living mother and a white one for the dead.

Thousands of mother-hearts will be made glad by receipt this morning of messages of love and gratitude from absent sons and daughters and tributes of affection will be expressed in various ways by gifts of the land's fairest flowers. The glory of motherhood is the dominant sentiment of the season, the manner of observance having been bequeathed from the dawn of the Christian religion and endowed with the spiritual element which typifies the power and majesty of mother-love.

As our own beloved Frank L. Stanton, Georgia's poet-laureate, writes in a recent poem:

"Landway or seaway—wherever they may roam,
There's a mother in a doorway who calls her children home;
And home hears them answer, from hearts still beating true—
From o'er the world, we're coming home to you."

Kappa Sigma Freshmen Give Chapter Dance.

The Genuine Silmerine Hair Curling Method

If your hair is straight, flat, dull-looking, you need not be asked if you long to possess perpetually wavy, soft, glossy beautiful tresses. What to do—Take a clean tooth brush, dip it in a saucer of pure liquid silmerine and run this through the hair just before doing it up. This will give you a real surprise. Your hair will have a prettier and more natural-looking curl and lustre than it has ever had before—and there will be nothing streaky, sticky, greasy or anything unpleasant about it. A few ounces of liquid silmerine from your druggist will last for months. This is just the finest thing imaginable for the purpose and if keeps the hair in curl a considerable time.—(adv.)

Mrs. Stevens Plans May Fete At "Paradisio" in Druid Hills

Mrs. F. O. Stone, charming Atlantan, at whose handsome home in Druid Hills a May fete will be staged by the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, with Mrs. T. T. Stevens as chairman.

One of the largest and most interesting social events of the month will be the May fete to be held at "Paradisio," the beautiful and artistic home of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Stone, on Ponce de Leon avenue, on Friday, May 22nd, by the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs. Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs has planned for an afternoon of exceptional interest, which will include cards, mah jong and a beautiful program of music, dancing and refreshments.

Wonderful Program.

The program will be featured by a fascinating series of dances staged in the magnificent Italian garden at the Stone home, and accompanied by especially arranged music. Pupils of Mrs. William Claer Spiker will render the dances, with all the artistry for which they are famous. The Italian garden is in full view from all parts of the terrace, and the greensward leading to it is an harmonious background for the beautiful flowers and shrubbery which ornament it.

The card tables will be placed on the immense terrace surrounding the mansion, which slopes gently down to the Italian garden, the charm of which is completed by a wonderfully carved and ornamented pergola purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Stone from an old Italian garden while visiting in Italy a short time before designing the gardens of their estate. This pergola and the paved terrace upon which it rests makes a perfect setting for the lovely dance numbers to be presented by the Potter-Spiker Players and lends a charming atmosphere to the garden fete.

Receiving Party.

Receiving with Mrs. Stone, Miss Stone, Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. John King Ottley at the fete will be the officers of the Atlanta federation, Mrs. Alfred Newell, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mrs. Arthur Harris, Mrs. Eugene Harrington, Mrs. R. Frank McCormack, Mrs. F. J. Paxon and Miss Rosa Woodberry. Mrs. Charles Chalmers, chairman of music for the federation, is arranging the program. Mrs. Charles Haden, chairman of the federation's Founders' Memorial scholarship for the benefit of which this magnificent fete is being given, is in charge of refreshments. Mrs. F. J. Paxon is chairman of the prizes and Mrs. R. Frank McCormack and Mrs. Arthur Harris are chairmen of tickets.

Exceptionally attractive prizes have been provided for each table, and many very beautiful prizes will be drawn for during the afternoon. Indications are that this will be a mammoth party with practically every leader in club circles entertaining at one or more tables. Admission charges will be $1.00 each or $4.00 a table, and reservations may be made by phoning Mrs. R. Frank McCormack, Walnut 0901, or Mrs. Arthur Harris, Dearborn 2627.

Woman's Educational Alliance Announces Office Hours

The Southern Woman's Educational alliance, 506 Chamber of Commerce building, announces office hours from 3 to 4 daily, and from 8:30 to 12:30 on Saturday for the use of public school students seeking information about opportunities open to girls of today, or who wish advice in planning their college work. These special office hours have been planned in response to a request from teachers who wish their students to make use of the resources of the alliance.

For the use of students planning college courses the alliance has a library of over 400 catalogues from colleges and technical schools all over the country. These may be consulted at any time. The counselor will also be glad to answer questions about courses offered by different colleges which give preparation for the various vocations students choose.

The alliance is also making available in schools and colleges the results of its recent investigation of the occupations in Atlanta open to trained women, through a series of talks by the counselor.

Miss Harriet Houghton has recently returned from Macon, where she spoke to the student body on "Opportunities Open to the College Girl of Today." This talk was followed by conferences with individual students seeking information on vocations such as social work, laboratory work, journalism and library work. Miss Houghton will talk this week at the O'Keefe Junior High school on "Vocations Other Than Business Open to the Girl of Today." Talks have also been given recently at the Opportunity school on "Business Efficiency" and also to other groups on the general subject of vocations.

The purpose of the alliance is to help the southern girl in selecting her vocation wisely and to secure the right education for this. Mrs. Samuel M. Inman is president of the Atlanta branch. The educational committee which plans the alliance program in Georgia includes, Dr. J. R. McCain, chairman; H. H. Bixler, Miss Jessie Muse, Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, Kendall Weisiger, Mrs. Annie T. Wise and Cator Woolford.

GIRLS WHO WORK

MRS. VERBENA CARPENTER was a school teacher. No matter how badly she felt, she was obliged to be always dignified and cheerful. She had to hide her feelings. This is the case with almost all girls who work. If they are ill, they must keep that fact to themselves.

¶ Girls who suffer from ailments common to women should read Mrs. Carpenter's experience as she tells it in her own words. They will find relief by following her advice and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MRS. VERBENA CARPENTER
EVANSTON, WYOMING

¶ "A few years ago I had troubles every month such as girls often have, I was teaching school. One day my mother suggested that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it did wonders for me. In the course of a year I married and after my first baby was born I got up too soon and it caused displacement. I knew what the Vegetable Compound did for me before so I took it again. It strengthened me and now I have five little kiddies. I never felt better in my life. I owe my health to your wonderful medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

Wesleyan Junior Prom Takes Place on College Campus

Macon, Ga., May 9.—The junior prom, to which a hundred young men from over the southern states were invited, was held on the campus of Wesleyan college, Saturday night, May 9, Miss Dorothy Thomas, Macon, president of the class, being in charge of the entertainment. In the receiving line were: President, Miss Dorothy Thomas, Macon; vice president, Miss Merrill McMichael, Buena Vista; secretary and treasurer, Miss Frances Holland, Columbus; sergeant-at-arms, Miss Ernestine Cooper, Selma, Ala.; President and Mrs. W. F. Quillian; Professor and Mrs. Leon P. Smith; Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Greene; Miss Virginia Wendel, counselor of women; Mrs. Lucy Keane Johnson.

Rainbow Motif.

A rainbow motif was carried out in the decorations. On the front campus, where the promenade was held, the lights were rainbow draped. Over the punch booths at both ends of the campus glowed a rainbow, while the punch bowls themselves represented the traditional pots of gold. A Mercer orchestra furnished music for the occasion. The favors were candy corsages.

The freshmen who served were dressed in rainbow costumes of tarlatan, made bouffante style with full ruffled skirts and vari-colored ribbons around their necks to hold the waiters. Their costumes, each a different color, blended to give a charming effect in pastel shades.

On the various committees in charge of the entertainment were: prom cards, Miss Frances Cater, Perry; refreshments, Miss Sadye Johnson, Baxley; decorations and music, Miss Sara Frances Asbury, Elberton, and Miss Merrill McMichael, Buena Vista; punch, Miss Roberta Howard, Macon; invitations, Miss Margaret Zattau, Atlanta.

The freshmen invited to serve included in incoming and outgoing presidents, the five sisters of members in the junior class, and three other students elected by the junior class. They are: Miss Sara Lee Edwards, Claxton; Miss Agnes Anderson, Barnesville; Miss Helen Cannon, Cordele; Miss Mary Edna Dowling, Miami, Fla.; Miss Estelle Jessup, Columbus; Miss Dolores Jackson, Baconton; Miss Louise Ellis, Jacksonville, Fla.; Miss Nannette Kellam, Dublin; Miss Florence Crum, Cordele; Miss Virginia Stubbs, Macon.

Guests Present.

College Park Club Meeting.

Though not a political organization, the College Park Woman's club is vitally interested in all things pertaining to the state's welfare and the general development and advancement of the community along civic lines. As an outgrowth of this interest one day annually is devoted to a study of legislative measures to be considered at the next session of the general assembly.

The program period of the meeting of Wednesday, May 6, was given over to an intensive discussion of taxation and possible bills and amendments be presented before the legislature this summer.

Frank Weldon, of the Atlanta Taxpayers' league, was the very able speaker of the occasion and gave interesting data relative to the origin and development of taxation measures, beginning with Egypt's ancient history and leading up to the present-day problems of Georgia.

Mr. Weldon was introduced by Mrs. L. C. Algee, the efficient chairman of the club's department of legislation, under whose supervision the day's program was arranged.

Mrs. Clarence Wall, chairman of music, presented Miss Leslie Collier of Barnesville, in a group of artistically beautiful songs.

The president, Mrs. L. O. Freeman, announced a rummage sale for Saturday, May 9, and further stated that on the evening of Friday, May 15, a Lilliputian, or Tom Thumb, wedding would be staged at the College Park auditorium under the auspices of the club. This diminutive wedding party will include a large number of the very most youthful members of the town's society set, and will be an occasion of beauty and general interest. In addition to the wedding other attractive features will appear on the program.

New Era Study Class Gives Silver Tea.

Friday afternoon of the past week the New Era Study club gave a silver tea at the home of Mrs. G. H. Phillips on Cleburn avenue.

The lower floor was thrown open to the guests, and was artistically decorated with baskets and bowls of beautiful spring flowers.

An unusually interesting program was given, consisting of vocal solos rendered by Mrs. LeRoy Rogers, Mrs. W. O. Cheers, Mrs. Dwight Bayley and Miss Edna May West. Miss Hazelle Towell gave a piano solo and Miss Irene Caldwell a reading. Mrs. LaFontaine presented several of her pupils in attractive dance numbers.

Following the program an auction was held, the proceeds to go for the benefit of Tallulah Falls school.

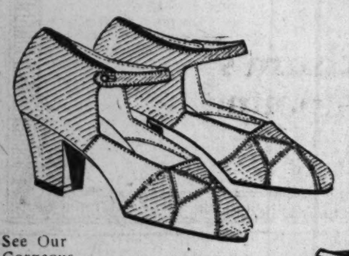

Miss Margaret Rogers and Miss Couts served punch. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. LeRoy Rogers at East Lake Wednesday, May 13.

Better Films P.-T. A. Chairman Makes Excellent Yearly Report

Mrs. George W. Price, chairman of the Atlanta Better Films for the Atlanta P.-T. A. council, read the following report for the year at the meeting of the council held last week:

"The P.-T. A. division of the Atlanta Better Films committee has held regular monthly meetings in Steinway hall at 10:30 o'clock on the fourth Thursday of each month. The very name, 'Better Films,' indicates the purpose for which we strive. Our motto is 'Cooperate and educate.'

"The movie is the most attractive thing in the world to boys and girls. It fascinates youth and thereby doubles its meaning to us. Its educational value is untold. 'Train up a child in the way it should grow' is a true and tried saying. This is the great work of the P.-T. A. division. We try to harness the good there is in it and show Atlanta children wholesome, entertaining pictures and thereby cultivate a taste for the best.

"We believe that once a week is often enough for children to see movies. Every Saturday morning at the Howard theater our committee presents three selected pictures: a comedy to create joy and mirth; an educational film to gain knowledge, and a theatrical film to entertain. Many of these last are selected from stories that teach great truths and nobility of character.

"Many pictures are changed or cut before they are shown to the children. If a child saw 'The Thundering Herd' during the week at the regular showing, he witnessed two scenes that were not good for him to see. The Better Films matinee showed the picture, but the part with a blood-stained knife in the hands of a murderess and the scene where an officer of the law was made ignoble were cut out.

"Regarding the law of suggestion, drinking scenes are omitted or any part that makes evil doing attractive. Character-building pictures have been indorsed because of their fine integrity and because we believe no child can see them without being better therefor.

"Too much cannot be said of the untiring efforts and the wonderful success of Mrs. Porter Langston, as chairman of children's matinees for the last two years. She was known as the 'Saturday Mother,' which loving title has been passed on this year to Mrs. Newton Wing, our present efficient and enthusiastic chairman.

"Preceding the pictures artistic prologues are staged each week by Miss Nell Enloe, chairman of that phase of the work.

"The average attendance at these matinees is over a thousand, showing how many mothers appreciate the fact that children should see only selected pictures.

"Ours has been called the 'Playground of Parent-Teacher work.' We deal with children's pleasures. Once a month tickets are given by the chairman of each school as a reward to the class having the largest number of mothers present at the P.-T. A. meeting.

"Each P.-T. A. president in the city and county is asked to appoint a better films chairman who in turn is asked to select a committee of five. These representatives assist Mrs. C. N. Weems, chairman of review of local picture houses and Mrs. Wing, chairman of children's matinees. By appointment, they are also present at matinees to assist Mrs. W. L. McCaulley, chairman of chaperons. Most of our schools are buying moving picture machines and pictures are being shown weekly in many of the schools. In this way the machines are soon paid for. Reports from a few of the schools show fine profits from entertainments. The Ella W. Smillie school cleared $300; Davis street, $63.95; W. F. Slaton, $150; Lee Street, $197.60, and there are others. Of course, the best use of the machines is in the schools for visual education. Our library of films is small but increasing every year.

"The Atlanta committee issues 'The Better Films Bulletin' and 500 copies are distributed among the schools. This paper takes no commercial advertising and is paid for by the profits on the better films matinees and the $1 dues paid in by each school as dues to the committee.

"Perhaps the most outstanding event of the year is our Christmas party. In addition to our regular work each year at Christmas we collect and send gifts of all kinds to our needy school children.

"A large box was placed in front of the Howard theater and our children were encouraged to bring toys and books and take their part in making Christmas brighter for those less fortunate than themselves.

"Through the kindness of John Lloyd, we used 228 Peachtree street as headquarters and there received from generous Atlantans garments, toys and edibles which our school chairman distributed to more than a thousand homes. On December 26 the committee gave a matinee party to about 2,000 of Atlanta's needy children.

"Last but not least is the better films luncheon following our meeting each month. Here we meet with the Atlanta better films committee, of which Mrs. Alonzo Richardson is president. This body consists of a representative from nearly every large civic, cultural, educational and welfare organization in the city.

"Our speakers are often noted and distinguished people. Occasionally we have the thrill of meeting face to face and dining with a movie star. Those we have met were conscientious, zealous artists, working to make good pictures, profitable and entertaining. Our ministers' meeting was considered the most constructive we have had and several of them joined the committee.

"We constantly bring out the thought that we do not believe in censorship but in education, indorsement and the individual expression at the box office. If we think a show is bad, we do not declare it publicly for human curiosity we know would increase box office receipts.

"We have 400 members we urge our organization and friends in sympathy with the idea to make an individual expression, politely and quietly to the manager of that theater either by card, note or in person.

"A large number of people in a community expressing themselves has a splendid effect for the theaters wish to please and give the public what it demands.

"On the other hand the notes, cards and expressions of praise for the good are even more important. If you see a fine character building film, be sure to let the manager know you appreciate his effort to give the best to our community. 'Indorse the best and improve the rest.'

"From the office of the committee on public relations of the moving picture producers and distributors of America in New York, we learn that Atlanta has the cleanest pictures of any city of its size in the country.

"Your chairman has spoken five times before school associations, once to a Sunday School association and made a monthly report of our work to the Atlanta committee and the council."

The upper picture shows little Miss Dorothy Blackshear, who was crowned queen of the annual May festival at the Spring Street school Wednesday afternoon, and her attendants. The lower picture shows Miss Blackshear and her two little trainbearers, Bates Block and Herbert Reynolds.

Spring Street School Parent-Teacher association held its annual May festival Wednesday afternoon on the school grounds. Mrs. J. A. Mahoney was general chairman and the largest crowd in the history of the school attended, making the festival a marked success.

The May Queen was Dorothea Blackshear, honor pupil of the sixth grade, who was enthroned and crowned with beautiful ceremony. Maid of honor, Sarah Davis, was assisted by Douglas Cone.

The Tech High school band furnished excellent music during the afternoon as well as playing the processional march. Leading the procession was Robert Stevens, as Puck, followed by the crown bearers, Margaret Woodside and Pattie Langston, dressed in the school colors, lavender and green and carrying the crown of white roses on a white satin pillow.

Flower Girls.

Next came the four little flower girls from the kindergarten, Ruthanna Butters, Elizabeth Bean, Frances Kraft and Martha Craven, scattering roses before the Queen, Dorothea Blackshear, who wore a frock of white georgette with a long train carried by two little train bearers, Bates Block and Herbert Reynolds. Then came the maid, Sarah Davis, in a lavender frock, followed by the entire sixth grade and the honor boy and girl from each of the other grades, Gordon Toomey and Sue Allen Clapp, from Miss Landman's kindergarten; Arthur Howell and Mary Harris, from Miss Lovett's first grade; Tommie Quinn and Jack Stewart, from Miss Camp's first grade; Sarah Wicker and Luther Fincher, from Miss Harbin's second grade; Virginia Hunt and Albert Jones, from Miss Dunwoody's second grade; Elizabeth Randall and Dick King, from Miss Overby's third grade; Elizabeth Blackshear and Marvin McClatchey, from Miss Rayfield's third grade; Elaine Hostetter and Max Norton, from Miss Penick's fourth grade; Virginia Merry and I. S. Mitchell, from Miss Brown's fourth grade; Madeline Provano and Dowdell Brown, from Miss Baumstark's fifth grade; Harriette Lee and John Owend, from Miss Fulton's sixth grade; Martha Mathis and Alvin Joseph, from Miss Setze's fifth grade; Lucy Yundt and Billy Glenn, from Miss Adamson's sixth grade. Miss Adamson directed the processions.

May-Pole Dance.

Immediately after the queen was crowned she was entertained by a May-pole dance directed by Miss Dunwoody and danced by 16 of her second grade girls in flower costumes, Alice Armstrong, Hilda Brown, Gertrude Dickey, Helen Eastman, Dorothy Henry, Claire Hunnicutt, Kathryn Hansen, Anne Worthy Johnson, Aleen Peek, Rose Quillian, Charlotte Sage, Julia Sewell, Elsie Terhune, Virginia Tooney, Edith Sheppard and Frances Butters. Mrs. Robert Butters decorated the May pole.

The Indian dance by many children from the various grades all in costume, was an added feature under the direction of Mrs. Baumstark.

After this program the audience liberally patronized the various attractions, among which were a cake booth by the kindergarten mothers, Mrs. Holland Judkins, chairman. A fish pond by the mothers of the two first grades, Mrs. Julius de Give and Mrs. Bates Block, chairmen. A grab-bag by the mothers of the second grade, Mrs. Klatt Armstrong, chairman. A candy booth by the mothers of the third grade, Mrs. George Brown and Mrs. Eugene McCardy, chairmen. A country store by the mothers of one fourth grade, with Mrs. Arthur Hammond and Mrs. R. G. Merry as chairmen.

Ice Cream Booth.

An ice cream booth by the mothers of one fourth grade, Mrs. John Copeland chairman. A fortuneteller, by the mothers of one fifth grade, Mrs. Dowdell Brown, chairman. Lemonade by the mothers of one fifth grade, Mrs. T. D. Meadow, chairman. Balloons by the mothers of one sixth grade, Mrs. James Whitten, chairman. An ice cream booth by one sixth grade, Mrs. Garnett Quillian, chairman. Mrs. John Cody had charge of the ponies.

The prize for the most attractive booth was won by the grab-bag booth arranged by the mothers of Miss Dunwoody's second grade, with Mrs. Klatt Armstrong as chairman.

Calhoun P.-T. A. Reelects Board Of Past Two Years

The Calhoun Parent-Teacher association reelected its entire board of the past two years as follows: Mrs. Julian Harris, president; Mrs. S. R. Turner, treasurer; Mrs. C. Decker Tebo, recording secretary; Mrs. Frederick Cason, chaplain.

The last meeting of the 1924-1925 school year was held Thursday at Calhoun school, corner Piedmont avenue and Currier street. There were present 75 mothers and fathers.

Mrs. Julian Harris, president, presided. Reports were given by delegates to the state parent-teacher convention recently held in Macon. Mrs. John W. Lloyd and Mrs. Julian Harris were the Calhoun delegates and their reports showed splendid progress both in local and state work.

Mrs. S. R. Turner's treasurer report showed the result of splendid work by the association in the past year, a splendid cafeteria has been equipped and warm lunches furnished by the association at a nominal cost.

Parents and friends of Calhoun school were proud to see on display the two loving cups won by the boys and girls last Friday at Ponce de Leon park in the city-wide athletics of grammar schools.

Mrs. A. Sower, cafeteria chairman, was given a rising vote of thanks for her splendid work. Reports show that a number of children have reached the required standard in health, resulting from warm meals, etc., too there are a number of children cared for free by this association.

Class Lo v 3 received a holiday Friday as a reward of 100 per cent perfect teeth. Forty children are enrolled. Class prize was again won by High 4. Mrs. Nash, teacher, and Mrs. J. B. Willbanks, chairman.

Calhoun Parent-Teacher association unanimously indorsed the resolution adopted by the Atlanta Parent-Teacher council at its regular meeting, May 7.

Mrs. Julian Harris, president, introduced the O'Keefe Junior High pupils who gave the entertaining program: These pupils were former Calhoun students: Kate Harris, chairman; S. M. Hastings, principal junior high; Lucile James, junior high as a whole; Charles Walcott, extra curriculum; Richard Stansel, boys' shops; Kate Harris, household arts; Tom Wesley, a former pupil of Tenth Street school, played several pieces on his mandolin, which were enjoyed by all.

Peachtree Heights P.-T. A. Holds Final Meeting

The final meeting for the year of the P.-T. A. of the Peachtree Heights school was held in the school auditorium Tuesday with an unusually large attendance. In addition to the regular reports of the different committees special reports were given by the principal, Miss Wilder; Mrs. Le Hatte and Mrs. Varner on addresses at the Macon conference; Mrs. Rolleston, president of the association, reported on the unusually good showing of the school and the fifth district generally.

The nominating committee presented the following names for officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. D. B. Frisbie, vice president; Mrs. Henry Godfrey, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. L. R. Langworthy.

The program and special announcements for the cooking class which Mrs. Elizabeth Stanfield is to conduct this week, for the benefit of the school at 816 Peachtree, will be published in the papers each day. Tickets may be obtained at the door for single lessons at 50 cents or the whole course at $1.50.

Faith Pre-School Circle Meets.

The Pre-School circle of the John F. Faith P.-T. A. met on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the secretary, Mrs. G. G. Turner, Stovall street. Mrs. S. C. Roby, chairman, presided.

The meeting was opened with prayer, followed by the Pre-School circle song, written by Mrs. Wolfe, of the Samuel Inman school.

Miss Nan Whitehurst, of the Atlanta Normal and Faith school, gave a helpful talk on the pre-school and kindergarten child. Miss Whitehurst answered many questions asked by the mothers present about certain developments and characteristics of a child of four and five years.

It was decided to name this circle the "Bluebird Club" and the colors blue and pink were adopted.

The roll was divided into the blue and pink sides and a membership contest will be conducted during the summer months, the losing side to entertain the winners in September.

Mrs. John Faith, Jr., was elected press chairman. Each mother present was presented with a copy of "The Mother's Creed" in an attractive pink folder with a bluebird as a decoration. The mothers were urged to attend the lectures at Rich's tea room next week.

After delightful refreshments were served the meeting adjourned to meet again on Tuesday, June 2, at the home of Mrs. J. B. Johnston, 229 Flat Shoals avenue.

Resume of College Park P.-T.A. For the Past Four Years

The College Park Parent-Teacher association was organized October 4, 1921, with Mrs. Baynard Willingham, president, and 39 charter members, being one of the last organizations perfected in Fulton county. The disbursements during this year were $281.12. Seventy-five dollars of this amount was sent for supplementary readers, placed in the different grades, dictionaries and reference books for the school library. Victrolas, records, swings, volley balls, nets, etc., were furnished.

The sale of certified milk and home-made sandwiches was introduced into the school. The most important work accomplished during the first year was the medical inspection which was made possible by Drs. Kimsey Foster and P. M. Howard donating their services and the association's supplying the first month's salary for the school nurse, without whom the doctors could not conduct the inspection. Of the 677 white children examined there were over 60 who received direct benefit by means of operations, eye-glasses, dental treatment, etc.

Second Year.

Mrs. Fred L. Beers was president the second year, during which the chief activity of the association was the operation of the lunch room where nutritious lunches were served at a conservative cost. A paid supervisor was in charge of the lunch room, who did the buying and supervised the preparation of lunches keeping them up to a standard. A volunteer committee of mothers assisted, six of whom were present each day of the school year. The committee of grade chairmen did splendid work, each grade having one or more mothers who sponsored their grade, keeping in touch with their needs and supplying materials requested. During this year the amount spent for playground equipment, building equipment, clothing and books furnished needy children and the incidental expenses of the organization was $419.

Mrs. Charles D. Center was president the third year. The outstanding accomplishment of this year was the organization of a pre-school age circle with Mrs. B. H. Sullivan, chairman. This circle did splendid work. Their chief activity was the establishment of a baby health center and a study of the pre-school child.

The association offered medals to all children having perfect attendance from October through May. Forty medals were presented at the close of school.

A book exchange was conducted before school opened by a volunteer committee of mothers. Books were sold at half price. $212.13 worth of books were sold, thereby saving the patrons $212.13.

During this year $325 was spent for athletic equipment, building equipment, clothing, books and lunches furnished needy children, incidentals, etc.

Money and equipment furnished domestic science class, $26.

Fourth Year.

Mrs. Charles D. Center was president the fourth year. During this year the association clothed two children and furnished garments to several others, bought books for 15 children, gave $50 to school athletic funds, furnished set of reference books for library, presented flag to be used outside building, gave prize of $1 each month to grade having most mothers present at P.-T. A. meetings. The membership committee put on a drive and 107 new members were secured.

The association gave a reception in January. Mrs. Fred Wessels, of Savannah, state president; Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones, of Macon, former state president and the faculty of our schools were the honored guests. Amount spent during year for equipment and incidentals, $172.96. The board of education having rescinded its action granting the privilege to the P.-T. A. of maintaining a lunch room, no lunch room was operated during the past year.

The association is affiliated with the state, national and district congress of Parent-Teacher associations, Fulton County Presidents club and Fulton County Council of Parents and Teachers, Georgia Federation of Women's clubs.

Mrs. Charles Center has been elected fifth president of the association.

Family Welfare Chairman Makes Yearly Report to P.-T. A. Council

Mrs. C. P. Martin, chairman of Family Welfare Service committee of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council, submitted the following report for the past year of the work of this committee at the meeting of the council held last week:

The Family Welfare Service committee of the P.-T. A. council began active work in December when we helped with 21 Christmas trees for the special classes. The first meeting was held in January at the Chamber of Commerce when Miss Ada Woolfork, of the Family Welfare Service association of the city, asked our cooperation. When necessary we have called in the trained workers of the city organization. We have helped the Junior Red Cross put across a plan to get the school children to take the Sunday paper to school on Monday and the welfare chairmen have carried the papers to Grady hospital. Only two or three schools each week were asked to bring papers. We are also working with the Junior Red Cross in encouraging the children to plant flowers in their school and home garden to be taken to the hospitals. The welfare chairman of each school has been asked to go with the children when they go to take the flowers to the hospitals.

Cooperation With Clinic.

We also cooperate with the Good Samaritan clinic. Dr. Arch Elkin is doing a wonderful work with the special class children. If the child has a gland trouble it is treated at the clinic, but if they find some other disease the child is sent to a doctor who is a specialist in that line. Our committee goes to the home, sees that the child is ready on time and takes it to the doctor and back home. At present there are only four children being treated outside the clinic. The committee has furnished lunches, clothing and shoes to hundreds of children during the year and numbers of families have been helped. A number of the schools have "hope chests," where clothing in good condition is brought to the school and used when needed. Quite often one school exchanges with another and I have noticed that when a call comes the response is wonderful, carrying out the idea of usefulness for which our committee stands. I wish to thank Mrs. Howsmon for her kind and helpful suggestions and each chairman for their wonderful cooperation during the year.

P.-T. A. Presidents Club To Entertain at Annual Tea

A meeting of the P.-T. A. Presidents' club was held on Thursday in the ball room of the Henry Grady hotel, Mrs. J. P. Wall presiding.

Prayer was offered by Mrs. C. H. Morris, one of the former presidents of the club.

Each president gave a most interesting report of P.-T. A. activities and messages were heard from Mrs. George Howsmon, president of council; Mrs. E. D. McDonald, former president of council; Mrs. Morris, former president of the club; Miss Cabiniss, of the Journal; Mrs. George Price, from the Better Films committee; Mrs. J. C. Malone, pre-school chairman.

Mrs. R. M. McFarland, of the Smillie school, introduced her press chairman, Mrs. Massengale, who is also press chairman of the O'Keefe P.-T. A. Mrs. Langston, of Spring Street school introduced Mrs. Mahoney, chairman of the Spring May festival, who reported a most successful day, having cleared about $250. Mrs. Slate, of Georgia avenue, presented her new president, Mrs. Robinson, who was given a hearty welcome to the club, and Mrs. Boardman introduced Mrs. L. C. Algee.

Following the reports Mrs. Wise, principal of Commercial High gave a talk on the high standards of Commercial High as a literary, as well as commercial school. She also spoke on the Junior High schools.

It was decided that the June meeting would be the annual tea at East Lake, on the second Thursday afternoon in June. Mrs. Spurgeon King was made chairman of the committee on arrangements, with Mrs. Porter Langston as co-chairman, Mrs. Bauer and Mrs. Martin. The principals and the new presidents are invited to this meeting and reservations may be made through Mrs. A. E. Wilson, secretary of the club.

Those present at the meeting Thursday were Mrs. W. J. Thebout, Pryor Street; Mrs. C. P. Martin, Commercial High; Mrs. J. D. Coleman, Williams Street; Mrs. W. C. Slate, Georgia Avenue; Mrs. T. E. Robinson, Georgia Avenue; Mrs. George Ehlers, Luckie Street; Mrs. B. V. Moore, Hoke Smith; Mrs. J. L. Jepson, Stewart Avenue, Mrs. T. R. Fuller, Goldsmith; Mrs. W. C. Byers, Grant Park; Mrs. J. S. Boardman, Joe Brown; Mrs. L. C. Algee, Joe Brown; Mrs. R. M. Brandon, Peeples Street; Mrs. R. E. Jones, State Street; Mrs. J. C. Malone, Highland; Mrs. George Howsmon, Atlanta council; Mrs. E. D. McDonald, Girl's High; Mrs. J. P. Wall, A. N. T. and Faith; Mrs. C. H. Morris, past president; Mrs. A. T. Wise, Commercial High; Mrs. C. J. Foster, Slaton; Miss Mildred Cabaniss, Atlanta Journal; Mrs. A. E. Wilson, Kirkwood; Mrs. J. L. McCord, Moreland; Mrs. Henry Bauer, Bass, Jr., High; Mrs. George Price, better films; Mrs. A. L. Myers, Samuel Inman; Mrs. Hubert Rawizer, Forest Avenue; Mrs. J. W. Austin, Tenth Street; Mrs. R. M. McFarland and Mrs. W. N. Massengale, Smillie; Mrs. J. L. Rankin, O'Keefe; Mrs. Julian Harris, Calhoun; Mrs. Porter Langston, Spring Street; Mrs. J. A. Mahoney, Spring Street.

P.-T. A MEETINGS

The Parent-Teacher association of the James L. Key school will hold a daddies' meeting on Monday, May 11, at 7:30 p. m. Mr. Sutton will be speaker of the evening. A musical program has been arranged. A large attendance is urged. Refreshments.

The regular May meeting of the Fulton High Parent-Teacher association has been postponed to May 21, at 2:30 o'clock. Election of officers will be held, after which the domestic science department will have charge of the program and serve refreshments.

The regular monthly meeting of the executive board of Highland Parent-Teacher association will be held Wednesday afternoon, May 13, at 3:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. E. Betts, 160 Linwood avenue.

The pre-school circle of State Street school will hold its regular meeting on Thursday, May 14, at 3 p. m. in the kindergarten. Mrs. Alonzo Richardson will talk on "Religious Training in the Home." As this is a most vital factor in the lives of our children, Mrs. Richardson will bring a message filled with inspiration and helpful suggestions for all mothers.

The Commercial High Parent-Teacher association will hold its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon, May 12, at the school. This meeting will be of especial interest, as the "D" mothers and the executive officers are entertaining the seniors with an afternoon tea. The seniors' mothers are urged to be present. All others are invited.

The Parent-Teacher association of North Avenue Presbyterian school will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday, May 12, at 3 o'clock, in the auditorium of the High School building. New officers for the following year will be elected and a full attendance is desired.

Mr. Beck Gives Flag to School.

The influence of the citizenship committee of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council is being felt all over the state. Thursday, April 29, will long be remembered by the little town of Hollywood near Tallulah Falls. J. Frank Beck, of Atlanta, has large peach and apple orchards at Hollywood and he offered the Hollywood school a large flag whenever they had the pole ready, so the 29th found the school and Mr. Beck prepared, he having taken up Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, P.-T. A. council chairman to make an address on "Our Flag and Citizenship." She pronounced it a most enthusiastic success, and the children as usual very fine in their part of the program and the parents most appreciative as they were present in large numbers.

Mrs. Mellichamp will be pleased to aid any school in the state if some generous-hearted citizen gives the flag.

Pryor Street P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

The Pryor Street P.-T. A. held its regular monthly meeting Thursday, May 7, in the school auditorium, this being the regular time of election of officers. An outside speaker on this occasion was omitted.

Miss Martha Coyne's grade gave a song about "Mother." The two troops of Campfire Girls gave a short program, after which the count of mothers was taken. Miss Coyne won the $2 prize for having the largest percentage of mothers present, while Miss Morris won the tickets to the picture show for having the largest number of mothers present. The president made a short report of the year's work. All standing committees and grade chairmen gave fine reports of the work done during the year. The report from the nominating committee was read and adopted unanimously. The following officers were elected to serve for the year 1925-26: Mrs. W. J. Thebaut, president; Mrs. R. L. Johnson, vice president; Miss Pauline Corley, treasurer; Mrs. Glover, secretary, and Mrs. Garvin, corresponding secretary.

Silver Tea at Georgia Avenue School.

There will be a silver tea held at Georgia Avenue school for the benefit of the school on Wednesday, May 13, from 3 to 6 o'clock. A candy pulling will be held the same afternoon for the children.

Oakland City P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

The Oakland City P.-T. A. held its regular meeting May 6, Mrs. T. M. Johnson, president, in the chair. Preceding the meeting, Mrs. Johnson entertained the teachers at a beautiful luncheon in her home. She was given a vote of thanks by the association for a year of good fellowship, and regret was expressed that other duties prevented her serving a second term.

The new officers elected for the following years are: Mrs. Roscoe C. Irwin, president; Mrs. W. J. Whited, vice president; Mrs. H. D. Shadden, secretary; Mrs. A. J. McClure, treasurer.

Miss Agnes Coleman's pupils entertained the mothers and daddies with a relay race. Miss Estelle Phillips' pupils staged a dodge ball contest. Miss Fanny Spahr, principal, rendered a beautiful piano solo. Miss Walter Dallis' pupils sang.

After the routine business, the association pledged Mrs. Erwin and her officers full cooperation for the new year.

Miss Ostott Weds Frederick L. Ewing.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Ostott, of Miami, Fla., announce the marriage of their daughter, Marilla Abba, to Frederick L. Ewing, formerly of Augusta, now of Miami, which took place on the evening of May 5 at the White Temple, Miami, Fla.

Georgia Ave. P.-T. A. Holds Final Meeting And Elects Officers

The last meeting of the Georgia Avenue Parent-Teacher association was held in the school auditorium Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. W. C. Slate, the retiring president, presiding. The meeting was unusually well attended, one class, Miss Oakes second grade, having 100 per cent mothers with dues paid, thus winning both the attendance prizes and also the $5 which had been offered for the first class getting 100 per cent mothers. Mrs. Bracewell did especially fine work in getting this splendid record for the second grade.

The treasurer, Mrs. Gilmer, made her yearly report, showing $215.81 handled during the year, $195.35 of this amount being spent and $20.46 in the treasury.

Mrs. Norton, of the Better Films committee, gave a good report and announced that Saturday would be Mothers' day at the Howard and tickets given to mothers.

Mrs. Fontaine and Miss Lauer gave an enthusiastic report of the last meeting of the Central Citizenship committee and luncheon. There were many good speeches. Congressman Upshaw and other distinguished visitors were present. Miss Lauer made a special appeal that all mothers register and vote.

Miss Lauer announced that a Better Babies show would be held at the school on May 20. Tickets will be issued at the school for kindergarten and first grade children after May 9.

The paper sale committee reported $9.58 made on the last paper sale.

It was decided to have a candy pulling and silver tea at the school on Wednesday, May 13, for the benefit of the school.

Pryor street and Crew street schools had donated $5 each to the special class and votes of thanks are to be sent to them.

Mrs. Robinson gave a report of her interesting trip to the State P.-T. A. meeting in Macon.

The nominating committee reported the following officers nominated for the coming year: President, Mrs. Robinson; vice president, Mrs. Fontaine; secretary, Mrs. Cumbea; treasurer, Mrs. Gilmer.

Mrs. Robinson, who has been the able and efficient chairman of the welfare work in the school this year accepted the nomination in an earnest speech.

Mrs. W. C. Slate in a very graceful speech thanked the P.-T. A. for its cooperation and help during the two years which she has served its interests as its president. A rising vote of thanks was given the retiring officers.

A program was given by the children of the fourth grade and enjoyed by all. After the meeting tea was served by Mrs. Griggs.

Central School P.-T. A. Holds Final Meeting.

Central School P.-T. A. held the last meeting of the school year Friday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. A. G. McDuffie, in the chair.

It was decided to use the last $2 awarded sixth grade A for largest attendance of mothers at P.-T. A. meetings, for some form of entertainment, as a mark of reward.

This grade has captured the $1 every month this year, and deserves much credit for the enthusiasm with which the pupils have worked to enlarge the attendance.

An attractive program was put on by sixth grade A, which consisted of: Reading, Mary Manning; harp solo, Hamilton Hornsby; song by grade, "America the Beautiful"; "The Origin and Meaning of Mother's Day," Robert Joiner; song, "Mother," grade A.

An interesting report of the state P.-T. A. convention at Macon was given by Mrs. O. S. Steele.

A nominating committee was appointed to select officers for the coming year. This was followed by words of appreciation for cooperation of the officers and teachers during the past year by the retiring president.

After adjournment a social hour was enjoyed and lunch was served by the social committee.

Decatur Club To Sponsor Musicale.

A musicale will be given by the Leffingwell orchestra under the auspices of the Decatur Woman's club at the DeKalb county courthouse, Monday, May 18, at 8 o'clock.

The public is cordially invited to attend. No admission will be charged.

Westminster P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

The Westminster Presbyterian Church Parent-Teacher association met Wednesday afternoon at the church, the president, Mrs. R. M. McFarland, presiding.

The devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Henry Sharp. Mrs. H. W. Burkland, the secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting. She brought a message from council meeting, stating that the goal of every church parent-teacher association was the spiritual development of the child.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. R. M. McFarland, president; Mrs. Rhea Pearce, vice president; Mrs. H. W. Burkland, secretary, and Mrs. Tidwell, treasurer.

The committees appointed were: Program, Mrs. W. N. Massengale, Mrs. E. C. Kent, Mrs. R. S. Van Fleet; social, Mrs. E. H. Elrod, Mrs. Ward Chaplain, Mrs. Price; membership, Mrs. N. E. Martin, Mrs. L. B. Coley, Mrs. G. C. O'Dell, Mrs. Henry Sharp, Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. John Dabney; press chairman, Mrs. W. N. Massengale; telephone chairman, Miss Berta Sayre; nursery committee, Mrs. Eugene Johnson, Mrs. Henry Pearce.

Westminster Parent-Teacher association is maintaining a nursery on Sundays, so that parents with small children may attend church. It is proving successful.

Mrs. George White, the speaker of the afternoon, used as her subject, "Foundation Stones of Character Building." In an impressive manner she told the parent how to train and develop the child. She stated that a better category than honesty, truth and justice, could not be found for character building.

The adult department had the largest percentage of parents present and was awarded the banner.

Mrs. R. S. Van Fleet, a talented musician, gave several piano solos.

After the business meeting a social half-hour was enjoyed.

Mothers Urged To Observe Health Week.

Mrs. T. E. Suttles, chairman of pre-school age circle of Peeples Street school urges all the mothers of her circle to observe health week by attending the lectures in Rich's tea room each afternoon next week. The best doctors in Atlanta will give lectures which are of vital interest to all mothers with young children. Mrs. Suttles has sent literature on the subjects to 50 mothers of Peeples Street school.

W. C. T. U. Is Organized Mother Love

M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

"I thank God for my mother as for no other gift of His bestowing," these words of Frances Willard, founder of the world Woman's Christian Temperance union, expresses the thought uppermost in our hearts on this, the 1925 Mothers' day.

Again she said: "Let us glorify the vocation of motherhood above all others, for the only queen that shall survive is the mother on her rocking-chair throne."

"The mission of the white ribbon women is to organize the motherhood of the world for the peace, the purity, the protection and exaltation of the homes."

"The mother-nature patiently preoccupied in deeds of love for those about her, has been slowest of all to reflect on her own innate powers, and has not until recently so much as dreamed of the resistless force of the world's aggregated motherhood."

"Organized motherhood is a force, the strongest, the most deeply rooted the most steadily enduring, that this planet knows."

Mother-hearted women, "those who by their gifts of brain and heart were formed to be in some sweet sense mothers to those outside their homes, may bring to the wider ministries of life's long afternoon the culture of soul which they acquired in the ministries of the cradle and the fireside."

"Mother-love works magic for humanity, but organized mother-love works miracles. Mother-hearted women are called to be the saviors of the race."

The above quotations, selected from the writings of Frances Willard, are descriptive of the W. C. T. U. and its valuation and love for mothers from the beginning of the organization.

Organized Mother Love Needed.

The world is honoring mothers today and giving thanks to God for the gracious gift of good mothers. The world needs the influence of mothers as never before.

Frances Willard named the W. C. T. U. "Organized Mother Love"—organized to protect and safeguard the childhood of the nation; organized to create sentiment for the complete extinction of the liquor traffic; organized to "hold fast America" to the benign prohibition law.

The children of the nation are menaced by evil influences which are abroad, teaching them disobedience to constituted law, making them rebellious to the authority of the home and of the government. The mothers of the nation must meet this situation by their combined efforts and determination to save their children from destruction.

The 18th amendment is the greatest blessing to childhood the world has ever known, and we must protect it from its foes. The prohibition law is not perfectly enforced, but neither is the law against murder, forgery, theft and other crimes. But the prohibition law is as well and, in most cases, better enforced than other criminal laws.

When the individual citizen declares that all laws shall be enforced they will be enforced, for the individual citizen is the government of the state and nation.

Attacks are constantly being made upon the prohibition laws and those charged with their enforcement, and we as good citizens must rise to their defense.

An Invitation to Mothers.

The W. C. T. U. has a record of 50 years of service for humanity and has stood for the protection of home and country. It stands there today and invites you, mothers, to take your stand with it upon the battle line. The W. C. T. U. needs your presence, needs your influence, needs your votes, needs your prayers and you mothers need the W. C. T. U. to meet a dangerous crisis in our nation's history. Shall the loyal, patriotic citizens rule our land or shall the forces of evil again control? This is a vital question and one which each one of us must answer.

There is a place in the W. C. T. U. exactly fitted for good mothers, no matter how capable, cultured and accomplished, or what your limitations may be—for

The gray-haired mother, whose successful sons and happy daughters bring flowers and love—

The young girl-wife, with her first baby in her arms—

The mother of seven, struggling against poverty and fear and want, but keeping the six patched and mended and in school and the baby clean—

The mother in the shack on the plains in the homestead on the range, in the mountains far from church or neighbors, who becomes church and neighbors and civilization to her children—

The average mother of the average family with the average amount of bills and worries over Johnny's measles and Mary's beaus—

Mothers—

Mothers of the home, the church, the school, we invite you today to join the Woman's Christian Temperance union, as an active member. With faith in each other and faith in God, we will declare as we did in the days of the world war—"Let's finish the job"—and in the Master's name it will be done.

Mothers! God bless them.

Interesting Activities Are Scheduled for Decatur Club

The Decatur Woman's club will meet Friday afternoon, May 15, at 3 o'clock at the Sunday School building of the Decatur Presbyterian church. Mrs. Roy Jones, president, will preside over the business session of the club, after which a musical program has been arranged by the chairmen for the afternoon, Mrs. W. J. Rountree and Mrs. W. N. Woodbury.

Two selections on the harp will be rendered by Miss Mary Minge, a pupil of Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs. The selections to be given will be "The Wooden Shoe Dance" and "In Hanging Gardens." A dialogue will be given by two expression pupils of Agnes Scott. After the program, punch will be served by the chairmen, Mrs. Woodbury and Mrs. Rountree, and a committee of ladies who will assist them. This committee consists of Mrs. T. M. Griffin, Mrs. J. M. Royall, Mrs. A. B. Burrus, Mrs. T. A. McArthur, Mrs. H. S. Cordes, Mrs. T. A. Johnston, Mrs. R. H. Arnold, Mrs. W. L. Hetner, Mrs. J. R. McCain, Mrs. C. D. Honker, Mrs. Homer George, Mrs. J. E. Scofield, Mrs. W. H. S. Hamilton, Mrs. A. T. Mattison, Mrs. W. L. Bryant.

The regular monthly meeting of the Garden Club Division will occur at the home of Mrs. Charles D. McKinney on South Candler street at 3 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, May 12. Two talks which will be of great interest to those interested in growth of flowers will be made by Mrs. Oscar Palmour, of College Park, and A. M. Dunn. Mr. Dunn will discuss culture of the rose. Mrs. J. M. Royall, chairman of the Garden Club Division, will preside over the meeting.

A flower show given under the direction of the American Rose association, and sponsored by the Decatur Woman's club will be given by the Decatur Woman's club, May 23, at the Metz building, Decatur. The Decatur club expects to make this flower show an annual affair, and much interest is being manifested in the coming event. It is desired that flower exhibits be sent from all parts of the state. A committee will receive the flowers and will display them in an artistic manner. The flowers should be sent to either Mrs. Roy G. Jones, president of the Decatur Woman's club, or Mrs. J. M. Royall, chairman of the Garden Division, Metz building, Decatur, by 10 o'clock, Saturday morning, May 23.

A musical program has been arranged by the chairman of music, Mrs. E. B. Branch, which will be rendered during the afternoon and at night. Miss Keitha Paxton and Miss Mary Minge Moncure, pupils of Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, will give a harp duet, and will render other selections during the afternoon and evening. Miss Moncure will render "In the Time of Roses," also "Melody," in the afternoon. Miss Paxton will give a solo, "To Spring," and Miss Moncure will play "The Awakening of Spring" during the evening.

Punch will be served in the afternoon by a committee consisting of Mrs. J. M. Royall, Mrs. Roy Jones, Mrs. Charlie Weekes, Mrs. W. E. Bobo, and Mrs. T. R. Crown. Those receiving in the afternoon will be Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Jr., Mrs. A. D. Busch, Mrs. R. D. Osterhout, Mrs. G. H. Stevenson, Mrs. D. P. McGeachy, Mrs. W. A. Ozmer, Mrs. W. H. S. Hamilton, Mrs. Fred McDonald, Mrs. Charles D. McKinney, Mrs. A. M. Dunn, Mrs. John Russell, Mrs. Ben Burgress, Mrs. E. B. Branch, Mrs. J. A. Campbell, Mrs. B. B. Lewis.

Those serving punch in the evening will be Mrs. R. C. Henderson, Mrs. Hugh Trotti, Mrs. E. D. Sutton, Miss Nell Candler.

The evening reception committee consists of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones, Mr. and Mrs. William Alden, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Lawhon, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hall, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hoffman, Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Royall, Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Young, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Branch, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Frank, Mr. and Mrs. John Russell, Mr. and Mrs. William Schley Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Byrd, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Dunn and others.

An admission of twenty-five cents will be charged. Everybody is invited to be present.

Social News From N. A. P. S.

National Music wee has been fittingly and interestingly observed in the North Avenue Presbyterian school.

On Monday morning Mrs. Mabelle S. Wall, head of the department of music, gave a delightful lecture before the Junior High school on the orchestral instruments, illustrating each from a series of records. On Tuesday two classes had the privilege of the presence of Professor Wesley Peacock, who conducted with them the Seashore music test. On Friday afternoon at assembly, Mrs. Wall arranged a beautiful concert, Miss Minna Hecker, soloist; Alton O'Stein, accompanist, and Miss Ruth Dabney Smith, violinist.

The senior class was entertained by the high school faculty on Tuesday afternoon with a picnic at the Hatcher farm.

The Pi Sigma Kappa met on Monday at the home of Evelyn Williamson.

On Thursday afternoon the Cecilians held their last business meeting of the year at the home of Louise Huddleston. The officers chosen were: President, Louise Huddleston; vice president, Flora May Tumlin, secretary, Netta Russell; treasurer, Cleone Willingham.

The Junior High school was represented at the council this week by Mrs. Lester and Mary Philips Orme.

Mrs. S. L. Leavy Takes Charge

To the D. A. R. of Georgia: I will have charge of this column during the summer months, in the absence from the state of Mrs. Knox, and bespeak the continued helpful cooperation of chapter regents and reporters, state officers and chairmen, which has been accorded the state editor. Only in this way can the column remain at its present high standard, and be of the greatest service to the D. A. R. of the state.

Chapter Reports

Mrs. Frank Jackson and Miss Aline Jackson were joint hostesses at the April meeting of Etowah chapter, of Cartersville, when Mrs. Colquitt Finley, regent, presided. The meeting was opened by singing America, and repeating the Lord's prayer, in concert. A nominating committee was appointed at this time, to bring in a slate for new officers, to be voted upon at the May meeting.

A message from the president-general was read, and a paper describing the furnishings of Continental hall, at Washington, was presented. A report of the state conference was also made at this time, and a resume of the Philippine scholarship fund given. The May meeting will be devoted to the discussion of the excavating work contemplated on the famous Etowah mounds, located near Cartersville.

GREENSBORO, GA.

Memorial day was appropriately observed by Greensboro U. D. C. The services were held at the Presbyterian church. The church was beautifully decorated in red and white flowers. The decorations were in charge of Mrs. Eudora Hall. Mrs. E. H. Armor was in charge of the music. Colonel J. G. Faust delivered the address. His remarks were very appropriate. He is widely known as an orator of great distinction. The president of the Miles Lewis chapter, Mrs. C. E. Monfort, presided in an able manner.

Genealogical Report

The various duties incumbent upon me throughout this past year have been all absorbing and most sacred. It has not been possible for me to respond to the kind request of the state editor, Mrs. Mell Knox, for an article until this present time.

I have chosen to write about an inspiration of Mrs. Reeves Brown, regent of the Mary Hammond Washington chapter, which resulted in the founding of the genealogical department of the Washington Memorial library by this chapter.

This splendid undertaking was launched last spring and the accomplishment of a committee composed of Mrs. Reeves Brown, chairman; Mrs. J. Ross Bowdre, Mrs. J. S. Sharp and Mrs. T. H. Boone is marvelous.

Mrs. Brown and the chapter feel that there are few if any nobler or more patriotic avenues through which the D. A. R. function than this of genealogy—the preservation of posterity's birthright—and much painstaking research has been made to the end that a more select collection of recognized genealogical authorities is not easily to be found. In point I cite the titles of only a few in state groups:

Meades' Old Churches and Families of Virginia; McCallister's Virginia Militia; Hotten's List of Emigrants to America, 1600-1700; Heitman's Historical Register; Greer's Early Virginia Emigrants, 1623-1666; Saffel's Record Revolutionary Soldiers; Chalkley's Record Augusta County, Virginia; Boogher's Gleanings of Virginia History; Hayden's Virginia Genealogies; Eckenrodes' List of Virginia Revolutionary Soldiers; Gilmer's Georgians; Compilation of State Records of Georgia (35 vols.); Smith's History of Georgia; White's Historical Collections; White's Statistics; Knight's Roster of Revolutionary Soldiers of Georgia; Stevens' History of Georgia (1st vol.); Habersham's Historical Collections (3 vols.); State Records of North Carolina (7 vols.); History of Lost State of Franklin (Tennessee); South Carolina Stub Indents to Revolutionary Claims (5 vols.); Archives of Maryland (5 vols.); Notable Southern Families (2 vols.); Journal of American History (17 vols.); Lineage Books D. A. R. (72 vols.)

Mary Baldwin Alumnae To Meet.

There will be a conference of alumnae and former students of Mary Baldwin college (Staunton, Va.) at the Biltmore hotel, May 18, at 4:40 o'clock.

Mrs. Benton McMillin, of Nashville, Tenn., will address the group. Mrs. J. T. Stephenson, of Atlanta, is chairman of this district of former students, which includes the states of Georgia and Florida. There will be representatives of every part of this district in additiou to local alumnae.

Special interest centers about the famous school for women, since it is located in the little Virginia city where Woodrow Wilson was born, and the church where he was baptized and where his father preached, is now the chapel of the grounds of old Mary Baldwin seminary, now Mary Baldwin college.

"PRISON REFORM" ADVOCATED BY ATLANTA WOMAN'S CLUB

Judge Patterson Will Address Woman's Club Members May 11

"Prison Reform" will be the subject of the meeting at the Atlanta Woman's club, Monday afternoon, when Judge T. E. Patterson, member of the State Prison commission, will address the members on this topic at the regular semi-monthly session.

The Atlanta Woman's club, with Mrs. Norman Sharp as president, launched a movement during the early part of the club year, to bring about better prison conditions in Georgia, by having Nelson M. Shipp, associate editor of the Macon Telegraph, and a student on the subject of prison reform, to address the club. Mr. Shipp gave the club members much insight to the conditions which have existed in Georgia for many years and offered many splendid suggestions as how these conditions might be remedied.

Since the appearance of Mr. Shipp before the club, Mrs. Sharp with an able committee, has conferred repeatedly with some of the highest authorities in the state, who are much interested in this movement and among others Judge Patterson, of the prison commission, has shown a splendid willingness to assist in this work and has also offered some valuable suggestions.

Will Engage Psychiatrist.

A psychiatrist, whose only duty will be to examine the prisoners of the state and ascertain their mental conditions, is suggested as one of the needed requirements for prison reform in Georgia, and the Atlanta Woman's club will use every effort to have this presented to the legislature during its summer session, as a part of their program for improved conditions.

The Woman's club has also been in correspondence with some of the authorities in other states where better prison conditions exist and is prepared to go about this work with the very best information in hand. Many letter have been received, in which the club was commended for its stand for better prison conditions, and editorials have appeared in other cities with favorable comments on the work.

Judge Patterson will speak on the prison work in Georgia and tell what is most needed to make this one of the most up-to-date states in the Union, in prison regulations and improved conditions. There are good men in office, according to Mr. Shipp, but it is hard to get the best results, when the system under which the men are working is not what it should be. Following Judge Patterson's address the Woman's club will launch a very active campaign for better prison conditions in Georgia and bespeaks the cooperation of every interested citizen of the state who would like to see Georgia take a progressive stand in the much-needed results of prison reform.

Other Features.

Other interesting features to be presented at the Woman's club Monday afternoon, will be a talk on "Behind the Scenes," by Miss Nora Stirling, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Stirling of this city. Miss Stirling has spent several years in New York, Chicago and other northern cities, where she played in stock, and she has just finished a very successful year as a member of the cast in the popular play, "Minnicks," by Edna Ferber, which ran in Chicago for quite a season and was produced by a New York company. Miss Stirling is visiting Atlanta for several weeks, after which time she will return to New York, where she will again take up her profession in that city.

Orchestral music will be heard during the program at the club and other interesting features will be introduced. A beautiful memorial hour will be conducted by Mrs. J. M. Manry, honoring the memory of those members who have died during the past year. Mrs. W. O. Chears will have charge of the music and Dr. Warren Moseley Seay, pastor of the West End Baptist church, will make a brief address and offer the invocation.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, urges all members of the club to attend this meeting and if in arrears with dues, please find Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, treasurer of the club, who will be glad to receive dues and issue membership cards for the coming year. Election of officers will also take place at this meeting and it is the desire of the president that all members be present on this account also, as well as to hear the splendid program which has been arranged by the committee.

Interesting Playlet Will Be Presented at Woman's Club

The delightful play entitled "Anne What's-Her-Name," which will be given by the Dramatic club of the J. W. Mozley School for Girls at the Atlanta Woman's club Thursday evening, May 14, sponsored by the literature department of the club, with Mrs. W. F. Melton, chairman, promises to be an event of much pleasure and benefit for those presenting the play.

"Anne What's-Her-Name" is a comedy of mystery, built around a unique character bearing the name of "Tony Wheat" and who is a victim of circumstances, but whose ingenuity fully matches the many ludicrous situations in which he is placed. This amusing character is impersonated by Miss Alverda Thomas.

From the beginning of the play, the audience is held in suspense as to the identity of "Anne What's-Her-Name," when a delightful climax is reached, Anne's identity is assured, and Tony receives his reward.

The play will be directed by Miss Anne Bowie, teacher of dramatics at the Mozley School for Girls. The entire public is invited and the comedy will be presented in the auditorium of the Woman's club at 8:15 o'clock Thursday evening.

Other members of the cast are as follows: Misses Helen Bullard, Frances Fonville, Mildred Settle, Lucy Poe, Margaret Barton, Connie Underwood, Mamie Lucy McAdams, Margaret Allen, Rosalie Cohen, Evelyn Woodruff, Helen Bullard, Mabel Davis, Pearle Ballenger, Ruchie Ware and two little Whittles.

This entertainment closes a very successful year with the literature department of the club, with Mrs. Melton as the leader.

BANQUET HALL GROUP WILL MEET MONTHLY

The banquet hall insurance group, which is composed of the young matrons of the club, will hold a business meeting each month, after which time a delightful bridge-tea will be enjoyed by the members. These meetings will be held the third Friday of each month.

Mrs. U. T. Koch is chairman of the group and she has planned many enjoyable occasions for this committee of the club, which is especially capable of staging delightful social affairs. Mrs. N. O. Newman will assist Mrs. Koch, as co-chairman of the group.

The next meeting will be held May 15, with Mrs. Koch as hostess with five tables of bridge. Anyone wishing to unite with this committee may phone Mrs. Koch at Hemlock 4800, by May 13, in order that she may make tea reservations.

Following is a list of the members, with Mrs. Bonar White as secretary and treasurer: Mrs. N. O. Newman, Mrs. George Vardaman, Mrs. J. S. McCauley, Mrs. W. C. Stoddard, Mrs. Robert Klebold, Mrs. W. K. Wyant, Mrs. A. B. Buehl, Mrs. D. E. Tyler, Mrs. Barton Gause, Mrs. Capers Andrews, Mrs. Legare Davis, Mrs. Paul Turner, Miss Grace Freeman, Mrs. W. O. Lindholm, Mrs. W. B. Swint, Mrs. Turner Carson, Mrs. M. C. Case.

Miss Boyer Is Honored.

One of the delightful affairs given in honor of Miss Jane Boyer, a bride-elect of May, was the hosiery shower given by Mrs. Carlton Brooks on Thursday afternoon at her home in the Palmer apartments.

The living room, dining room, and sun parlor were beautifully decorated with large bowls and vases of ygelia, mountain laurel, and tiger lilies. A large bowl of Paul Neron roses filled the center of the bride's table.

Those present were Mrs. I. D. Clippenger, Mrs. W. E. Carnes, Mrs. L. L. Boyer, Mrs. R. C. Baker, Mrs. W. B. Cummings, Mrs. Willie Ragsdale, Mrs. J. D. Coleman, Mrs. Joseph E. Haley, Mrs. Annie Croft, Mrs. Parker Rand, Mrs. Nelson Brandt, Mrs. Marie Delgar, Miss Virginia Boyer, Mrs. William Fulks, Mrs. Henry A. Owens, Mrs. Zeb Blackwood and others.

HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT TO MEET ON MAY 13

The home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club will hold its regular meeting Wednesday afternoon at the clubhouse, after which time the members will accept an invitation to visit the plant of the Henard Mayonnaise company, on Whitehall street from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, chairman of the department, urges a full attendance, as very interesting contests will be held at the meeting and the prize will be awarded for the best essay written on "The Labor Saving Device in the Home." The prize is an exquisite painting of floral design, given for this purpose by the Binder's Art and Gift Shop.

The judges for the essays are Miss Mary Olive Whitehead, Miss Clara Lee Cone and Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club. The papers on this subject must be brought to the meeting and the judges will act at this time.

A discovery contest will be held, led by Mrs. George Roberts, and delicious cakes will be given for this prize, by the American Bakery company. The attendance prize will be awarded promptly at 3 o'clock, and is the gift of the Henard Mayonnaise company.

The hospitality chairman, Mrs. Ernest Covington, has been in Florida for sometime and the department welcomes her back at this meeting, when she will take up her duties again. Mrs. Carlisle requests the executive committee of the department to meet promptly at 2:30 o'clock in order that important business may be transacted before the regular meeting begins. She also urges the entire department to attend and enjoy the afternoon reception at the Henard plant, following the meeting.

MRS. MELTON IS HONORED BY CLUB MEMBERS

Fifty or more club members gathered Thursday afternoon to honor Mrs. W. F. Melton, the able leader of the literary department of the Atlanta Woman's club, and to the other officers of the club.

Brilliant toasts were offered the honor guest and Mrs. Melton, in her usual charming manner, responded with gracious words of appreciation. A beautiful china tea set was presented to Mrs. Melton by the department as a token of love and esteem held for her by the members. The presentation of the gift was made by Mrs. J. Hinton Clark, a loyal member of the study class.

Mrs J. E. Miller, who was largely responsible for the delightful affair, presided over the tea table and introduced each officer, who responded with good wishes for the honor guest. Many of the toasts were offered in delightful rhyme, while others were composed of well-chosen words, typical of the department members, who, with marked ability, proved their talent for composition. Mrs. C. V. Hohenstein recited her poem, which won the prize in the department contest.

Mrs. DeLos Hill, one of Atlanta's most gifted artists, delighted those present with several piano numbers, taking as her selections compositions from our own American composers, MacDowell and Carpenter. Mrs. W. A. Robertson, deliughtful reader and member of the study class, gave a dialect reading from the pen of Mrs. Walton Jones, of Dalton, Ga. She responded to an encore with a beautiful poem, by Mary Brett Whiteside.

Mrs. Wren McGuin, charming dramatic reader, gave an impersonation of an old southern mammy, as she reviewed the many songs she loved, which included "Old Black Joe," "Swanee River" and "Dixie Land," as sung by her "white folks," and saying, after an excerpt from each familiar air, "Dat's whut I call music." She responded to an enthusiastic audience, with a charming poem of life and love. Mrs. J. P. Womble read a beautiful poem of her own composition, which she stated would be dedicated to the honor guest of the occasion, Mrs. W. F. Melton.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, paid a great tribute to the splendid work of Mrs. Melton in the literature department of the club and expressed her great appreciation of the loyal support she had in this valued and talented leader.

The banquet hall presented a beautiful appearance, with the lovely appointed table centered with huge baskets of Hiawatha roses, crimson ramblers and other spring blossoms, forming a crescent around which the literature department mingled with guests and proved charming hostesss for a most enjoyable party which was given in the nature of a "home-coming" affair.

CLUB DAY TO BE OBSERVED ON WEDNESDAY

Atlanta Woman's Club Day will be observed at Better Homes, No. 2, 159 Pulliam street, Wednesday, May 13, when Mrs. John D. Evans, chairman of the American Citizenship department of the club, with members of her department, will entertain during the afternoon for all of the members of the club interested in this phase of work.

Members of the citizenship department will be expected to meet at the home at 11:30 o'clock in the morning, provided with a lunch, and at this time the regular monthly meeting of the department will be held. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the reception for the entire club will be given, with the officers as special guests. During the afternoon an attractive program will be given, featuring both Miss Evelyn Jackson's orchestra and the orchestra from Boys' High school. Other delightful numbers will be enjoyed.

There will be on exhibit at the home, beautiful articles of different kinds made by our newly naturalized citizens and many of these friends Evans has had charge of the Americanization division of the Atlanta Woman's club for some time and has become very familiar with the work and knows its most interesting features and takes this opportunity of inviting the other members of the club to become acquainted with the results accomplished through such activities.

Mrs. Evans is assisting in the Better Homes work, and at the same time is carrying on the splendid medium of home building instruction, for those friends who are not familiar with the customs of the American homes, and teaching them the art of beautifying that institution which stands for the best in all civilization. The home may be reached by taking the Washington street car, or Central avenue car down town.

Dance Announced At Woman's Club.

The regular weekly dance will be given Tuesday evening, May 12, from 9 to 12 o'clock, at the Atlanta Woman's club, sponsored by Ralph Ricuards.

All those having cards are cordially invited to attend. Admission will be by card only.

The dance at the Atlanta Woman's club Tuesday, May 12, will be the last dance given there for a period of three weeks during the commencement exercises at the Atlanta Woman's club.

For the three weeks beginning Tuesday, May 19, Mr. Richards will hold his regular weekly dances at the clubrooms of the Club de Vingt at Peachtree and Third streets.

Only those having cards to the regular weekly dance will be admitted.

Eleventh Ward Holds Festival.

The members of the eleventh ward League of Women Voters gave a May basket festival last Saturday afternoon. The John B. Gordon schoolhouse, in whose auditorium the festival was held, presented a gala sight in its array of lovely baskets, vying with each other in beauty, charm and arrangement. The judges were members of the Peachtree Garden club and it was no easy task to award the prizes. However, the following were winners: Class 1, Mrs. C. C. Orabill; class 2, Mrs. J. C. Stubbs; class 3, children's prize, Carl Hollingsworth; class 4, White Star Market; class 5, Mrs. W. B. Hunnicutt; class 6, Mrs. Mary Raoul; class 7, Woman's Benefit association of the Maccabees; class 8, Mrs. W. R. Hunnicutt.

In the afternoon a program was given, the feature number being the flower dances staged by three little pupils of the LaFontaine School of Dancing. They were Arbutus Jones, Katherine Bennett and Barbara Chasee. Miss Raoul made an intensely interesting report of the Richmond convention, and Mrs. J. P. Wall discussed plans for the ward's summer work.

The financial committee will meet Tuesday morning, 11 o'clock, at the Piedmont hotel. Members urged to attend as a review of the financial status of the league will be made and vital measures discussed.

Miss Elenore Raoul is in Fort Valley where she addressed the Fort Valley league Saturday. This league, although in its infancy like the new Peach county, promises to be one of the most active in the state. Under the able leadership of Mrs. A. A. Williams it is enthusiastic and zealous.

FLOWER LOVERS HOLDS REGULAR MEETING MAY 14

The flower lovers' division of the Atlanta Woman's club will hold its regular meeting Thursday morning, May 14, at 10:30 o'clock, in the palm room of the clubhouse, with Mrs. E. P. Crenshaw, chairman, presiding.

Miss Hattie Rainwater, superintendent of elementary science in the public schools of this city, will be the principal speaker of the occasion. Miss Rainwater has the pleasure of teaching the young folks the many interesting problems of gardening, planting of flowers and the life of birds, which subjects especially interest the members of the flower lovers' committee and will be most entertaining as well as instructive to each one attending.

Mrs. Crenshaw urges a full attendance of the department members and assures them of a very profitable meeting.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LVII., No. 331. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1925.

Brenau Notes Of Interest.

The Brenau Glee club made another appearance during the commencement season. Particularly charming was the Oriental pantomine done by Misses Jean Davis, Mary Frances Turner, Grace Addison and John Hendricks. The Foolishment quartette was delightful and many demands were made for the return of this number. The cast who so cleverly made the program a memorable one was Misses Olive Wills, Margaret McCartney, Frances Chandler Mary Frances Turner, Grace Addison, Kathleen Adams, Adelaide Stevas, Lorian Wakefield, Gladys Wakefield, Sibyl Strickland, Cecil Strickland, Geraldine Sledge, Minnie Lee Whitaker, Florence Woollard, Velma Hollingsworth, Marjorie Clark, Lucille Clark, Jean Davis, Elizabeth Teasley, Lucille Burt, Margaret Newman, Nina Jones, Frances Johnson, Dorothy King, Mildred Groff, Bonita Smith, Elizabeth Morris.

The symphony concert which was given on Sunday afternoon by the members of the Brenau orchestra under the direction of E. B. Michealis, reached its high-water mark of perfection in the splendid program presented. The soloists on this occasion were Miss Lillian Eubanks, soprano, and Miss Bertha Thalley, violinist. Another feature of the program was the chorus by students in the department of public school music and junior department. Playing in the orchestra were Mrs. H. J. Pearce, Misses Bertha Thalley, Dorothy McDonald, Dorothy Lawrence, Carrobelle Nelson, Mittie Steen, Anna Bryant, Vestina Smith, Ruth Andrews, Eugene Michaelis, Livingston Newton, Herbert Michaelis, Misses Sybil Strickland, Edre Hess, Alice Roland, Catherine McQuary, Marjory McElrath, Doris McDonald, Bessie Allen, Susan Mathis, Geraldine Ellis, Minnie Nelson, Dorothy Silversteen, Vera Doring, Dorothy Thurmand, Louise Jones, Myrtle Conoley, Bernice Gilley.

The vesper service of the Young Woman's Christian association was held on Sunday evening in the auditorium by the members of the senior class. Miss Marie Fry, as president of the class, presided and led the devotional. Miss Patsey Jane Williams, soprano, sang most beautifully, and Miss Catherine McQuary gave a violin solo. Several short talks were made by Misses Elizabeth Felts, Leah Beth Conner and Ruth McMurray.

The annual Phi Beta Signa address was delivered on Monday morning by Dr. W. F. Melton of Emory University. Dr. Melton gave an excellent address upon the "Appreciation of Literature," using some of the best known poems as illustrations of the thoughts he so splendidly presented.

Perhaps the greatest interest centers in the annual class day exercises which are held each year. The program was staged upon the campus using as the central setting the "Crow's Nest," which is the special property of the senior class. From the several buildings on the front campus the four classes marched, all dressed in white and carrying ivy and daisy chains. They were met at the "Crow's Nest," where the seniors assembled after the singing of the several class songs. The history, poem and prophecy of the senior class were read. The seniors were then presented with appropriate gifts by members of the junior class, after which the seniors willed to the juniors, their successors, all rights and privileges of the "Crow's Nest."

The climax of the muical events was reached on Monday evening in the excellent program given in the annual grand concert. The program included, besides the organ number by Miss Telford, piano numbers by Miss Mary Elizabeth Hearne, Miss Beverly Wood, Miss Catherine McQuary, Miss Alice Roland, Miss Annie Holt Terrell, Miss Bertha Thalley and Kelsey Hawington. Two vocal numbers were given by Miss Margaret Newman and Miss Lillian Eubanks, and a violin number by Miss Dorothy McDonald.

Among the recent visitors at college were: Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Adams and daughter, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. Nat A. Kent and Miss Zoe Kent, of Hammond, La.; Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Fry, Miss Audrey Jones and Mr. Fry, of Valdosta, Ga.; Miss Christine Trimble, College Park, Ga.; Mrs. Betty Andrews, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. L. E. Ridgeway, Jackson, Miss.; Miss Ruby Alexander and Miss Minnie Cochran, Greenville, S. C.; Miss Maurine Brown, Cleveland, Tenn.; Mrs. S. H. Adams and daughter, Monroe, N. C.; Miss Lucile Ethridge, Milner, Ga.; Mrs. P. H. Warren, Mrs. E. R. Mobley, Edgefield, S. C.; Miss Mary Lou Bell, Dothan, Ala.; Mrs. J. B. Jones, Mrs. Brown and Miss Maud Brown, Hartwell, Ga.; Mrs. F. M. McReynolds, Mosiner, Wis.; Miss Winifred Bird, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Ella P. Leonard, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Julia Traylor, Columbus, Ga.; Mrs. John White, Russellville, Ark.; Mrs. B. L. Steen and son, West Palm Beach, Fla.; Mrs. Walter Spaugh, Miss Elvie Crenshaw, Mrs. Oscar Palmer, Miss Janet and Elizabeth Spaugh, College Park, Ga.; Miss Virginia Cox, Jonesboro, Tenn.; Miss Evelyn Henery, Cope, S. C.; Miss Catherine Garwood, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Fannie Welsh, Brunswick, Ga.; Miss Ruth Sparks, Commerce, Ga.; Mrs. Morris M. Bryan, Jeffersonville, Ga.; Mrs. Ida Jones, Gater Valley, Miss.; Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Wood and daughter Frances, of Sandersville, Ga.; Mr. W. O. Berryhill, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

GEORGIA DIVISION

Daughters of the Confederacy

Mrs. Walter Grace, Macon, president; Mrs. Zebulon Walker, Canton, first vice president; Mrs. P. H. Jeter, Decatur, second vice president; Mrs. Leroy Hankinson, Augusta, third vice president; Miss Laura Fraser, Flemington, recording secretary; Mrs. J. A. Selden, Macon, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Tillman, Quitman, treasurer; Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, Madison, registrar; Miss Mildred Rutherford, Athens, historian; Miss Rebecca Black DuFont, Savannah, recorder of crosses; Mrs. E. M. McMaster, Waynesboro, auditor.

Honorary Presidents—Mrs. C. Helen Plane, Decatur; Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Atlanta; Miss Anna Carolina Benning, Columbus; Mrs. Ida Evans Eve, Augusta; Mrs. McCord Roberts, Atlanta, state editor.

Mrs. Grace To Represent Georgia

Mrs. Walter Grace, president of Georgia division, U. D. C., will attend the biennial congress of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America as Georgia representative, this congress being held in Washington, D. C., May 12 to 15. Meetings of the Colonial Dames are occasions of marked social as well as patriotic interest, the membership of this organization being probably the most rigidly guarded of any organization and each member tracing ancestry direct to an officer in the revolutionary army of America. As president of the Georgia division, U. D. C., Mrs. Grace will be a distinguished guest as well as a delegate at the meeting, and will attend the presidents' dinner on the evning of May 11, the opening social occasion of the congress. President and Mrs. Coolidge will entertain the Colonial Dames and a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon will be of peculiar interest to the delegates. Following the congress, Mrs. Grace will be honor guest of a meeting of the U. D. C. chapter of Pittsburg, Pa.

Sidney Lanier chapter, Macon, requests publication of the following resolution, passed enthusiastically by the chapter:

Whereas, we the members of the Sidney Lanier chapter have noted with pride, the lovalty of the state president, Mrs. Walter J. Grace, to all Confederate ideals, have remarked her untiring efforts through the years to bring about the indorsement by

Therefore, Be it resolved, That we do hereby express approval of her letter to U. D. C. under date April 20, 1925, requesting Georgia chapters of U. D. C. to hold on time deposit all Stone Mountain funds and to refrain from participation in the distribution of the memorial coin until the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association shall correct its commercial and localized aspect and shall become representative of the whole south

The resolution was presented by Mrs. T. O. Chesney and Mrs. Walter Lamar, past presidents, Sidney Lanier chapter, and Mrs. John A. Selden, corresponding secretary of Georgia division and vice president of Sidney Lanier chapter.

Other recent activities of the Sidney Lanier chapter include presentation of the United States flag to Wesleyan and an unusual Memorial day program at the Rialto theater. A marked feature of this program was a moving picture "Dixie," from the Yale Historical picture series. Mrs. Grace gave the address of welcome on this occasion and this was followed by a history of the Confederate flag given by four World war veterans in uniform. Four flags were shown by them and a brief account of each given. The first flag was composed of three stripes, two of red and one of white with a blue rectangle in the corner which held thirteen stars. The second flag was the battle flag of the Confederacy, designed originally by the Misses Cory, of Baltimore, and familiar to all Daughters as the red flag with cross of blue and thirteen white stars. "The stainless banner of the Confederacy," the white navy flag with a tiny battle flag in the corner, came next. The fourth flag was of white with a small battle flag in the corner and a wide band of red on the outer edge, and the fifth was the loved "Bonnie Blue Flag" with the single star. While the color bearers grouped themselves around Mrs. Grace after giving the history of each flag, the audience stoon and sang "The Bonnie Blue Flag." The moving picture of "Dixie" followed this stirring beginning and the program was concluded with a tableau representing the unveiling of the Confederate monument in Macon on October 29, 1879, in which participated the sons and daughters of those splendid citizens of Macon who brought about the erection of the monument.

An eloquent address from Mrs. Walter D. Lamar marked the presentation by the U. D. C. of the flag to Wesleyan, and it is the hope of the state editor to publish this address in full in the official column at an early date. Mrs. Lamar is also the author of a beautiful tribute to Mrs. Helen Plane at the request of the Sidney Lanier chapter, and this, too, the editor plans to give in full, shortly, to the readers of this column.

A special resolution passed at the regular meeting of Sidney Lanier chapter on May 6 declared that, "Whereas, The body of Father Hubert, S. J., so long buried at St. Stanislaus, Macon, has been recently (owing to destruction of said college by fire) reinterred at Spring Hill, Alabama, and whereas, the Sidney Lanier chapter has for years, on Memorial day, decorated the grave of Father Hubert in recognition of his devoted services to the Confederacy; Therefore, be it resolved, That the president of this chapter be requested to confer with the president of the chapter nearest to the spot where Father Hubert is now buried, asking that this loving tribute to his memory be kept up by such chapter."

Mrs. Andrews Hostess To Fulton Chapter U.D.C.

Mrs. Grady Andrews entertained Fulton Chapter U. D. C., on Tuesday afternoon at her home on Lucile avenue. A short business session was held, Mrs. J. W. Hollingsworth, presiding. Donations were made to the building fund of the Old Ladies' home and to Miss Millie Rutherford's historian fund.

Mrs. Leila Smith, who has been in Florida all winter, sent a substantial donation to the chapter.

After the communications were read Miss Margaret Thompson rendered several piano solos, and Mrs. J. L. Jepson won the prize in a contest.

The house was decorated with pink roses and garden flowers. In the dining room, where tea was served, there were baskets of roses and singing canaries.

Among those present were Misses Cecile Brownlee, Lillie Weaver and Charlotte Hazelton, Mesdames C. L. Anderson, J. W. Hollingsworth, J. L. Catchings, Jr., J. W. Kendley, E. B. Williams, E. M. Miller, G. L. Elliott, Mary F. Flemister, S. L. Palmer, J. E. Nabell, R. L. Williams, Jr., L. L. Wilson, J. L. Jepson, W. W. Gordy, B. H. Robertson, J. B. Phillips, W. E. Lomax, Dr. C. L. Moore, George W. Wells and B. F. King. Next month Mrs. W. M. Gordy will entertain the chapter at her home on Clebourne terrace.

Cooking School at Inman Park School.

Beginning Monday, May 18 and continuing to May 22, Mrs. Stanfield will conduct a cooking school at the Inman Park Presbyterian church, corner Edgewood avenue and Druid circle.

The admission will be $1 for the entire course, or 25 cents for a single lesson.

There will be many new and interesting points in cookery brought out. All friends are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Wynn To Have House Party.

Mr. and Mrs. James O. Wynn will entertain at a family house party during the coming week at their home on Peachtree circle. The guests will include the following members of Mrs. Wynn's family: Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Evans, Chicago; Mrs. Eliza Evans Moore, Aberdeen, Miss, and Mr. and Mrs. James E. Evans, of Sunny Side plantation, Muldon, Miss. On Wednesday evening, May 13, Mr. and Mrs. Wynn will entertain at a buffet supper, the guests including members of the family connection, who are: Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, Miss Ann Wynn Fleming, Miss Miriam Fleming, Miss Adelaide Fleming, Captain and Mrs. C. A. Wynn, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Pegram, Mr. and Mrs. De Sales Harrison, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Scott, Miss Josephine Scott, Miss Mary Wyatt Scott, Francis Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Kendrick Scott and Mr. and Mrs. Denny R. Peteet.

Mrs. Marshall Heads Modern Topics Club.

Mrs. W. D. Marshall, 236 Peeples street, was elected president of the Modern Topics club last Wednesday morning, when the club met at the home of Mrs. J. C. Oliver on North Moreland avenue.

The club is to have a picnic soon, before disbanding for the summer.

Mrs. Moore To Appear In Y. W. C. A. Program.

Mrs. William Whitfield Moore will have charge of the regular Tuesday evening program of the League of Business Women of the Y. W. C. A. on Tuesday, May 12, at the "Y" headquarters, 19 W. Baker street. Mrs. Moore is a reader of great charm and ability and will present one of her most finished and artistic numbers, "The Tents of the Arabs," a two-act play by Lora Dunsany.

Miss Myrick Weds Ezra E. Rozier.

Jeffersonvill, Ga., May 9.—A wedding of interest to relatives and a wide circle of friends was that of Miss Mary Ruth Myrick, of Bullards, Ga., to Ezra Eugene Rozier, of Jeffersonville. The wedding was solemnized Sunday, April 26, at the Cool Springs church, near Danville.

Pupils Will Give Piano Recital.

The following students from Miss Eda E. Bartholomew's class will be heard in recital Thursday evening, May 14, at 8 o'clock, in the studio, Westminster Presbyterian church, Ponce de Leon avenue and North boulevard: Mary Van Hoose, Matilda Tisinger, Jane Pickens, Clara Morrison, Carolyn Saunders, Carolyn Duncan, Catherine Norcross, Dorothy Jean Alexander, Margaret Selman, Martha Brown, Eleanor Werner, Elizabeth Werner, Eva Glore, Harry Glore. Those who are interested are extended a cordial invitation to attend.

State Woman's College News.

Valdosta, Ga., May 9.—On Friday evening Dr. Powell, of the Georgia State Woman's college, delivered a commencement address at the graduating exercises of the Hahira High school. He emphasized the necessity for better school facilities throughout the state, generally backing the program recently announced by the Georgia Educational association.

On Monday evening the ninth grade of the high school department of the Georgia State Woman's college entertained the eighth grade with a swimming party and picnic at Long pond.

On Wednesday afternoon the tenth grade gave a picnic and swimming party to the ninth grade.

For one of their problems the advanced cooking class gave a formal dinner of seven courses on Monday evening. Miss Katherine Abernathy acted as hostess. Covers were laid for seven. The guests included Dr. and Mrs. Richard Powell, Miss Annie Powe Hopper, Miss Helen Shibley, Mrs. William West and Mrs. A. J. Strickland. The dinner was served in the class dining room by Misses Campbell, Patten, Cubbedge, Bradley, Zetterower, Bray, Royal and Larsen.

Atlanta Girls On The Screen.

A slow motion picture, the acme of rhythm and poetry in dancing, featuring Miss Gertrude Kelly, Miss Frederica Patterson, Miss Ernestine Hirsch and Miss Lucy Mower, Potter Spiker pupils, will be shown on the screen at the Metropolitan theater early this week. These exquisite dancers were photographed in the beautiful sunken gardens of "Woodhaven," the Pace's Ferry home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, by Tracy Mathewson, of the Fox News. They will take part in the benefit for the Tallulah Falls school at the Woman's club Wednesday evening and give some idea of the beauty of the production.

West End Baptist Woman's League Meeting

The Business Woman's League of the West End Baptist Church will meet Thursday night, May 14, at 6 o'clock at the church, instead of Sunday afternoon.

Supper will be served by a committee from the Woman's Auxiliary and all business women of the church are most earnestly urged to attend and help in the work of the league.

Girls' High Alumnae Will Give Reception May 15 at School

An interesting event of Friday, May 15, will be the tea at which the Alumnae of the Girls' High school will entertain from 4 to 6. The reception will take place at the new school on Rosalia street. The Alumnae anticipates a large gathering of its members and friends, as at this time, an opportunity to inspect the new school, will be provided.

During the course of the afternoon the election to ascertain who will receive the scholarships to Agnes Scott, offered by the Alumnae, will be held, each member of the Alumnae being eligible to vote, upon payment of $1, her annual dues. The girls who have announced their candidacies for the scholarship, and who have been found eligible, are Sara Douglas, Mary Lou Hoyt and Virginia Branch.

Among those invited to the tea are all of the past students of the Girls' High school, the senior class, the past presidents of the alumnae and the board of education. Music will be furnished by the Girls' High School Mandolin club and the Boys' High orchestra.

The new Girls' High school can be reached by taking the East Fair street to Grant Park car and getting off at Rosalia street, and in an automobile, by coming out South Boulevard to Rosalia. It is urged that all members and past graduates be present.

The officers of the Girls' High alumnae are Mrs. Charles T. Pottinger, president; Miss Mattie Slaton, vice president; Mrs. William F. Slaton, treasurer; Mrs. E. D. McDonald, secretary and Miss Line Sargent, assistant secretary.

Board of directors: Miss Jessie Muse, Mrs. E. V. Carter, Jr., Mrs. George W. Campbell, Mrs. Edward Joiner, Mrs. Howard Smith, Mrs. Joseph N. Moody, Mrs. David Eichberg, Miss Emma Gregg, Miss Mary C. Moore.

Tom Thumb Wedding At Highland School.

A very charming event in the social circle of Mrs. Williamson and Miss Dent's kindergarten of Highland Avenue school was the wedding of Master Tom Thumb, Master Joe Wyant, and Miss June Lane, which took place Friday night, May 8, in the auditorium of the school.

Mid garlands of red and pink rambler roses and clusters of feathery spirea, the wedding ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Arthur Harris at 7:30, the guests having assembled and been greeted by Miss Corrigan, the hostess. Miss Augusta King sang "At Dawning," accompanied by Mrs. Brinsfield at the piano, and this was followed by a solo by Miss Lula Corlser, "I Love You Truly," which was sung at the afternoon rehearsal by Miss Elizabeth Newlin.

The four ribbon bearers in dresses of dainty pastel shades, were Isabel Duarte and Josephine Large, Caroline Drake and Elizabeth Myers, carrying tulle garlands of white.

Immediately following walked the eight bridesmaids, Barbara Ann Brown, Lillian McCrary, Erin Dale Taylor, Barbara Thrower, Helen Milam, Jean Howe, Ruth Reynolds, Lillian Norris and Dorothy Carter, each on the arm of a groomsman. These gentlemen were Billie Rambo, Bayard Clarke, Tommie Fielder, Graham Waitt, George Fuller, Parks Warnock, Jack Sullivan and Henderson Waddington. As these eight couples grouped themselves upon the platform they made a charming background, the maids in their lovely rainbow-colored gowns ranging from deep orange through the pinks and hues into the lavenders, and the groomsmen immaculate in their broadcloth and linen.

Then came the matron of honor, Barbara Brinsfield, in a gown of peach silk with lace and a formal bouquet, and after her the maid of honor, Myrta Jernigan, in blue silk and dainty ribbon trimmings. The ring bearer, Harold McClelland, in a white suit carried an exquisite Easter lily which bore the ring and immediately after him walked the flower girls, Denise Pratt and Rosallyn Weisman in dainty gowns of pale pink georgette carrying baskets of rose petals which they strewed before the bride, as she followed on the arm of her father, Master Brook Sheldon.

The gown of this exquisite little bride was one of white satin trimmed with iridescents—cut with a scalloped and charming bouffant skirt. She carried a shower bouquet of white rose buds, and her tulle and lace veil was wreathed with orange blossoms. The train was borne by Stanley Snyder, in white linen.

The Fourth District Federation of Women's clubs met in Columbus as guests of the Columbus City federation May 2, Mrs. Henry Bird, president, presiding. This one-day meeting was crowded to the limit with good things, all of them inspirational in character. After the splendid addresses by the district president, Mrs. Bird, the state president, Mrs. A. P. Brantley and Mrs. J. K. Ottley, chairman board of trustees of Tallulah Falls School, Inc., some one said that the fourth must be giving an advance sample of the Federation Jubilant at Tallulah.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley spoke briefly of the business-like methods that club women are using in the administration of their affairs, but added that they were not losing the personal contact, the warmth and sympathy that made club life what it is today. She called the Tallulah school the "Heart of the Federation," the activity through which the warm life-blood of united service flows.

Mrs. Ottley's Address.

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, chairman of the board of trustees of Tallulah in an address full of wit and good sense, answered the two criticisms that have been made of the school—the location in the extreme northern part of the state, and the large share of club monies which are given to its needs by clubs which are doing other educational work.

Mrs. Ottley emphasized the appropriateness of putting the school at Tallulah as that community has no other club influence, is in a remote section where it is a civilizing influence, that there was not a federated club, nor school, or even a preacher near Tallulah and through lifting the standards of the surrounding community it is helping the entire state. Mrs. Ottley told of the growth of the school and some of the results accomplished.

Mrs. Willard Patterson, publicity chairman for Tallulah, gave a bright and inspirational talk on the publicity given Tallulah.

Surprise in Store.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson followed with a talk on the surprises in store for the representatives attending the biennial council and also paid a tribute to Miss Nannie C. Davis, the beloved principal of the Tallulah school.

A room at the Country club, where the meeting was held, was filled with a display of the beautiful and artistic handcraft of the students.

Sitting in the place of honor with the president of the Columbus City Federation, Mrs. T. C. Hudson, who was the official hostess, were the following district and state officials: Mrs. A. P. Brantley, state president; Mrs Alonzo Richardson, general federation director; Mrs. Henry Bird, fourth district president; Mrs. J. K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees Tallulah Falls school; Mrs. N. V. Boddie, treasurer fourth district; Miss Florrie Johnson, secretary fourth district; Mrs. Albert Hill, Miss Dora Freeman, Mrs. R. J. Atkinson, all of Greenville; Mrs. S. A. Keefer, Manchester; Miss Bessie Hankins, Chipley; Miss Edwina Wood, Miss Edith Farrell, Mrs. Charlton Battle, Mr. Roland B. Daniel and the Reverend Allston B. Wragg, of Columbus.

Milledgeville Club Gains Cooperation Of Merchants

The merchants of Milledgeville will cooperate with the Milledgeville Woman's club by furnishing the rooms in the Sunday school plant as follows: living room, dining room, sun parlor, kitchen, and also draperies, silver, linens and cutglass will be loaned. Miss Florida Allen secured the help of Miss Helen Hoover, head of the art department of G. S. C. W., to plan these rooms.

Two splendid exhibitions of pictures secured from the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Department of Fine Arts, are reproductions of famous paintings and some exquisite color prints of Japanese, Chinese and Mexican subjects. The week promises to be a great success.

Program Given.

The following program for better homes week will be sponsored by the Milledgeville Woman's club, May 10 to 17, to be held in the Sunday school rooms of the Methodist church:

Formal opening of better homes week, Miss Florida Allen, president Woman's club. Program of evening in honor of "Mothers," celebrating Mother's day and honoring her, "The Queen of the Home." Tableaux and music. Program in charge of Mrs. H. R. Hines.

Close of the better homes week. Singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" and "Home Sweet Home."

Orpheus Club Observes National Music Week.

The Orpheus club which passed its quarter century milestone several years ago and is growing in grace as the years proceed will, for the first time this year, observe National Music week, May 4 to 10. New York City only had its first Music Week in 1924, and during this time thousands of clubs, schools, churches, societies, industrial plants, settlements and movie theaters gave special musical programs.

The Orpheus club is a member of the State and National Music Federation and the City Federation of Women's Clubs. It was represented at the recent State Music Federation convention by the president, Mrs. Marshall Dixon, and delegate, Mrs. John H. Lewis, Mrs. J. O. Methvin will represent the organization at the national convention to be held in Portland, Oregon, in June.

A concert was given Tuesday night at St. Luke church by the Orpheus club. A beautiful program was arranged. The choral work was under the direction of Mrs. J. O. Methvin.

Some of the very finest talent in the city was included on this program, which was especially planned for National Music Week.

The program was as follows:

I. Organ, Mrs. W. J. Burrus. II. chorus, (a) "Darky Lullaby" (Humoreske), Dvorak; (b) "An Irish Love Song" (folk tune from "County Derry"), Loomis; (c) "Viking Song" Coleridge-Taylor. III. Concerto, Opus 16, first movement, Grieg, Mrs. Pierce, Mrs. Dixon. IV. Vocal selections, Mrs. R. L. Crawford. V. Piano quartet Fest (Polonaise), Jansen, Mrs. Harris Gardiner, Mrs. Albert Shepherd, Mrs. James McDuffie, Mrs. James Walters.

West Point Woman's Club Wins Gavel Offered by Fourth

The West Point Woman's club won the gavel offered in the Fourth district for outstanding club work of the year. Mrs. Rhodes Browne was chairman of the committee making the decision, and honorable mention was also made of the Union Improvement club.

The award was made on several points, these being the teaching of thrift to children, the efficiency of all department chairmen, and the editing of the newspaper for one day. Mrs. W. C. Hudmon, president, received the gavel, expressing her appreciation.

The principal speaker of the afternoon session was Miss Rhoda Kaufman, of the state department of public welfare. Miss Kaufman is a former Columbus girl, who made a deep study of social welfare and is accomplishing progressive things for the department, delinquent and underprivileged children of the state, together with other trained workers of the state welfare department.

Her address was "Juvenile Courts in Georgia," and she stressed the fact that there is need in every county for trained social workers, and juvenile courts which should not be courts in the ordinary sense of the word, but act in place of the parents, where the proper parents are lacking.

"Delinquency is made through lack of opportunity," said Miss Kaufman, "and by children in need of special care, 75 per cent of the criminals begin as children."

Some states are making fine progress along these lines, but the Fourth district has fewer and weaker courts than any other district in the state, the speaker stated. An exception was made of Muscogee county and a tribute was paid Mrs. T. C. Hudson, president of the City federation, and Miss Beulah Martin, probation officer, for the remarkable work accomplished here in the past 18 months.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, general federation director of the state of Georgia, and chairman of the children's code commission, was called on by Mrs. Henry Bird, president of the Fourth district, for a speech, bringing a message from both of these organizations.

Mrs. Richardson stated that in coming into office as director that she had inherited a debt of $940 still owed by the Georgia Federation on the general headquarters in Washington. This amount has been borrowed but must be paid to the bank and she asked the assistance of the clubs. She besought the clubs to get back of their representatives in the legislature, urging them to pass the children's bills this summer, otherwise they will go over until 1927.—Columbus Enquirer-Sun.

5th District President Makes Request of Clubs

Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president Fifth District Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, requests that the Fifth District clubs appoint Better Homes chairmen, where they have not already made such appointments and that such chairmen be at home No. 1, 844 Forrest Road, and Home No. 2, 159 Pulliam street, Monday, May 11, at 2 o'clock to act with Mrs. F. C. Rice as hostesses for Fifth District day at the Better Homes Demonstration for Atlanta.

President General Issues Card to Georgia Women

To the clubwomen of Georgia:

The general federation, through its new department on the American Home, has undertaken a nation-wide home equipment survey. All clubs, whether they have as yet created an American Home department or not, are concerned in this survey for nine-tenths of all clubwomen are homewomen.

Resolution passed by the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, January 1925, was: whereas, the American home is the largest and most fundamental industry in the United States; whereas, the census bureau and other governmental agencies in collecting data secure information as to the details of equipment and labor for carrying on other industries upon which may be based conclusions as to progress and improvement in these industries; whereas, the federation is extensively representative of the home-making industry of the Unitd States; be it

Resolved, that through the department of the American Home the General Federation of Women's Clubs gather such data to such an extent that it may be presented to congress with an urgent request that congress incorporate the necessary provisions in the census law to require the United States census bureau to secure data in regard to the home as it does for factories and other industries.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON
April 7, 1925.

My dear Mrs. Sherman:

What you have said about the plans of the General Federation for a nation-wide survey of home-making methods and facilities, has impressed me as having possibilities of large usefulness. I am sure that some of the government agencies will be able to give some substantial assistance, and assume that you will afford them the opportunity. From what you have said I gather that the program is of a thoroughly practical character, and I hope may be productive of much good to the women who have to conduct the affairs of American homes.

Very truly yours,
CALVIN COOLIDGE,

Mrs. John D. Sherman, president, General Federation of Women's Clubs,
1734 N Street, N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

The federation counts on your help in its nation-wide stock-taking of the American home's equipment for, and method of, housekeeping. The questionnaires with explanatory notes will reach you shortly, if you have not already received them. You will find that they ask you to do this stock-taking in your community in the big, stimulating, modern way. They do not ask you to have a slow, expensive house to house canvass such as only the government is equipped to make. They ask you to get in touch with the appropriate city officials and heads of public service companies and learn from them to what extent the dwellings in the community are connected with sewer and water mains; how many are constructed with modern heating plants; and how many are supplied with gas or electricity for light, heat or for driving labor saving devices. The questionnaires ask you to learn from your health department officials what they can tell you about the extent to which dewellings have trash, ash and garbage collection or are provided with devices for burning refuse. They ask you to get in touch with the principal merchants who know what sort and how many labor-saving devices they have sold in the community and how extensive is the use of the radio and other facilities that strengthen the home influence over the youth. They will ask you to take stock of your own club programs to find out how much concerted study has been given during the current year to principles, methods and means of household furnishing and decoration with special reference to the promotion of home attachment and to the provision of more entertainment in the home rather than in public places. These stock-taking questionnaires will ask you to get the public and private employment agencies—if you are in a town big enough to have them—to give you data showing how many servants there are in the town. In short, this home equipment survey will give you a vivid picture of the home-making industry of your own community.

Return the filled questionnaire to General Federation headquarters. The results of all the home equipment surveys will be put together by experts in such work and will then appear in the Woman's Home Companion. Later the results will probably appear in pamphlet form. The findings will enable you to know just where in the scale of the nation's home making industry your community is to be found.

MARY SHERMAN,
President of the General Federation.

Mrs. Boykin Speaks To Miami Club.

Skinner, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. M. McElroy, treasurer, and Mrs. William Ready, auditor.

An elaborate program followed the business meeting. Mrs. Fanie Wedlock gave an interesting sketch of the life and activities of Henry Grady.

A fine talk on shrubbery, and new specimens of recent introduction was made by Mrs. Homer Jones.

Mrs. Miller's sketch of "Southern Writers I Have Known," was most interesting. She paid a beautiful tribute to Miss Anna Maria Barnes who lived in Gwinnett county for many years.

Mrs. Ollie Simpson read an interesting paper on "Trees." Her description of the memorial trees planted by the Southern Society of Chicago was enjoyed.

Mrs. McDaniel gave a talk on "Music in the English Colonies." Mrs. Noye Nesbit of Macon sang beautifully, "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River."

Miss Stella Douglas read "The Passing of Our Southern Writers."

At the end of the program dainty refreshments were served by Misses Edna Ray and Sarah Adams, the two little nieces of the hostess.

State Director Issues Card to Clubwomen.

To the Clubwomen of Georgia:

It is greatly desired that Georgia will make an exhibit of the club homes of the state at West Baden at the council meeting of the General Federation. To this end will you please send your director a picture of your club house, or your club room. If possible send the pictures unmounted, as they will be placed in a scrap book, and put with the other Georgia exhibit. The time is short, so an immediate reply will be greatly appreciated.

Send the pictures to Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, 628 West Peachtree street, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Ira Farmer Issues Card.

Full cooperation with Better Homes in America is requested by Mrs. Maggie W. Barry, chairman Department of the American Home, General Federation of Women's Clubss, the request going to every state chairman of the American Home and all divisional chairmen of her department. The educational campaign of the Better Homes is "to put knowledge of higher standards in housekeeping, home-furnishing and equipment, and home life within the reach of all citizens."

A satisfying home life is essential to the progress of a nation and this movement has as its object homes for the many and not a favored few. All over Georgia this week are being shown homes designed by local committees with the advice of trained experts to suit the wants and needs of the particular locality. Georgia club women urged to give all possible support to these demonstrations.

There are two fundamental industries in America and one of these is homemaking. It is necessary for the future of our nation that this should receive fuler recognition by both men and women.

MRS. IRA E. FARMER,
Chairman, Home Demonstration Work, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Supplee Pleads For Trees, Flowers And Bird Life

Mrs. A. L. Supplee, of Covington, chairman of Division of Natural Resources and Waterways, of Eighth District, sends the following on conservation of trees and wild flowers. This branch of the federation work is now claiming the attention of the business world as timber is fast becoming scarce. The government is also becoming active in the preservation of specimens of plant life fast becoming extinct. Mrs. Supplee's article follows:

Perhaps of all kinds of landscape none so universally captivates mankind as forest scenery; nothing grander to gaze upon than a virgin forest untouched by the hand of man; it creates the sort of sensation a person feels upon hearing Mozart's music.

Trees are very human in growth and development, with varying features not unlike the human face, with the showers or sunshine they sadden or shine; this variety gives to forest scenery expressive beauty. Upon careful research and investigation of the subject of trees, conclusions and deductions have resulted in placing an inestimable value upon them to both mental and moral health of the inhabitants, as well as physical welfare. They are nature's laboratories, their leaves absorbing carbonic acid thrown off by animal life, and giving back oxygen to the air which we breathe.

A treeless nation is a decadent nation. Any government that protects and cares for its forests will retain its vigor and power. Look upon a map of the world for verification of these statements. Experts have estimated that one-fourth to one-fifth of a country's area should be forested for the best welfare of its inhabitants.

Apart from the material value there is a poetic sentiment which finds sweet companionship in trees, and people the groves with dryads; taste and refinement plant them near homes for beauty, pleasure and comfort. They are important factors in all that constitutes national life and comfort.

Material Value.

Not alone for scenic beauty or poetic sentiment are they valuable, but for our various industries; irrigation and water projects are dependent upon them. A forest cover is like a great sponge, absorbing and retaining moisture; for wind breaks in dryer parts of the country invaluable to agriculture.

The United States forest service and geological survey have proven beyond question that the White mountain forest range regulates the flow of the five principal New England rivers, and the lower Appalachian range regulates the flow of all the largest rivers south of the Ohio, and east of the Mississippi; hence these two ranges hold the chief sources of the wealth of 13 states—their water power.

The great floods in China have been traced to the fact that it is one of the few countries which, thus far, have taken no steps to preserve or renew their forests. The farm is the basis of the country's wealth, and agriculture with or without irrigation, depends upon the water supply, this in turn, depends upon our forests.

Wild Flower Campaign.

Let's wage a wild flower campaign for conservation and preservation—their reactional value is from the aesthetic side. Plant your parks, grounds, and any neglected spot with dogwood, wild azalea, shrubs, thereby defeat commercialism and unthinking childhood from destroying nature's plan in the uplift of man to nature's God.

All teachers, pupils and clubwomen should be in sympathy with this movement. Who will be the "Wild Flower Club" or "Wild Flower Woman" to inaugrate this campaign? Be a wild flower entusiast.

Conservation of bird life should occupy large space in our plans, and programs upon natural resources, the reactional value of bird life is from paign? Be a wild flower enthusiast. to successful agriculture.

Indiana Federation Plans for Visitors.

Harriette K. Sparks, press chairman for Indiana Federated Clubs, sends the following information for those who will attend the biennial council at West Baden. Georgia women who cannot attend are interested in all that pertains to the West Baden council and for this reason Miss Sparks' article is quoted in full.

"Have you ever been a guest at a house party on a large estate, where every possible entertainment indoor and out was offered; where guests were congenial, having many interests in common, and where your hostess said, 'This house is yours to use as you will for work or play, my only desire is that you may be comfortable and happy during your stay with me.'

"This is the greeting the Indiana Federation of Clubs will extend to the members of the Georgia Federation June 1, when it greets them at the West Baden Springs hotel and when by courtesy of the hotel management it will be able to offer to the General Federation of Women's Clubs the exclusive use for a week of one of the most beautiful, modern and commodious resort hotels in America, surrounded by 4,000 acres of gardens and boulevards overlooking the famous 'Lost River Valley.'

Accommodations.

"In this hotel accommodations are provided for a thousand guests, ranging from luxurious suites to small simply furnished single rooms. For convention purposes it is unsurpassed; convention hall will seat 1,200 people and the assembly room 500. The picture theater is available for educational films. Dining accommodations range from a room with a U shaped table that will seat 1,800 guests to small dining rooms, of which there are three, furnishing opportunity for small group luncheons, dinners and breakfasts. The Pompeian room is a colossal inner court with 40,000 feet of floor space open at all times for social events and exhibits.

Recreations.

"No time need be lost in seeking relaxation from strenuous business sessions, for the recreational features of the hotel and grounds will be complimentary to the guests; these include tennis courts, a swimming pool, golf course, bowling alley and billiard room.

Baths.

"The famous baths will be furnished to the guests at the nominal price of 25 cents. The waters of the three springs that supply the baths contain in varying degrees, sodium and magnesium sulphates, sodium chloride, and carbonates of lime, soda, potassa, iron and magnesia.

American Plan.

"The hotel is conducted on the American plan. The products of West Baden's farms, gardens, orchards and extensive dairies, coupled with the skill of expert chefs and competent service in sunlit dining rooms, give to the cuisine a distinctive excellence. By special arrangement with the convention committee all special luncheons, dinners and banquets will be served in place of regular meals with no extra charge. Flowers for table decorations will be furnished from the hotel gardens.

Indiana's Contribution to the Council Program.

"In accordance with the wishes of the General Federation president, Mrs. John D. Sherman, the council program will be a working program rather than a decorative one. Indiana is fortunate in being able to offer a convention housing that will lend itself to the carrying out of such a program. In keeping with this Indiana's contributions will be in the main educational and along the line of federation department work.

"Monday night, May 1, Indiana will give a reception to its guests, with welcoming addresses from Indiana officials and responses from General Federation officials, Mrs. Felix T. McWhirter of Indianapolis, chairman of recention will be in charge.

"Tuesday night, June 3, an address will be given by Dr. Lowe Bryan, president of Indiana university. The address will be followed by the showing of the Indiana Dunes Park pictures, by Mrs. Frank Sheehan, chairman of natural scenery. G. F. W. C. Mrs. Sheehan was chairman of the committee that secured Indiana's famous dunes to the state and put them under state protection. Mrs. Sheehan is a candidate for state president 1925-27.

"Thursday afternoon, May 4, the hostess district will entertain the council guests with a tea at the French Lick Springs Country club.

"Thursday evening, May 4, the Indiana Federation will serve a banquet with speakers as yet unnamed.

"During the week there will be an exhibit of the pictures of Indiana artists; selections to be made by the artists themselves from recent exhibits in Herron Art Institute, Indianapolis, and the Hoosier Salon of Chicago. Supplementing the art exhibit there will be an art evening with Lorado Taft, one of America's most famous sculptors, as the speaker.

Home Extension Demonstration.

"An interesting feature of the council will be a demonstration of the extension department of Purdue university, put on by the university, in charge of Miss Lelia Gaddis, head of the department and chairman of the division of home extension service I. F. C. This demonstration will show how Purdue university is cooperating with the 'Better Homes' program by carrying its training into the rural homes of the state. Under the direction of Miss Gaddis, 18,918 women in the state have received training in nutrition, clothing and millinery, taught in local groups. During the past year 42 women have been enrolled in clothing project classes, reaching a total of 339 homes with this work. Home economics classes are operating in 72 of the 92 counties in the state.

Mrs. Hamet D. Hinkle, past vice president Indiana Federation, member club institute committee G. F. W. C., will lead the mass singing at the council. Mrs. Hinkle is a candidate for state president 1925-27.

What to Wear.

"What to wear presents no problem in Indiana in June. June is summer time in the Hoosier state. The fact that all council activities will be confined to the hotel simplifies the matter further. If one plans the wardrobe needed for a week's stay in a modern summer resort hotel, including at least one evening dress for the reception and banquet, a sport suit for out-of-door recreation, a light weight wrap, a pair of sandals for dewy mornings and a light weight wool for a possible cool day, the clothes question will be answered within suitcase limitations."

LOUISE F. HAYS,
Recording secretary of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs.

General Federation Council At West Baden June 1 to 6

It is time for Georgia clubs to be planning to have representatives at the council at West Baden, Ind., June 1 to 6. Every club in Georgia belonging to the state federation also belongs to the general federation and can have a delegate there.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, has expressed herself publicly and privately as of the opinion that the mid-biennial council for 1925 would be the most delightful of any council ever held. The plan offered by the West Baden Springs hotel of making it a big house party, with no other guests present, has appealed to her as a brilliant solution of making such a meeting reach the highest peak of interest, fellowship and efficiency. The hotel is placed in a most beautiful setting in the heart of the picturesque region of Indiana, and has on its grounds nine springs of various mineral ingredients and of varying degrees of vileness, probably in inverse proportion to their beneficial results. There are no nearby distractions, and a ride over the rolling hills or to French Lick, only a mile or so away, or a pilgrimage to New Harmony would be the only entertainment Indiana could offer the visitors, aside from the exquisite experience of just being in Indiana in June.

The Program.

Mrs. Joshua Hodgins, of Marinette, the director for Wisconsin, and former president of the Wisconsin federation, has charge of the program, and is working out an excellent plan for an interesting week. She agrees with Mrs. Sherman that general discussion of local and state problems should be featured, and she is allowing ample time for that. Outside speakers are seldom called to address the council, as it is more desirable to give the time to the department and division chairmen, for they get closer to the real work of the states and state departments.

Scope of the Council.

The council is a conference! It is a getting together of the real workers for discussion of plans, a counseling together; it is more frank and intimate than the great biennial can be. The council has all the powers of a biennial, except to elect officers and amend the by-laws. The membership is composed of the board of directors, the past presidents of the general federation, state presidents, presidents of clubs having direct membership in the general federation, or their alternates, and chairmen of divisions and standing committees. Visiting club members may take a limited part in discussion, but may not vote. If the Indiana federation had adopted the universal membership provision last October, every club president in Indiana (federated in the state) would have been a voting delegate to the council next June.

Get Acquainted With the General Federation.

One of the outstanding pleasures to be derived from the council of the general federation will be the opportunity to greet the personnel of its working force, partake of the spirit of its endeavors, and feel the immensity of its contacts and influence. It is a body which is in constant cooperatio with world forces and movements. No national undertaking, no world movement, is inaugurated in the United States without seeking to enlist the support of the general federation. They are asked to assist in everything, from the control of rainfall to the adoption of the metric standard of measures. It is sometimes amusing to hear the calls for help after all other methods fail—"You have such a perfect organization, you are just the ones to put this over." It reminds me of the words of Sappho, "Night brings everything home to its mother." To call at our federation home at 1734 N street, N. W., Washington, to be greeted by our little Kentucky director, Miss Hafford, to be made perfectly at home in that spacious residence, to be served in every way from club material to your personal and social needs as if it all belonged to you, to listen in at the telephone conversations and hear the calls for cooperation and assistance from all official Washington, from the cabinet down, is indeed a revelation. And best of all is to know that you are a part of this to just the extent you avail yourself of it, for, as Mrs. Winter says: "The general federation is you, made national."

The place selected for this meeting is a most delightful one. It is different—to that all will agree who see it in its changing aspects through sunlight and moonlight and starlight and shadow. The great hotel, unique and beautiful, is in itself well worth a journey to see. Its surroundings are in every way delightful. But best of all, perhaps, from a convention standpoint, is that it offers every facility for general and special assemblies, for all forms of recreation, and for a diversity of social pleasures and other general activities of the meeting all under one friendly roof. There is no scampering hither and yonder for receptions and parties and special lectures, for West Baden is a little world within itself. There will be time and ample opportunity for the formation of the sweet friendships which are, after all, one of the best things in our federation.

Pompeian Room.

The center of interest at West Baden Springs hotel is the great inner court known as the Pompeian room. It is 200 feet in diamater and 150 feet in height to the great glass dome which spans it. It is a room of unusual beauty, artistic to a remarkable degree even in its immensity, and with the added charm at night of lighting effects which range from the brilliance of the moon day sun to the mild radiance of a starlit night. Half of the rooms open upon this court and half upon the laws and gardens.

Railway rates to West Baden, Ind., are one and one-half fare (with minimum of $1 for round trip on the identification certificate plan.

Identification certificates will be sent by the general federation transportation chairman, Mrs. M. D. Cameron, 216 North Thirty-second avenue, Omaha, Neb., to the state federation transportation chairmen, which shall in turn be furnished to the members, who will present and surrender the identification certificates to ticket agents, of whom the tickets are purchased, instead of requesting "certificate plan certificates." One identification certificate will suffice for each member, including dependent members of her family, and it will be necessary to furnish separate certificates for dependent members of the family. Tickets will be good via same route in both directions only.

Reservations Made.

Reservations are to be made with the hotel management for the meeting. The rooms vary in prices according to location. The hotel is run on American plan.

Mrs. Brantley has appointed state delegates to represent the state at large and I wish that every club in Georgia could be represented there. Come, join us, and lets have a fine Georgian delegation. Faithfully yours,

LOUISE F. HAYS,
Recording Secretary, General Federation.

Attractive Subjects To Be Discussed.

Some attractive subjects which will be discussed in the general federation meeting at West Baden, June 1st to 6th, are as follows: Leadership—How to develop; Value of club institutes—What is their value? New blood—How to get it—How to develop it; Politics—Shall we keep out? The deaf and dumb chairmen—How shall we reach them? The lack of continuity in club work; How shall we tell news from propaganda? Business methods; Uniform by-laws; How to get out an up-to-date year book; Best method of raising money—Cure for poverty in clubs; High dues, assessments or entertainments; Club magazines, how financed; Have you a state headquarters—How financed—Is it a help in state work? Are county federations helpful? Federation spirit—How shall we develop closer relations between general federation departments and the work of the state federation extension, general, state, county and city.

Each of these subjects will interest the clubs of Georgia, and it is earnestly hoped that Georgia will send her quota of representatives. Mrs. Brantly will head the Georgia delegation. Mrs. Hazzard has published transportation information, and is always ready to answer any question regarding accommodations.

We would like to remind the district presidents that at Los Angeles district presidents were made members of the body, and to no group will the mid-biennal council at West Baden be of greater benefit and inspiration.

State B. W. M. U. Executives Hold Sessions in Atlanta

The regular monthly meeting of the executive board of the B. W. M. U. of Georgia was held Tuesday, May 5, at the mission rooms in the Palmer building. Mrs. R. K. Redwine opened the meeting with a devotional in which she spoke beautifully on the verse of Scripture, "And Daniel purposed in his heart." The prayer was led by Mrs. W. C. Tribble, of Lavonia, vice president of the northeastern division.

The board members were delighted to have present Miss Frances Fulghum, returned missionary from Japan. Miss Fulghum spoke of her work in Japan and of the inspiration the missionaries found in the knowledge that those at home were working, too. She presented Mrs. W. J. Neel, B. W. M. U. president, with a lovely jewel box she had used as her own in Japan, explaining that the Japanese held that to give away something one has used oneself makes the gift doubly valuable.

The corresponding secretary-treasurer, Miss Patrick, read her annual financial report of B. W. M. U. mission contributions for the year ending April 30, 1925. The total amount given by the women was $203,368.51. Of this, $1,650 was for W. M. U. specials. She attended the institute meetings of the north central, northwestern and west central divisions held at Norcross, Carrollton and Manchester, respectively. She also spoke April 22 at the Missionary Educational institute at Macon. As a result of a joint letter sent out by the W. M. U. secretary and Dr. Cree to each of the societies urging the women to remember "Challenge Day" April 19, some extra gifts were sent in but she reported that even so, Georgia women fell short $46,170.21 of last year's gifts in the year closing April 30, 1925. She reported the preparations for the Bessie Tift institute, June 4 to 14.

Georgia women have so splendidly responded to the call for money for Dr. Ayers' work that the amount asked for has been over subscribed. However, bandages and such supplies are still needed, and women are urged to direct their White Cross activity into this channel.

Miss Julia Allen, Young People's leader and college correspondent, announced enough of the plans for the Y. W. A. house party at Bessie Tift to make board members sure the time was going to be a most enjoyable one. On Friday evening, June 5, there will be a welcome service, at which Mrs. R. K. Redwine will speak. Then there will be yells and songs. Among the other speakers to be present at the house party are Mrs. W. J. Neel, Miss Laura Lee Patrick, Miss Anne Barton, Mrs. Frank Dennis, Mrs. Taul White, Miss Frances Fulghum and Miss Juliette Mather.

Theophilae Class Is Entertained.

The Theophilae class of the Hapeville Baptist church was entertained at the home of the president, Mrs. Ben F. Jeanes, Tuesday evening.

After a business session a program arranged by Mrs. L. V. Hall and Mrs. H. E. Smith was enjoyed by the class members and their husbands. The program consisted of a vocal solo by Mrs. W. R. Melson, piano solo by Mrs. H. C. Hodges, reading by Mrs. Ben F. Jeanes, and a violin solo by Miss Dorothy Reddick, accompanied by Miss Louise Carter. Program closed with a vocal solo by Mrs. J. W. Harris, teacher.

The class will have a cake sale May 16 at the Hapeville market. The proceeds will be used towards paying for the church piano.

Woman's Union Bible Club To Hold Meeting.

In view of the fact that the North Atlanta district meeting of the Woman's Missionary society will take place in the Wesley Memorial church on Thursday morning, May 14, the Woman's Union Bible club will hold its regular weekly meeting on Wednesday morning in the church from 10 to 11 o'clock.

The study of the book of Daniel will be continued by the class, Mrs. T. R. Kendall, Sr., teacher. These meetings are far reaching in their influence and are attracting the women from all parts of the city. All ladies and girls are cordially invited to be present.

Georgia B. W. M. U. Honored.

Following the 75-million campaign of southern Baptists, which was launched in 1919 and ended in 1924, a "future program" committee was appointed, which has met at intervals during the past year and has outlined and developed a plan known as the "1925 program." This committee was appointed last May when the Southern Baptist convention met in Atlanta and it consisted mostly of men, only five women being included in the list. The Georgia W. M. U. felt distinctly honored to have Miss Laura Lee Patrick, their corresponding secretary, appointed on the committee. Other women mentioned were Mrs. W. C. James, of Kentucky, president, and Miss Kathleen Mallory, corresponding secretary W. M. U. S. B. C.; Mrs. Janie Cree Rose, corresponding secretary W. M. U. of Kentucky, and Mrs. Bertha Spooner, corresponding secretary W. M. U., Oklahoma.

Wesley Memorial Studies Ming Kwong.

The Woman's Missionary society of Wesley Memorial church held a "spend-the-day" meeting Monday, May 4, the chief feature of the occasion being the presentation of the mission study book, "Ming Kwong, City of the Morning Light," by various members of the society. The program was splendidly arranged by Mrs. A. C. Minter, superintendent of mission study, and was participated in by Mrs. J. E. Thompson, Miss Alice Robinson, Miss Annie Cameron, Mrs. I. F. Hamill, Mrs. L. A. Eldridge and Mrs. Marvin Williams.

"You can reduce - -"

"Why, Ruth, less than a year ago I weighed as much as you do. Of course, you can reduce!

"I tried everything, just as you have done—exercises and diet included—and still I was over weight. But one day Mother advised me to try Marmola Tablets. She said at one time she used them and lost ten pounds in a few weeks!

"Of course I just flew to the nearest drug store and bought a box. And you see what Marmola Tablets did for me!"

* * * *

For nearly twenty years, hundreds of thousands of men and women each year have regained slender figures by using Marmola Tablets. Last year alone, users purchased more than a million boxes!

Surely you would rather use these tablets and regain your slender figure, than try some unknown and perhaps harmful method of reducing.

Get some Marmola Tablets at any druggist's (one dollar a box) and try the pleasant way to reduce. Or if you prefer, a box will be sent to you in plain wrapper, postpaid, by the Marmola Co., 1833 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Sixth District Baptist Rally.

The sixth and last of the 1925 rallies of the W. M. U. of the Atlanta Baptist association was held at the Edgewood Baptist church, Tuesday, April 28.

A cordial welcome was given each guest upon arrival by a committee of ladies at the doors. The church was artistically decorated with ferns and cut flowers. Mrs. A. G. Sullivan the capable secretary had prepared an instructive program.

Meeting opened by repeating in unison W. M. U. watchword and moved off on a wave of enthusiasm. Devotional was led by Mrs. V. B. Wall, of Brookhaven. Opening player by Mrs. T. R. Allen of Buckhead.

Mrs. T. E. McCutcheon of Edgewood church extended a most gracious welcome to those present which was responded to by Mrs. E. T. Johnson of Inman Park.

The chairmen of the department of the work gave interesting reports.

Of special interest was the talk of Miss McMichael of Decatur, a student at the W. M. U. training school, Louisville, Ky. The churches of the sixth district are Brookhaven, Buckhead, Brown Memorial, Center Hill, Decatur, Edgewood, Inman Park, Lakewood Heights, South Decatur, Tabernacle and Northwest. There was a large delegation from each society and short reports made by the presidents. Mrs. L. B. Cranford, president of the Edgewood Society in closing her report presented in behalf of her society a beautiful corsage bouquet to Mrs. Sullivan as a token of love and appreciation. A full hour was devoted to a practical discussion of the "Standard of Excellence." Each of the ten points handled by a different speaker, giving reasons why these points should be attained.

The afternoon devotional was led by Miss Thelma Thompson, Y. W. A. counselor of Decatur, Miss Laura Lee Patrick, secretary treasurer of the Ga. W. M. U. spoke on stewardship. Her argument was scriptural and strong and made a profound impression upon her hearers. She emphasized the importance of "W. M. U. Specials."

The climax of the day was reached when Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader introduced Miss Francis Fulghum of Funkuoka, Japan, missionary of the Southern Baptist convention. Miss Fulghum came upon the platform leading two children—a small boy and girl—both dressed in Japanese garments and singing "Beautiful Japan." She held her audience for more than an hour as she recited the needs of that great country and the sacrificial service rendered by the missionaries following the great earthquake, all of which opened up new avenues of approach and new opportunities, and brought about a warmer feeling among Japanese toward Americans. At the close of her address Miss Mulghum presented Mrs. Sullivan with a new Testament published in Japanese language.

Special music was rendered by Mrs. Russell Jackson of Edgewood church. The closing song, "Why Didn't You Let Us Know," was sung by two small girls, Laura and Bernice Bennett of Center Hill.

Closing prayer by Mrs. I. B. Smith.

Mrs. Michael Will Present Vocal Pupils.

Mrs. Lessie McMichael will present her pupils in a vocal recital at her studio in Edison hall, Friday evening, May 15, at 8 o'clock.

The following pupils will be presented: Harvey Tenis, Joe Brundage, Rena Brebosky, W. D. Whittaker, Mrs. Lena Ansley, Louis Cook. Miss Elizabeth Abbott will play the accompaniment.

Mob Violence Is Denounced by Methodist Women

The following resolutions concerning mob violence were passed by Methodist women:

"We, the officers and members of the Woman's Missionary Council of Methodist Episcopal church, south, in annual session assembled, are pained to learn that still another lynching has taken place within our territory.

"We represent a constituency which extends from Maryland to California and from Illinois to the Gulf of Mexico. We are an arm of our great church, are voting citizens of our states and the national government.

"We stand for international justice and for justice in social, industrial and race relations. We believe these are inescapable principles on which to build Christian missions and a Christian world.

"We believe in the exercise of our obligations and duty as citizens to aid in the enforcement of law and in securing equal justice to all peoples.

"We do not condone any crime, but we unqualifiedly condemn the crime of the mob which makes itself criminal in usurping the powers of the law.

"We are appalled by the brutalizing effect of mob violence on the youth of our land. We shudder at the effect of mob violence on all our citizenship.

"Therefore we appeal to you, the chief executives of our southern states

"First, to use every personal influence to secure protection for prisoners by local officials even to the extent of going personally to the centers where lynchings are threatened.

"Second, by securing better police machinery for controlling these situations.

"Third, by offering maximum rewards.

"Fourth, by sustaining a determined effort to secure the prosecution and conviction of the guilty parties at whatever cost."

All Saints Branch Holds Meeting.

The All Saints branch of the Episcopal Woman's auxiliary, in its meeting Monday, held a short devotional service for the missionaries who have gone out from the Atlanta diocese into foreign lands as well as for those who are engaged in this field of the Master's work nearer home.

As the time draws near to present the united thank offering which will be done at the meeting of the diocesan convention council in Atlanta May 12 to 15, women are getting an enlarged vision of what it means to give, not only of their substance but themselves, their souls and bodies as a reasonable sacrifice for Him who died that they might live.

At the Episcopal general convention in New Orleans during the month of October women from all the Episcopal churches throughout America will make the united thank offering, which, as heretofore, will no doubt reach many hundred thousands of dollars, that given by our women through the diocesan council being added to it.

Wisely has it been called a "thank offering" that women, as an acknowledgment for special blessing, and there are many in every woman's life, may lay aside some gift, large or small, "as unto the Lord."

Through these united gifts hundreds of missionaries and Bible women carry to "them that sit in darkness" the message of thee ross. Nor is it only through their material gifts that the Episcopal church women give help to those who labor in the vineyard; but many, very many, of them know the power that lies in prevailing prayer and these come together "with one accord in one place" as did the group in All Saints chapel on last Monday afternoon. J. S. W.

Hospital Day On May 12.

May 12 is "National Hospital Day" and will be fittingly observed by the Wesley Memorial hospital, of Atlanta.

The woman's auxiliary has arranged for the hospital to be open for inspection from 2 until 4:30 o'clock on the afternoon of May 12. Mrs. A. L. Norris is general chairman on arrangements and is being ably assisted by representative women from the various Methodist churches of the north and the south Atlanta districts.

Mrs. Norris and her committee will be in the receiving line and act as official hostesses while the nurses will be official guides on the tour of inspection. There will be a military escort from the Emory R. O. T. C. to look after the comfort of the guests and the proper handling of automobiles.

At the end of the inspection tour, Mrs. John Staten and committee will serve punch to the guest in the nurses' recreation room, while Mrs. Johnson Woody presides over the register.

The Golden Cross society has issued 1,000 invitations to its members and the children of the Junior Red Cross with their teachers are especially invited.

The women of the churches are cordially urged to avail themselves of this opportunity to inform themselves in order that the work of the auxiliary may be carried on more efficiently and effectively in future.

Inman Park Mission Study Class.

The ladies of the Inman Park Baptist church will hold a mission study class Wednesday, May 13, at the church. The book, "China's Real Revolution," will be taught by Mrs. A. G. Sullivan. Ladies come at 10:30 o'clock and bring sandwiches, books will be there for you. Mrs. Terry has the books and you will not have to buy one. These books belong to the district for the societies' use.

MRS. TERRY.

FAIRBURN BAPTIST WOMEN.

On Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. C. Reese, the Fairburn B. W. M. S. held its regular meeting and a study class on "Along the Highway of Service."

The worship period was led by Mrs. Lillian Elder, who used the latter portion of the first chapter of John as the basis for her talk on individual missionary work.

A short business session followed. A wonderful report of enthusiastic work on the part of our R. A.'s made us very happy. The W. M. S. is proud of each one of its auxiliaries and their faithful leaders.

Mrs. Elder announced the coming to Fairburn in 1926 of the annual divisional W. M. U. institute. This will be a wonderful opportunity for our people to gain information and inspiration in missionary work.

The study for the day was "Present-day Persecutions in Europe." Mrs. B. E. Woodall, Mrs. J. C. Philips and Mrs. Elder told of conditions under which our S. B. C. missionaries are laboring in these war-ridden countries.

Local Deaconesses Moved

Deaconess Mary E. Nichols and Deaconess Frances R. Howard.

The Methodistic way of appointing pastors and deaconesses each year seems rather hard when it means the separation of such good friends as the women of the Methodist churches of Atlanta have come to consider Deaconesses Howard and Nichols.

Appointments made at the recent council meeting called for changes in the Atlanta work and Deaconess Mary Nichols was appointed to the Institutional church of Richmond, Va., and Deaconess Howard to do survey work in Atlanta looking toward organization of work among the negroes under the Woman's Council.

Born in Kalamazoo, Mich., Frances Howard gave her life for definite Christian service at an early age and made all of her educational work fit into these plans. She was educated at Peabody college, later attended Yale and then took the special course required by our Scarritt Bible and Training school. She came to Atlanta in 1919 as a probationer and took up work under Miss Sarah Lowder in the Atlanta Wesley Community house. In 1921, at the council meeting in Richmond, Va., she was consecrated and returned to Atlanta, where she has been head resident of the Wesley house for several years and is greatly beloved by her coworkers.

Deaconess Nichols is a native North Carolinian, having been born at Roxboro, N. C. She attended the North Carolina Woman's college and later was graduated from the Scarritt Bible and Training school. She was consecrated deaconess at the council meeting held at San Antonio, Texas, in 1922. Her first work was in Key West, Fla., and from there she came to Atlanta something over two years ago. Her work has been most satisfactory and it is with sincere regret that the women of Atlanta see her go to Richmond.

These consecrated young women have been associated with the Atlanta mission board of Methodist churches and their reports to this board for 1924 show that, through the Sunday school classes, camp fire organization, mothers' clubs, cooking, sewing and handicraft classes, the library and supply room, they have done splendid work among the people in the Wesley House community. They also conducted a splendid daily vacation Bible school last summer. Thousands of persons are helped each year by being brought into close touch with the beautiful lives lived by these young women in the community where the Methodist churches have this particular bit of organized work.

MRS. WALLACE ROGERS.

Bowdoin State Normal And Industrial College.

A requirement of the senior class each year is the preparation of a theme on some special subject of interest, which is taken as a problem to be presented for graduation. The senior class this spring consists of 19 young men and women—five young men and 14 young women. A representative of the class having the best developed theme is selected to represent the college at the commencement exercises of the University of Georgia.

The members of this year's senior class and the subjects of their themes are presented below:

"The Progress of Education," Miss Mary Beck; "The Influence of Heredity on Man," Miss Clara Barr; "The Building of Community Sentiment and Ideals," Miss Lillian Lovvorn; "Georgia Writers," Miss Mary McCarley; "The Development of Home Economics in Response to the Need of the Girl," Miss Blanche Smith; "The Business of Being a Woman," Miss Blanche Smith; "Education as Adjustment," Miss Loise Smith; "The Value of Music to Education," Miss Clyde Copeland; "The Importance of Right Development," Miss Ruth Hines; "The Responsibilities of Womanhood to the Modern Social Demands," Miss Sara Burson; "Woman's Work Extends to Many Fields, Still She Is Woman," Miss Mary Downs; "Evolution of Home Economics," Miss Ruth Bartlett; "College Dramatics," Cranston Hamil; "The Progress of Radio," Ray McWhorter; "What the College Student Can Do for the South," E. C. Burns; "The Challenge of the South's New Day," Bates Causey; "Habits," Miss Zelma Barr; "The Use of Modern Fiction in High School Literature," Miss Willie Curtis Dye; "The Melting Pot," Ted Cook.

The themes are now being reviewed for the selction of the best and an announcement will be made later concerning the representative of the college for the exercises at Athens in June.

Preparations are going forward for the commencement exercises to be held now at an early date. Editor Melear, of the Christian Advocate, Chattanooga, Tenn., will preach the commencement sermon the morning of May 31, at the college chapel. His subject will be "The Marks of a Man." Dr. S. V. Sanford of the University of Georgia faculty, will deliver the literary address on Tuesday evening, June 2. The Bowdon players will present a play on the night of June 1, and the senior class will give a play on Saturday night, May 30.

The Halcyon and the Adamsonian literary societies will hold on Friday evening, May 8, a joint debate discussing the child labor amendment to the United States constitution. Misses Opal Huff and Vesta McElroy will represent the Halcyons, and James Fleming and Earl Faver, the Adamsonians. The public is cordially invited to hear this debate.

On last Saturday evening in the library of the college the members of the senior cookery class, consisting of Misses Ruth Bartlett, Blanche Smith, Mary Downs, Mary McCarley and Sara Burson, as hostesses, prepared and served as a part of their work in home science a beautifully appointed 7 o'clock dinner to their invited guests. Dr. G. W. Camp, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Pitts, Shelton Hay, Miss Ruby Reeves, Miss Iris Smythe Davenport, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Griffin.

On next Saturday night the same group of girls will entertain as their guests Judge and Mrs. C. E. Roop and Professor and Mrs. V. D. Whatley, of Carrollton; Professor and Mrs. E. Dillard and Miss Iris Davenport, of Bowdon.

Bible Study Class Meets Monday.

When the Inman Park Baptist W. M. U. started there new year work they saw a new vision of what a Bible study class would mean in their society, so the second Monday afternoon in each month these ladies meet and study the Bible. They started with the very first book in the Bible and are taking every chapter as they come. They are now studying the book of Numbers, the latter part of the book. Our pastor's wife, Mrs. S. A. Cowan, is the teacher and we all know that no better teacher could be found. All those who have not been attending are urged to come and all members of the church are invited to meet with this class at the church Monday afternoon, May 11, at 3 o'clock.

MRS. TERRY.

LaGrange College News of Interest.

LaGrange, Ga., May 9.—Friday night, May 1, was "College night" at the John Brown services at the tabernacle. The LaGrange college girls attended in a body, and by special request, furnished part of the musical program.

Mrs. Loren Jones, pianist and woman's worker of the John Brown party, spoke to the girls at their vesper service Thursday evening.

The college girls were delightfully entertained as the guests of the Rotary club Tuesday afternoon at a golf tournament on the Highland Country club golf course. "Bobby" Jones, Walter Hagen, nationally known golf champion, played.

Mrs. V. R. O'Neal, sponsor of the sophomore class, entertained the class with a picnic on Monday afternoon. The young ladies went by automobile to Young's Mill, where a picnic supper was spread.

The new Y. W. C. A. cabinet was installed Sunday evening. The service was unusually effective. The old and new cabinets came down the stairs to the prayer hall, as the Y. W. song, "Follow the Gleam," was played softly. After a solo by Miss Louise Leggitt, Miss Miriam Spruell, president of the old cabinet, gave over the office to Miss Corinne Martin, the new president, who in accepting, gave some of the Y. W.'s aims for next year. The service ended with the Y. W. benediction.

Plans for commencement are well under way. Senior examinations begin May 19, while the exams for the other three classes are scheduled to begin May 23. Plans for alumnae and class day are also being formulated. Work on the commencement play is being done in earnest, and those appearing on the senior recital Saturday night are putting the finishing touches to their selections. A greater number of alumnae is expected back this year than ever before, and plans are being made for their entertainment.

Shorter College Social Notes.

Rome, Ga., May 9.—An attractive feature of the Music Week program in Rome was the recital given by Shorter students in the auditorium on Wednesday afternoon, which was followed by a tea given in the studios of the music building. Shorter cooperated with the Music Lovers' club of this city throughout the week in making National Music Week a success. On Sunday afternoon Shorter artists contributed to the vesper service program and helped to make the service noteworthy, and on Tuesday afternoon the beautiful May day pageant presented on the college campus was a contribution to the program.

The annual picnic of the International Relations club was an event of Saturday afternoon. Members of the club hiked to a prety site within walking distance of the college and there prepared a campfire supper, consisting of broiled steak and accompaniments. Officers of the club are: Miss Corinne Sheppard, Cordele, president; Miss Ethel Diffee, vice president; Miss Mary Lynn Brogdon, secretary and treasurer.

Miss Lucy Shivers, Eatonton, talented pupil of the department of expression and a member of the class of '25, appeared in a senior dramatic recital on Friday evening, presenting in a manner worthy of highest praise, Rostand's comedy in three acts, "The Romancers." Miss Shivers was also chairman of the May day program.

Methodist Women Of Two Atlanta Districts Meet

The annual meetings of the north and the south Atlantic districts of the Woman's Missionary Society of Methodist Women will be held in Atlanta this week.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the women of the south Atlanta district will meet at the College Park Methodist church, with Mrs. J. C. White presiding. On Thursday and Friday, in the Wesley Memorial church, Mrs. Virlyn Moore will preside over a similar group of the women of the north Atlanta district.

These meetings are of particular interest because this is the time when plans are made for the work of the year and all conference officers will be present to plan for the various departments.

Women of both districts will be especially pleased with the announcement that Mrs. J. N. McEachern, conference corresponding secretary, will attend these meetings.

South Atlanta district meeting will be in session May 12 and 13 in College Park Methodist church.

The meetings will open at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day. Tuesday morning reports will be given by delegates representing fifty churches. In the afternoon the children's work will be presented and reports given.

Wednesday morning, prayer specials, Bible and mission study, social service, supplies and a local work will be brought before the body by the conference superintendents of these departments.

In the afternoon the young people will have charge of the program. A memorial service in memory of their beloved leader, Mrs. R. M. Striplin, will be held, reports given and a pageant, "The Call of the Cross," will be presented by St. Paul's young people.

The whole program has been arranged to inspire the women to go forward.

Briefly Told

Mrs. R. J. Atkinson, of Greenville, Ga., vice president of the North Georgia conference, Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. Church, South, was in Atlanta last week and presided over a meeting of the conference committee of the Bennett memorial.

Mrs. J. N. McEarchern, corresponding secretary of the North Georgia conference, Woman's Missionary society, M. E. Church, South, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Rankin Manley, in Morning Side drive. On account of Mr. McEachern's health, Mrs. McEachern has been in Winter Park, Fla., for the past several months. Mr. McEachern's health is now improving and they are both being cordially welcomed here.

Miss Mattie Timmons, a familiar figure at all missionary meetings wherever Methodist women of north Georgia gather, is ill at the Frances Berrien hospital in Rome, Ga. Miss Mattie was operated on for appendicitis and is recovering slowly but nicely.

Mrs. W. J. Culpepper, wife of the pastor of the East Eend Methodist Church, South, Atlanta district, has been approved by the Sunday school board as instructor in intermediate-senior psychology for standard training schools.

In the North Carolina conference of Methodist women held in Greenville, N. C., last week, interest was so keen that, after a talk on the need of the European fields, by Miss Daisy Davies, one delegate took a handsome diamond solitaire from her finger and gave it for missions. Others followed with Liberty bonds and other pieces of jewelry until quite a sum was realized.

Miss Frances Fulghum, formerly of Macon, now missionary in Fukuoka, Japan, is in the city en route to Memphis, Tenn., to attend the annual meeting of the Baptist W. M. U., May 13-17.

The following names appear upon the list of Georgia delegates who are leaving Monday, May 11, to attend the thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Southern Baptist W. M. U.: Mrs. W. J. Neel, Mrs. George Westmoreland, Miss Laura Lee Patrick, Miss Julia Allen, Miss Beulah Carraway, Miss Ida Rhoad, Mrs. G. S. Borders, Mrs. Ben Thompson, Mrs. Frank Dennis, Mrs. R. K. Redwine, Mrs. Frank Burney, Mrs. J. P. Nichols, Mrs. E. C. Laird, Mrs. F. W. Withoft, Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon, Mrs. H. H. Tift, Mrs. F. C McConnell, Miss Leachman, Mrs B. D. Gray, Mrs. W. T. Martin, Miss Myra Wilhite, Mrs. C. S. Claxton, Mrs. Mark O'Daniel, Mrs. R. B. Corminy, Mrs. J. T. Roberts and Mrs. O. E. Lancaster.

One of the delightful features of the sixth district rally held April 28 at Edgewood Baptist church was the presentation by Mrs. L. B. Crawford of a corsage bouquet to Mrs. A. G. Sullivan, secretary. This was a beautiful and worthy tribute to a successful and much loved officer.

The quarterly meeting of the board of the federated church women has been postponed from May 15 to a later date in May, the time and place to be announced shortly by the president.

The beloved president of the federated churchwomen, Mrs. T. L. Lewis, sends her sincere thanks to the page for its expression of sympathy in her sorrow, and for the flowers and other loving tokens of thoughtfulness and kindness.

The woman's auxiliary of St. Luke's Episcopal church is showing its cordial sympathy in interracial friendliness and Christian cooperation by sending some beautifully embroidered vestments and altar hangings to St. Paul's church for colored people, recently built on Auburn avenue.

All Saints woman's auxiliary has recently formed a similar committee for interracial service.

Episcopal Auxiliary Meets At St. Philip's This Week

The annual convention of the Episcopal women of the diocese of Atlanta in their organization, the Woman's Auxiliary, will bring to Atlanta many delegates from various parts of the state this week. St. Philip auxiliary members will entertain the convention, and have planned a most delightful series of luncheons for their guests, and will entertain them in their homes. Mrs. C. L. Pettigrew and Mrs. Crichton with their splendid co-workers are arranging all details. They will be assisted in entertaining by the ladies of the All Saints Auxiliary.

Following the officers conference on Monday afternoon May 11 at the residence of Miss Snook, the diocesan president, the convention will be formally opened on Tuesday, May 12. At half past seven in the morning there will be a corporate celebration of the Holy Communion, and an address by the bishop. Following breakfast there will be a quiet hour, and at half past ten the convention opens with the address of the president and officers reports, and a message from Bishop Mikell. There will be many interesting reports and general discussion of the work of the women in their departments of missions, social service and religious education. A most interesting feature will be reports of the parishes of their most worthwhile achievements. A genral discussion will be given the recommendations to the general convention auxiliary meeting in New Orleans in October, bearing on policies and extension. Of special interest will be the action on the great united thanks of offering of about a half million dollars for missions from women for women. Another interesting subject will be the Appleton church home.

On Wednesday, the Auxiliary convention will attend the opening session of the Diocesan council, and hear the bishop's address. They will then continue their business session and adjourn Wednesday afternoon. Many will remain to attend the sessions of the council.

Baptist Women Active in Macon.

"Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps."

This line came to my mind as I looked over the first assemblage of women at the Mission Study Institute of Rehoboth association held in Macon, Georgia, Tuesday morning, April 21. Between seventy-five and one hundred women were present at this session, the inspirational hour, who had come with vessels ready and lamps filled with the oil of desire. From the light that glowed on their faces I knew that their lamps were already lighted and just waiting to be trimmed for service.

Here they had come to this institute to relight or rekindle those wicks that were burning dimly and carry forth a bit of its great light into the dark places or to give light to another's waning lamp of knowledge.

This was the second annual mission institute for Rehoboth and a greater success than the one of last year. An earnestness of purpose, a desire to learn of the mission work, a willingness to take part in the studies, marked the attitute of each class.

The program was so arranged that each woman might take three books, a home, foreign, or inspirational study, if she so desired. The inspirational hour came each morning at ten and just after lunch each afternoon at two o'clock. The inspirational books were: The Plan of Salvation, taught by Mrs. Fred Stokes; How to Pray, by Miss Blossom Thompson; The Woman and Stewartship, by Mrs. J. B. Tallent; and The Ministry of Women, by Miss Julia Allen.

Each morning from eleven to one came the Home Mission hour. The books studied then were: The Christian in Social Relationships, taught by Miss Ida Rhoad; Adventures in Brotherhood, taught by Mrs. F. W. Withoft; Land of All Nations, by Mrs A. B. Bonstel; Mr. Fetend O'Man, taught by Mrs. E. T. Tichnor.

In the afternoon from three to five came the Foreign Mission hour. The books used in this period were: China's Real Revolution, taught by Mrs. A. P. Montague; Ming Kwong, taught by Miss Julia Allen; Torchbearers in China, by Mrs J. Aiden Wyche and Chinese Lanterns, by Miss Ida Rhoad. Josephine Jarrett Miabush.

Children of Missionary Leaders Honored.

George K. Smith, of Carrollton, Ga., who was recently elected president of the Emory University Y. M. C. A. and also president of the senior class for next year, is a son of the district secretary of the Rome District Woman's Missionary society, North Georgia conference, M. E., south, Mrs. L. K. Smith.

Miss Martha Jarrell, who was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society from Randolph Macon Woman's college, is the daughter of Mrs. C. C. Jarrell, recording secretary of the North Georgia Conference Woman's Missionary society, M. E. church, south.

Another announcement of interest is that T. S. Logan, of Emory university, has been elected professor of chemistry on the faculty of the Agricultural and Mechanical college for next year. Mr. Logan's mother is district secretary of the Gainesville district in missionary work.

In times past it has been htought that organized church work for women interfered to a large extent with the rearing and training of families, but these high honors coming to three of our missionary homes tend to explode such a theory.

A Trained Nurse

TRAINED nurses have many experiences, the results of which often are of interest and value to others. Mrs. Walter L. Trevathan, of Hopewell, Va., whose picture is printed above, is a trained nurse, serving in that profession until her marriage and taking up nursing again for a while during the war. What she has to say about her experience in the use of Cardui should be of vital interest to every woman who is afflicted with any of the symptoms she tells of.

"At times I have had such severe pains in my sides I did not know what to do," says Mrs. Trevathan. "I am a trained nurse by profession. I was on my feet a great deal and this seemed to aggravate my trouble.

"One day I read about Cardui in the paper at my home in Vermont. I got a bottle and tried it. It has done me a great deal of good. . . . The pains in my sides used to grow very intense. I would take Cardui by the directions and it helped me wonderfully.

"My appetite grew very poor. I did not care for anything to eat, but when I took a few doses of Cardui my appetite picked up. I wouldn't be without it."

Mrs. Trevathan says that she has recommended Cardui to a great many women whom she has nursed—"and always with beneficial results." "I am glad to make this statement," she adds, "so that other women may know about the wonderful benefits of Cardui."

Cardui is absolutely safe to take. It is made of pure, mild-acting vegetable ingredients and is prepared under sanitary conditions in up-to-date, scientific laboratories.

Take Cardui for your troubles.

National Hospital Day Will Be Observed May 12 at Hospital 48

In conformity with other hospitals in Atlanta, United States Veterans hospital, No. 48, will keep open house from 1 to 5 p. m. on the afternoon of May 12. Visitors will be conducted throughout the hospital and explanations will be given regarding treatment and care of the disabled ex-service men who are now patients in the Atlanta government hospital, Dr. F. N. Gordon, medical officer in charge.

National hospital day is appropriately observed throughout the nation each May 12 in commemoration of the birth of Florence Nightingale, who was born May 12, 1820. It was she who contributed much toward developing hospital service, and revolutionizing the profession of nursing.

The primary object of hospital day is to familiarize the general public with the activities within a hospital, in order that they may be fully informed as to services rendered in such institutions in a community.

Invitation Extended.

Dr. Gordon and his staff extend to the people of Atlanta a cordial invitation to visit Hospital No. 48 on May 12 and will endeavor to give any information desired. The staff will be assisted by the station Red Cross, the hospital committee, Atlanta chapter Red Cross, the Knights of Columbus, and all standing committees who do regular volunteer service in connection with Red Cross. These committees are as follows: Atlanta chapter, Red Cross, hospital committee; Junior Red Cross; the American Legion auxiliary; the Atlanta Woman's club hospital committee; the Atlanta Junior league; the Atlanta Overseas club; the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs; the Atlanta War Mother's Service Star legion; the Daughters of the American Revolution; the auxiliary of both camps Spanish-American War Veterans; the auxiliary to the G. A. R.; Young Women's auxiliary, St. Philip's church; the "I. C. Club," Immaculate Conception church; the James L. Mason Sunday school class, Grace church; Mother's class, First Baptist church; Argonne Post No. 1, American legion; post No. 1 Disabled American Veterans; Veterans of Foreign Wars; Fitzhugh Lee and Roosevelt camps, Spanish American Wars; Hai Resh fraternity.

Churches: Trinity Methodist, Epworth league; Wesley Memorial Methodist; Payne Memorial Methodist; Capitol Avenue Baptist; Central Presbyterian; Fortified Hills' Baptist; Georgia Avenue Baptist.

Personal gifts: Mrs. W. C. Mansfield, auto rides; Mrs. F. M. Swanson, Miss Lillie Stillwell and American Legion Auxiliaries, and Posts, State of Georgia.

Program To Be Presented.

Under the auspices of the Red Cross, a program will be given on the lawn of Hospital No. 48 between the hours of 1 and 5 o'clock on the afternoon of May 12.

The following program will be given: Presentation of bed lamps, donated by the auxiliary to Argonne Post No. 1, American legion, by Mrs. Asa Warren Candler, president, 2:45 p. m.; folk dances, Washington seminary, under auspices Junior Red Cross, Mrs. Louis Elsas, chairman, 3 p. m.; presentation of gifts from the American Legion auxiliaries of the state of Georgia and from other organizations; music by the 122d Infantry band, Georgia National guards, "Atlanta's Own," through the courtesy of Adjutant General Charles Cox, 4 p. m.; "Letty Riggles" (operetta) given by the Junior section Atlanta Council of Jewish Women, 4:30 p. m.

Miss Garrette Weds A. J. Gordon, Jr.

A wedding of interest to a large circle of friends was that of Miss Christine Garrette to A. J. Gordon, Jr., of Columbus, Ga., which was solemnized Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Thos. D. White, of this city, the Rev. Harold Shields officiating.

The bride is originally from Lynchburg, Va., but has spent the last few years in Atlanta. The wedding was very quiet and witnessed by only a few close friends and members of the family.

The bride wore a lovely dress of poudre blue georgette. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gordon left for Columbus, Ga., where they will make their future home.

Miss Gunnels Weds Gordon Huie.

Winter Haven, Fla., May 9.—A wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Snell on Lake Mirror last evening at 8:30 o'clock when Gordon Huie, of Haines City, Fla., and Miss Faltha Gunnels, of Albany, Ga., were united in marriage in the presence of more than half a hundred guests. The ceremony was performed in the spacious living room of the Snell home which had been attractively decorated in asparagus fern and white flowers, the central features being a beautiful arch and altar, banked with ferns.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. W. B Hentz played "The Last Smile," by Wallenhauph, and Miss Hildegard Robinson sang "I Love You Truly." The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohns wedding March. Accompanying the bride were Miss Mary Jim Crump, as maid of honor, and Miss Margaret Huie, a sister of the groom, as bridesmaids. Little Miss Anna Laura DeHaven was flower girl and Master Richard Addison acted as ring-bearer. The groom was accompanied by Howard Huie, a brother, as best man, and by Louis Angle.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white chiffon with a veil of tulle trimmed with orange blossoms and carried a bride's shower of roses and lilies of the valley. The brides maid and maid of honor wore gowns of pink georgette and carried arm bouquets of Russell roses. The little flower girl wore a dress of white net over pink satin and carried a white basket of rose petals tied with tulle. The ringbearer bore the ring on a white cushion.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. P. Harrison Griffin, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Winter Haven, Fla. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Snell home and Mr. and Mrs. Huie left on their honeymoon which is being spent in Cuba. Upon their return they will reside in Haines City, Fla.

Mr. Huie is a prominent real estate dealer of the Gateway City and is well and favorably known throughout Polk county and south Florida. He is a graduate of the local high school and of the law school of John B. Stetson university at Deland, Fla. His bride, who is a niece of Mrs. Snell, is a charming young lady and is highly popular in her home section and in Winter Haven, where she enjoys a wide friendship. They are receiving the congratulations of their many friends in Haines City and Winter Haven.

Miss Thompson Weds Thomas A. Pruett.

A marriage centering the interest of family and friends of the couple was that of Miss Ola Mae Thompson and Thomas A. Pruett, which was solemnized at the home of the bride on Wednesday evening, May 6, at 8 o'clock.

The attendants were Dennis Pruett and Miss Frances Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Thompson. The bridal party entered to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march and during the ceremony, "To a Wild Rose" was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Benton Thompson.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. W. W. Arnold in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends.

The bride is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Thompson.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Pruett, of Ellenwood, and is a prominent business man of Atlanta, holding a position with the International Mercantile Marine company.

Mr. and Mrs. Pruett left immediately after the ceremony for Atlanta, where they will make their home at 56 Westwood avenue.

Guardians of Camp Fire To Be Entertained.

The Guardians' association of the Camp Fire Girls will be entertained with a tea at the home of Mrs. Fred Hodgson on Clifton road Tuesday, May 12, at 4 o'clock.

An interesting program has been planned. Miss Louise Holland, executive secretary of the Atlanta Camp Fire, will tell the guardians about Lake Bennett, where Atlanta Camp Fire will camp during the month of June. Lake Bennett is one of the most beautiful spots in Georgia and camp fire is extremely fortunate in securing it for their camp. Miss Helen Bagley, assistant executive, of Atlanta, will give briefly a few of the interesting activities she has planned for the girls.

Those invited are: Mrs. Paul La Blant, Mrs. Marvin Underwood, Miss Myrtice O'Steen, Mrs. Tom Brooke, Miss Pauline Reynolds, Miss Julia Veal, Mrs. James G. Lester, Miss Anna Bell Leftwich, Mrs. R. L. Langston, Mrs. Babcock, Mrs. H. B. Ralls, Mrs. G. M. Howsmon, Miss Frances Howard, Miss Mary Nichols, Miss Virginia Wade, Mrs. M. D. Farnham, Mrs. J. G. Coleman, Miss Annie Lee Coleman, Miss Marion Smith, Miss Willie Love, Mrs. John Gilmore, Miss Louise Bloodworth, Mrs. M. E. Ghoesling, Mrs. Annie Mayson Linn, Miss Helen Freeman, Miss Frieda Embry, Miss Vera Milliner, Miss Kathleen Nelson, Miss Ethel Purcell, Miss Willene Pearce.

May Festival Is Held At Church St. School.

Church Street school held its annual May festival May 7, from 3 to 4:30 o'clock on the schools grounds, which were decorated by the mothers.

The queen of the May was Barbara Hutchins, who was enthroned and crowned with beautiful ceremony. The two heralds were Robert Harmon and Henry Lipes. The train bearers were Mary Rogers and June Summers. The crown bearer, carrying the crown of white roses, was Ruth Irvin. Frederick Guffin was Puck, the queen's jester.

A May pole dance was given by sixteen of the first and second grade girls. The drill was led by Sarah Coleman, the queen of the fairies, who gracefully did a fairy dance. Several selections on the piano were given by Mrs. Hemperly. After the close of the program the count of the mothers present showed Miss Hutcheson's room to be the winner of the attendance prize.

Mrs. T. N. Fulton, Miss Louise Williamson, Miss Sara Bagley and Miss Walter Dallas.

The council of girls of the Camp Fire Girls will hold its regular monthly luncheon at Camp Fire headquarters, 415 Chamber of Commerce building, Monday, May 11, at 2 o'clock. This will be the last meeting of the year.

"Camp" for the summer, to which all Camp Fire girls are looking forward, will be discussed at length. Pictures of Lake Bennett, where the Camp Fire girls will camp during the month of June, will be shown. Miss Hollands and Miss Bagley, executives, will tell the girls the plans for the camp. The camp folders and registration cards will be given out. Twenty-five members will be present.

"10 Meet Death—Over 70 Hurt In April Accidents in Atlanta" was a head line in last Friday's Constitution. "6 Dead—6 Injured in Accident Toll Sunday in Georgia" was another head line in Monday's Constitution, April 27.

Although The Constitution has been telling the people of Atlanta and Georgia of the great Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance Reader Service it is rendering to its subscribers and their families between the ages of 16 and 70—telling them and urging them for nearly four years to secure this protection at once, only one of those killed or injured referred to in the headlines had taken advantage of The Constitution's great accident insurance protection offer.

Would $5,000.00
$1,000.00
be worth anything to your family if you were killed or maimed in a travel accident, automobile accident or wreck, or by being struck or knocked down while crossing or walking the street? If not protected, why delay, when the cost is only $1.00 to Constitution subscribers?
Do It Now! Tomorrow May Be Too Late!

YOU MAY BE KILLED TODAY!

Get This Protection NOW---Today! Before it Is Too Late!

Over $22,000.00 has already been paid to Constitution subscribers in death and accident claims. The best is none too good for Constitution subscribers and their families, and the protection you get through The Constitution is by far the best offered by any Southern Newspaper.

CONSTITUTION POLICY COVERS YOU IF KILLED or INJURED

While riding or driving in an auto, truck or horse-driven vehicle, either for PLEASURE or BUSINESS, or while riding as a passenger in any public omnibus, taxicab or automobile stage, or the wrecking of a passenger elevator.

If struck or knocked down while walking on a public highway or public street by an automobile, street car, or other vehicle, or burned to death, or suffocated therein, private residence, office building, lodge building, etc., or while riding as a passenger on a street car, railroad train, or steamship.

To Subscribers of The Constitution

$5000.00 Travel Accident Insurance Policy.

For a Registration Fee of $1.00

POLICY INCREASES 10% PER YEAR TO $7,500.00 VALUE IN FIVE YEARS.

$1,000.00 automobile, omnibus, taxicab, motorcycle, passenger elevator, accidental death. Death caused by burning of dwelling house, hotel, theater, office building, lodgeroom, clubhouse, school building, store, church, or barn, or suffocated by smoke while therein.

GIRL SCOUT LEADERS ATTEND CONVENTION

Local Girl Scout leaders will leave next week to attend the eleventh annual convention of Girl Scouts, Inc., to be held in Boston, Mass., at the Somerset Hotel, May 18-24. More than 500 Girl Scout leaders, commissioners and associates, from all over the United States, will attend the conference. Atlanta will be represented by Mrs. Frank D. Holland, commissioner; Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, deputy-commissioner; Mrs. James C. Thrower, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Harvey L. Parry, local director.

The governor of Massachusetts will greet the convention, at the Girl Scout opening ceremony, which will be conducted by Mrs. Arthur W. Hartt, commissioner of Massachusetts. The founder of the Girl Scouts, Mrs. Juliette Low, of Savannah, Georgia, will reply to the governor. Mrs. Herbert Hoover, national president of the Girl Scouts, will give her annual message. Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, national treasurer, will tell how the new national headquarters was won, and Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippin, national director, will tell how the various departments of the national organization function in their new home.

Discussion at the convention will center around problems that confront the American girl of today, and how the Girl Scouts movement can best be utilized to help. Among topics to be discussed are education, the Girl Scout in her home, the citizen Scout, and the Girl Scout out of doors.

The Girl Scouts of Massachusetts will pass in review before the national officers and delegates to the convention at the annual rally, Saturday, May 23 at the arena.

Preceding the convention, Mrs. Holland and Mrs. Ashcraft will attend the commissioners' training course, to be given by Mrs. Frederick Edey, chairman of the national Field Committee. Mrs. Parry will attend the directors' conference headed by Mrs. Rippin, national director, and will also remain for the annual training week, at Cedar Hill, which will follow after the close of the convention under the direction of Miss Sarah Louise Arnold, Dean Emeritus of Simmons College and a member of the National Girl Scout Executive Board.

DR. BUNCE URGED FOR CHANCELLOR BY W. J. VEREEN

William J. Vereen, prominent business man of south Georgia, in a letter to the trustees of the University of Georgia, urges the appointment of Dr. Allen H. Bunce, of Atlanta, to succeed Chancellor David Barrow upon the latter's retirement in June. The letter was received by Judge Richard B. Russell, chairman of the board of trustees and was made public Saturday.

Dr. Seale Harris of Birmingham, Ala., first made the suggestion that Dr. Bunce be given the post and the letter of Mr. Vereen comes as a strong second to the first suggestion.

"Georgia would be most fortunate to have as chancellor of her university a man of such distinguished attainments as Dr. Bunce," Dr. Harris wrote in his letter. "Dr. Bunce has made an unusual success in medicine and for some time has been editor of the Georgia Medical Journal, accomplishing much for the advancement of medicine in Georgia."

GEORGE T. DAVIS, FAMOUS TRAVELER, TO SPEAK TODAY

George T. B. Davis, famous world traveler and leader of the Pocket Testament league, will speak at 7:45 o'clock tonight at the North Avenue Presbyterian church, and Rev. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the church, Saturday night issued an invitation to the public to attend.

Mr. Davis has just returned from extensive travels in China, where he was associated with that great Christian Chinese general, Cheng. General Cheng rose from the rank of private to general.

Mr. Davis was a member of Dr. Wilbur Chapman's party when that noted evangelist conducted a series of meetings in Atlanta a number of years ago.

LEDBETTER NAMED TO COMMISSION POST

Appointment of L. S. Ledbetter, of Cedartown, as United States commissioner to succeed the late Commissioner W. Colquitt Carter was announced Saturday by Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of the federal court. The appointment becomes effective June 1.

Mr. Ledbetter has been engaged in the insurance business in Cedartown for a long number of years and has taken an active part in state politics, having served several terms as a member of the legislature and also serving as manager of the campaign committee of United States Senator William J. Harris.

Commissioner Joe Abbott has announced he would return to his home in Marietta after June 1 and would not be an applicant for reappointment to his post.

DR. OWENSBY TO SPEAK BEFORE B'NAI B'RITH

Dr. Newdigate Owensby will deliver an address upon "The Mentally Defective Child" at the meeting of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, Gate City lodge No. 144, at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the Standard club.

The Georgettes, an orchestra composed of girls, will play and sing for the meeting. Dinner will be served at the meeting. The program will include several interesting features.

Peacock To Speak.

Professor Wesley Peacock will speak to the Atlanta Psychological society this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. Professor Peacock is a well-known educator and psychologist and an interesting speaker.

Broadway Banter

BY FORNEY WYLY

Varnessi, noted dancer, and Willie Howard in leading roles in "Sky High," latest New York success.

The Winter Garden, even in spring, is a most satisfying place to go. Even if the show were not as entertaining as the present one is, much could be forgiven, for here this theater you are allowed to smoke before, during and—if you want to—after the performance. You have that very comfortable feeling of getting away with something, and you feel as though you owe it to yourself to never let there be a smokeless moment during the entire evening. On the back of the seat in front of you is an ash tray, but even with all these conveniences, I did hear the woman behind me say, "They didn't leave me any cigarettes." It will only be a couple of years, I am sure, before there will be individual telephones and shower baths with each seat.

"Sky High" is the present show—an excellent musical production—and it needs no Fatimas to get it over. It's the "dancingest" show in town, "Varnessi" being the particular dancer whose work you will follow rather closely. Willie Howard is the featured player and is really very funny. You can imagine my start when Mr. Howard in one of his scenes, raised a glass of stage champagne to the audience and said, "Here's to The Atlanta Constitution." There was one awful moment when I seriously considered rising and bowing, but just in time I seemed to remember it was always best to appear slightly annoyed at these things, though inwardly I hadn't been as pleased since the day one of my grammar-school teachers fell down the stairs and broke her back.

Even before this occurred—not the back-break—I had definitely decided "Sky High" was a thoroughly good show, and Willie Howard decidedly clever. The show has one of the largest choruses in town, and they all but dance themselves crazy before they get through. They have lots and lots of new steps and chorus formations, and to the accompaniment of the very snappy music, see that there's never a dull moment for you.

There are two decided song hits in the show. "Let It Rain" is a decidedly snappy number and comes nearer to making whistling excusable than anything I've heard in a long time. Victor Herbert's last waltz, "Give Your Heart in June," is also included in the score and is one of the most beautiful of the late Mr. Herbert's melodies.

By all means see "Sky High" and don't forget to bring your Old Mills with you.

Well-known movie stars have contracted a habit of making vaudeville appearances quite often of late. That old favorite, Clara Kimball Young, for whom you used to vote in the "Popular Players" contests, headlined the Palace vaudeville bill here a week or so ago in a dramtic playlet, Louise Glaum, one of the movie home-breakers of the Theda Bara period, also appeared in one of the New York Keith houses recently, and without my telling you, you would have known the name of any skit in which she would have appeared would be "The Web." By the way, as I left a movie theater not long ago, one of those persons to whom the true meaning of life is to point out celebrities, informed me that immediately ahead of us was Flora Finch. Always have I had an insatiable desire to see Flora Finch, and see her I did. The camera doesn't seem to be so kind to Flora, for in the flesh she looks much younger than the screen appears willing to admit. Mary Hay (Mrs. Richard Barthelmess) and Clifton Webb also have been dancing in the New York Keith houses recently.

Atlanta was well-represented at dinner at the Plaza on Sunday night. The William A. Speers seemed to be enjoying to the utmost their well-chosen dinner of Plaza what-nots. It looked at one time as if some of the theaters would have to give morning performances if Mr. and Mrs. Speer were to see all of the shows they have on their list. 'Gene Kelley was another enthusiastic diner who seemed to find the food much to his liking. 'Gene is here for a few days from Chicago where he is a vice president of the Coca-Cola company. He is particularly remembered in Atlanta as one of the most energetic and untiring of the acrobatic-ballroom dancers. His terpsichorean antics with local Irene Castles in the various social clubs always caused a pleasant murmur of comment among the onlookers. William J. McKenna and his charming and delightful wife, Isoline Campbell McKenna, also were present. They are en route from Atlanta to their home in Pride's Crossing. Mrs. McKenna, in particular, spoke quite glowingly of Atlanta's opera week.

In "Taps" is to be found some of the most excellent acting in town. Lionel Barrymore is starred and Irene Fenwick (Mrs. Lionel Barrymore) featured. In addition to them, we have McKay Morris, recently co-starred with Julia Hoyt in "The Virgin of Bethulia" and also Ullrich Haupt. The scene of the play is laid in Alsace in the year 1903. The plot in itself is not startingly new, but it is so brilliantly acted you forget about that. "Taps," like "What Price Glory," has but one woman in the cast. Mr. Barrymore, who plays Miss Fenwick's father, is of course a wonderful actor or his name wouldn't be Barrymore. Think of John, Lionel, Ethel and the in-law Miss Fenwick, all being in one family, a bridge-game of celebrities for you right there. Miss Fenwick handles the rather difficult role of Klarchen quite convincingly. McKay Morris as Lieutenant Von Lauffen is excellent, while Ullrich Haupt gives a noteworthy piece of acting as Captain Helbig. The acting in this play ranks along with that in "They Knew What They Wanted" which is generally regarded as the best acted production of the year.

I have not seen a play this season staged more beautifully than "Taps." The squadron-room set as well as the lighting in this act is a rare bit of artistry. You'll enjoy "Taps," I believe, and it's quite different from the average run of plays.

"Artists and Models" has come to be the revue which most of the visitors from the provinces go first to see. Almost before depositing the hat bag and the parrot-cage, many of the out-of-towners rush to cosmopolitanize themselves by seeing this most far-famed of revues, primarily with the hope of finding all they've heard about it true.

The present edition of the revue, incidentally the second one, is excellent entertainment of the lighter sort. It's really brim full of clever sketches, the thing most glittering revues lack. Barnett Parker is as funny as anybody I've seen on Broadway, and a man who can get any attention whatever in a show of the "Artists and Models" type is almost a genius. Mr. Parker is by no means the only clever comedian in the revue.

There's a particularly funny skit presented first as it would have been in 1884, the Laura Jean Libbey period, and then as it is now in 1925. There's another clever one concerning the disappearance of an emerald necklace at a dinner party. The lights are lowered to allow the guilty party to put the necklace on a gold platter placed on the center of the table. When the lights go up, the platter is also gone. There's the male impersonation of the "Tiller Girls," which, I believe, your junior league included in its this year's follies.

* * * *

The revue is very colorful and spectacular. The music is quite light and catchy, written for the most part by Sigmund Romberg when he was feeling a bit more frivolous than he was when he wrote "The Student Prince" music. "Tomorrow's Another Day" is particularly pretty.

What you've been waiting to hear is whether or not certain scenes are us—er—let us say "artistic" as these self-same scenes were in last year's revue. Well, they are, only more so. In fact, a sneeze or so on the part of the participants could very easily be understood, and I am sure, entirely overlooked by a sympathetic audience. It occurs to me all of the models in this show must have had the cold serum.

There are more and better models this year, and as for the artists, of what possible importance can they be in such a show?

Much is there being said as to just why Lenore Ulric has left the cast of "The Harem" and what is the real cause of her disagreement with Mr. Belasco. Of the thousand and one reasons afloat, I do not doubt but that the following have some very direct bearing on whatever the trouble is: To begin with, it was Mr. Belasco's wish that Miss Ulric play still another season of "Kiki." This Miss Ulric said she simply couldn't do, she'd been playing it for a number of years, and she couldn't see playing it any more. After that was disposed of, Mr. Belasco chose "The Harem" for her this season's appearance, a play Miss Ulric has disliked from the start, despite its unquestioned success. Now those in the know say that the alert Miss Ulric had cast quite a longing eye on that excellent part in "The Dove," which Mr. Belasco gave to his new star, the comely Judith Anderson, whom you may have seen last year in "Cobra." This, we believe, can hardly be said to have added greatly to Lenore's state of happiness. The final blow, so the tabbies have it, came about when the motion picture rights of "Kiki" were sold for Norma Talmadge to play it. It is quite possible Miss Ulric, though tired of the stage production, had nevertheless planned to cavort across the silver-sheet in the play. Under the circumstances, I am sure we all agree this is just one of those plans which went where is known as "up the creek." Some or all of these reasons must have had some connection with her withdrawal from "The Harem" cast, which, incidentally, Mr. Belasco intends to keep going, with Vivienne Osburne, lately of "Aloma of the South Seas," taking the Ulric part.

* * * *

The spectacular "Starlight," in which Doris Keane was starred, has now come to the end of its engagement. We have been told, among other things, that Miss Keane's plans for an immediate trip to Europe was the cause of its withdrawal, but I strongly suspect its being rather largely unattended was the real reason. Parts of "Starlight," which everybody and everything except the management and the program told us was the story of Bernhardt's life, I found very interesting. However, there were times when Miss Keane was simly too kittenish for words. The show boasted of at least one daringly frank situation. It was the sort of scene which would cause Mrs. Nimmons, after seeing, to immediately ring up Mrs. Bainbridge and say, "Don't go to 'Starlight;' it's disgusting." This, no one is so foolish as not to know, is merely Mrs. Nimmons' way of telling Mrs. Bainbridge to get seats for "Starlight" at the first possible moment.

ADEL ATTORNEY DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Adel, Ga., May 8.—(Special.)—Colonel Joe Z. Jackson, a resident of Adel, died at Madison, Fla., today. He had been in ill health for some time.

He was one of the best known lawyers in this section.

GOVERNOR OF TEXAS ADDRESSES AD MEN

Houston, Texas, May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—More than 1,000 delegates, disciples of "truth in advertising," many from overseas, were on the ground for the opening of the twenty-first convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World here tonight.

The first session of the five-day meeting was in the nature of a welcome, marked by a wealth of color and considerable ceremony.

Early in the evening, Governor Miriam A. Ferguson was escorted from her train to a hotel by a detachment of cavalry, a color guard of marines and a squad of Houston police. She moved through streets thickly hung with flags of many nations. Banners designed for the convention bore the word "truth," the slogan of the advertising men, over the imprint of two continents in a circle with the name of the organization around the rim.

At the municipal auditorium Governor Ferguson welcomed the gathering. She told them that Texas and Houston felt honored by their presence and hoped they would carry away an impression of the state, its resources and its opportunities in keeping with the largest member of the family in the American union.

Tomorrow forenoon, services have been planned for the delegates at 14 churches. The program calls for addresses by delegates to the convention, including Rev. Kerrison Juniper, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Frank McClure, Chicago; Sidney J. Fox, London, England, and Joe Mitchell Chapple, magazine editor, Boston.

In the afternoon an inspirational meeting is scheduled with Lynch Davidson, of Houston, former lieutenant governor, presiding. Congressman Charles A. Eaton, of New Jersey, is down for the principal adress on "Advertising as a Means to World Progress," and at the night meeting, United States Senator Morris Sheppard is to talk on "The Economic Influence of World Peace."

Meanwhile, departmental meetings, embracing almost every branch of advertising, were sprinkled through the meeting. Poster advertising men already have set up in the auditorium a wealth of exhibits of advertising of nationally known products and specialty advertising men have added exhibits of their wares.

MUSIC WEEK ENDS WITH FINE CONCERT

The woman's division of the chamber of commerce sponsored the final concert in observance of National Music week Saturday evening at the Wesley Memorial church.

Miss Susie C. Wailes, president, was introduced and spoke briefly concerning the work of the woman's division.

Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards, chairman of the music committee, presented to the audience the members of the committee, whose efforts made National Music week in Atlanta one long to be remembered in music history.

The Griffith School of Music contributed several delightful numbers, among them a harp quintet and a harp ensemble of children under the direction of Mrs. Griffith Dobbs, as well as a mandolin orchestra, directed by William B. Griffith. Several other pleasing numbers were heard on the program.

MRS. OCTAVIA GUTHRIE DIES IN KISSIMMEE

News was received in Atlanta Saturday of the death of Mrs. Octavia Guthrie in a private hospital in Kissimmee, Fla., Friday. She was the mother of Mrs. Harriet Trammell, of the Georgian Terrace hotel, Atlanta. Mrs. Trammell left Friday night to attend funeral services in Kissimmee, Fla. In addition to her daughter, Mrs. Trammell, of this city, she is survived by another daughter, Mrs. J. J. Armstrong, of Decatur, Texas.

MATHER FINDS FLOORS BOYS CANNOT HARM

"Mrs. Gray" was one of those home-loving bodies who could not exist without lovely and restful things around her. She also was a proud and happy mother of four growing small boys, boys who had dogs, played baseball and went skating. The question of bringing up the boys properly wasn't half so trying to her as to how to bring them up properly in a house that was at the same time practical and beautiful.

"Mrs. Gray" decided that first of all there must be a beautiful living room, a living room where the whole family could live.

The floor was the first thing to consider. Hardwood would scratch easily; she decided upon a linoleum, a Jaspe design in a warm brown tone.

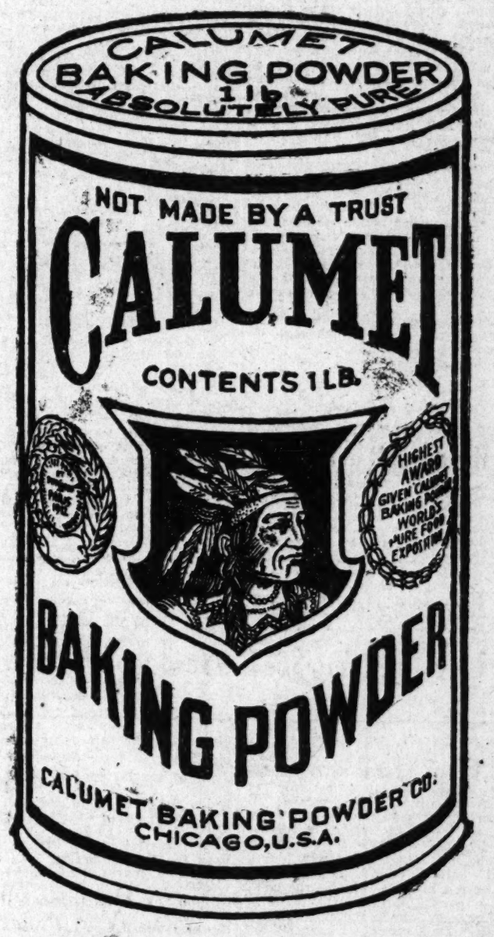

Then she hunted for upholstery fabrics that would be beautiful and stand hard usage. She thought corduroy would be the best thing to use for the big couch, so she selected a soft blue. For the big easy chair at the fireplace she selected a brown monk's cloth. For her window curtains she chose a gaily flowered cretonne that could easily be washed, and for her inside draperies, one of the new drapery mohairs that are both sunfast and non-wrinkable. Such old pieces as she had were recovered either with the monk's cloth or the corduroy, or in a heavy rep. Lamps were selected for their heavy bases, because they would be more difficult to upset, and today "Mrs. Gray" surveys her living room with real satisfaction.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS TO HONOR MOTHERS

A special Mother's Day program will be presented Sunday morning at the Men's Bible Class of St. Mark Methodist Sunday school.

Judge H. Warner Hill, teacher of the class will lecture and special musical numbers will be given.

As a result of a recent attendance contest, in which the Men's Bible class was victorious, the class has shown a considerable increase in enrollment and general attendance.

New York, May 9.—Prospects for further beneficial rains or showers in the south over Sunday, led to increased offerings on a moderate early advance in the cotton market today. After selling up to 23.17, July eased off to 23.02, and closed at 23.04, the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 3 to 10 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 10 points to a decline of two points, most months being higher on covering promoted by talk of a firm technical position following the declines earlier in the week. Except for the rebuying of recent sellers and a little trade demand, there appeared to be very little support, but early offerings were comparatively light and active positions sold about 9 to 12 points net higher before the end of the first hour. This carried the price of May up to 23.18 and October to 22.87, recoveries of about 30 to 35 points from the low levels of Thursday, but the demand tapered off at these figures, and the market weakened later on favorable weather news.

Offerings were not particularly heavy and trading remained quiet on the decline which extended to 23.00 for May and 22.70 for October in late trading, or 6 to 8 points net lower. Last prices were within a point or two of the lowest.

Reactionary sentiment found considerable expression during the earlier trading being based chiefly on belief that the market had gone some way toward discounting high end-May condition report and that a large short interest had probably accumulated. The prospect for further showers or rain in the eastern belt, however, strengthened confidence in the bearish view of the new-crop start, and selling on the weather forecast was encouraged by continued complaints of a poor demand for cotton goods, reports of increased mill curtailment in Fall River and relatively easy Liverpool cables.

Fall River sales of cloths for the week were estimated at 30,000 pieces and production there was reported to be hardly 50 per cent of normal.

MARKET QUIET AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, May 9.—The short session of the cotton market today was generally quiet, although there was a fair spurt of activity near the close due to the customary evening up of commitments for over the week-end. Prices developed no definite trend. October opened 2 points up at 22.26 and after some slight recession advanced to 22.49, or 5 points over the close of yesterday, but reacted later to 22.34. After fluctuating in the final trading that month closed at 22.39, or 5 points net down for the day. The other active positions closed 2 to 4 points net lower and May closed unchanged.

At the start Liverpool was about as due and the local market opened 4 points down to 2 up. The early advance was due to the map showing of practically no rain in the central and eastern portions of the belt and rather too much rain in the west. On this bulge December advanced to 22.61, or 7 points above the previous close.

Later on the market turned easier on the official forecast for rain in the eastern half of the belt over Sunday which traders thought would relieve that section's shortage of moisture. This decline carried July down to 23.17 and December to 22.47, or 7 points below the previous close for both months. The irregular fluctuations near the end were due to evening up for over the week-end.

By resolution of the directors, the local exchange will suspend business for five minutes before the issue of the government condition report on June 2 and for 10 minutes following the publication to prevent hysterical trading. The same course was followed last year for the final reports.

Coffee.

New York, May 9.—Coffee futures lost the greater part of yesterday's recovery in today's trading owing to a renewal of liquidation and trade selling. Early cables from Brazil showed no weakness, but the selling here was supposed to reflect lack of confidence in the maintenance of primary markets with the approach of early new crop receipts. After opening eight points higher to six points lower, the market broke to 14.20 for July, or 45 points net lower. Last prices were the lowest for the day, showing net losses of 20 to 60 points. Sales were estimated at 71,000. Closing quotations: May, 15.50; July, 14.20; September, 13.05; October, 12.90; December, 12.58; January, 12.40; March, 12.03.

Spot coffee nominal: Rio 7's, 18½; Santos 4's, 21½ to 22½. No fresh offers were reported in the cost and freight market. Rio exchange on London 1-16d higher. Dollar buying rate 50 reis lower. Rio market 25 to 275 reis higher. Santos, 75 to 350 reis higher. Brazilian port receipts, 33,000 Jundiahy, 24,000.

Chicago, May 9.—Smashed down by the government crop report, wheat prices today suffered a break of as much as 7c a bushel. The wheat market closed shaky at about the day's lowest levels, 5 1-4c to 7c under yesterday's finish. Last trades were at 162 to 162 1-2 for May delivery and 150 1-2 to 150 3-4 for July. Corn closed at 11-4 to 2 5-8c net decline; oats 7-8 to 1 1-2c off, and provisions 20 to 37c drop.

A wild rush to sell began in the wheat pit as soon as trading opened. Demoralization of the market increased rather than diminished during the subsequent dealings and the most drastic of the declines came late. Notwithstanding that the government report indicated a much smaller crop of winter wheat than was harvested last year, the salient fact was that the probable yield would be 15,000,000 or 20,000,000 bushels more than the majority of traders had looked for.

It was in vain that Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas, where the surplus wheat largely comes from, were said to promise only 166,000,000 bushels as against 289,000,000 bushels last year. Buying based on such a basis proved to be only a transient barrier to the rapid downward swing of values. Assertions were likewise almost wholly ignored that the government showed more abandond acreage than any authority.

Opposite to what is usually the case under such circumstances, no important new export business in wheat developed, or at least none was announced. Another factor which tended to depress the market was cool, rainy weather over the greater part of the wheat belt, a condition likely to emphasize to material extent the prospect outlined in the government report.

Corn and oats were influenced chiefly by the action of wheat.

Provisions gave way with grain, regardless of higher prices on hogs.

Rail Efficiency Revealed By 1924 Accomplishments

Out of every dollar received in 1924 by the nation's railroads from actual operation of their lines, 44.4 cents was paid out for salaries and wages, 31.8 cents was devoted to other operating expenses, 5.7 cents went for taxes and 16.5 cents was left as net operating income. This is according to estimates made by the committee on public relations of Eastern railroads and represents a remarkable showing when comparison is made with the 1920 results. In that year, only 3-10 of one cent out of every dollar received from operations was left as net operating income after payment of running expenses. Last year saw an increased proportion of net operating income even though gross income fell off. Taxes are one item of considerable importance which have taken up a steadily increasing proportion of total revenues. To illustrate what taxes mean to railroads, the committee on public relations has prepared the following table showing taxes paid as compared with cash dividends paid by railroads:

	Cash Dividends	Taxes Paid
1916	$306,176,937	$162,474,735
1917	322,395,779	215,140,471
1918	275,336,547	223,595,268
1919	278,516,908	232,363,445
1920	271,731,669	282,750,533
1921	288,511,328	275,138,134
1922	271,576,000	301,003,227
1923	297,513,229	336,381,765
1924	303,000,000	350,000,000

Since 1921, the figures indicate taxes paid have exceeded cash dividend disbursements. A comparison of the earnings statements for 1924 of leading railroads with 1923 shows a substantial reduction in gross revenues, despite which larger balances were reported as applicable to dividends. And thus far in 1925, railroads have continued last year's efficient operations. Railroads have considerable to accomplish yet, however, before they will as a whole pay returns on invested capital that are commensurate with returns being paid by other divisions of industry.

Combined average	92.72	92.68
Combined month ago	91.49
Year ago	88.18
Total bond sales, $7,225,000.

New York, May 9.—Bond prices continued to make progress today despite the temporary restraint placed on trading by realizing sales. Fluctuations were confined to extremely narrow limits, but a firm undertone prevailed and there were evidence of accumulation by strong banking interests in certain sections of the list.

Buying activity in the Japanese group was curtailed today coincident with denials by bankers negotiations had been opened for a $25,000,000 city of Tokio loan. Both the Japanese government sixes and the Tokio fives declined fractionally after selling at the year's highest levels.

The recent brisk advance in many railroad litens invited profit taking today. Among the issues which lost ground were Chicago and Alton 3 1-2s, Chicago and Terre Haute income fives, Florida, Western and Northern sevens, Seaboard adjustment fives, Frisco income sixes and St. Louis Southwestern fours, most of which had been in the fore-front of the week's advance. Realizing also extended to the public utilities list, causing a two-point recession in Standard Gas six halfs.

Buying power was not wholly lacking, however, and was effective in causing substantial improvement in Rock Island refunding fours, Wheeling and Lake Erie refunding 4 1-2s, New York Railway 4s, Western Union sixes, Pierce Arrow 8s and Fisk Rubber 8s.

The Day in Finance

Coolidge's Economy Campaign and the Criticism That Is Being Heard in Various Quarters.

BY R. L. BARNUM

New York, May 9.—Friends of the administration, senators and others visiting the white house this week after trips home were reported as saying that President Coolidge is being criticized by business men for his campaign urging economy in government expenses. As part of his economy campaign to permit a reduction in taxes, President Coolidge recently rode in an ordinary public Pullman car instead of a private car, to set an example, and likewise at Easter-time instead of buying a new hat and suit had his old hat and clothes pressed. Retail merchants throughout the country are saying it was reported from Washington this week that the Coolidge economy campaign is having a retarding effect on buying, that retail trade has been falling off, that a buyers' strike similar to that which existed after the war is making its appearance.

If retail sales continue to fall off, President Coolidge and his close advisors are being told, it will only be a question of a short time until manufacturers will be affected. With manufacturing thus being forced to slow down, it is being declared, general prosperity will be affected. President Coolidge is being urged to say less about economies, Washington reports, in the hope that the present psychology on the part of the big buying public will be changed.

Friends of the administration, senators and others who are making the foregoing reports to the white house doubtless will be surprised and pained to learn the reaction of outstanding Wall street men to this criticism of the Coolidge economy campaign. Here is what one Wall street banker who is called highly successful by everyone who knows him had to say, but with the understanding that his name was not to be used:

"To find out that President Coolidge is being criticised by business men for taking the steps he has for trying to bring about a return to sane living makes me see red. I did not think business men could be so dumb as to put an unfavorable interpretation on what President Coolidge has said and done in his economy campaign. To my way of thinking this criticism simply shows how wrong these business men are in their own point of view. What President Coolidge has done and said is based on sound fundamentals. How can anything wrong come from something that is fundamentally right?"

Asked for details as to exactly what he meant the highly successful Wall street banker in question continued: "A day or so ago I met an old friend of mine and just by way of making talk asked the usual question, 'How's business?' I knew he had just closed his books for his business year which runs from May to May. His reply to my question was 'Business is rotten.' I asked him how much he made this year. His answer was: 'Only $20,000.' I did not say anything more but when I had time I did some thinking.

"The first year my friend made $12,000. That was a year or so before the war. I can remember when he told me about it his face showed that he had not really believed up to that time that there was so much real money in the world that could be placed to his personal account and spent. During the war my friend made as much as $70,000 in one year. His trouble now is that he just cannot live that down. He cannot get it into his head that profits in something like a normal peace time year can be compared to war time profits when the house is afire and nobody stops to shop about to get fire extinguishers at fair or bargain prices.

"Going out home in the country only last night I heard a fellow traveller in the Pullman smoking car ask the conductor to redeem an old unused ticket costing a dollar. The conductor said he couldn't as the company would think it was a ticket he had failed to turn in. The conductor said that if it was sent to Chicago in a letter the dollar would be refunded, to which the man while tearing up the ticket to throw on the floor said, 'Oh, I haven't time to bother with that.' When you think of what is involved in such a frame of mind it is horrifying."

Our banker friend expressed the belief that his traveling companion of last night was probably one of those who are criticising President Coolidge for his economy campaign, adding "A dollar today is only worth 63 cents and the way it is being spent by some people it is not worth thirty cents. Some people do not seem to be able to get it into their heads that the war with the chance to make war profits permitting extravagant living is over.

"President Coolidge, who is well grounded in economics knows that it was necessary to build up a big government machine during the war to help win the war; he knows that in order to run the big war time government machine it was necessary to impose high taxes; that high taxes in peace times are demoralizing to business in general; that the way to get taxes down is to reduce government expenses; that government expenses are not likely to be reduced if our own personal living expenses and habits are kept on the crazy level permitted by war time profits. He wants to get government expenses down so that taxes may be reduced and normal business conditions restored and is setting a fine example personally of returning to sane standards of living.

"From my point of view the business men who are criticising the economy policy of President Coolidge are like the one-armed man trying to wind a wrist watch. Trying to get war time profits in peace times just cannot be done. Those who have not sense enough to see this will be made to see it through the working out of natural economic laws.

"For weeks and weeks the average commodity price has been making a new low for 1925. Why? Because business men, like the government, built up in war times a big machine to help win the war. Late in 1924 and early in 1925 some people had the idea that our large war time industrial machine could be operated at full speed to show high war time profits. The result was overproduction and the result of overproduction was declining prices. Knowing that overproduction existed and that holding off from buying would bring lower prices buyers have waited. That is at the bottom of the so-called buyers' strike, that and the knowledge that some lines are holding out for war profits, thus throwing a monkey wrench in our whole business machine. Those who are willing to follow the example of President Coolidge in cutting down expenses, living sanely and working hard will show satisfactory results for 1925."

DAY'S SUMMARY.

	20 Indus.	20 R. R.
Saturday	120.01	100.94
Friday	120.22	101.30
Week ago	117.75	101.02

Low 1925	114.31	96.13
Total stocks sales 737,600.

New York, May 9.—(By The Associated Press.)—Strength of the motor and tire stocks, several of which attained new peak prices for the year, was the distinguishing feature of today's brief session of the stock market. The general list disclosed considerable irregularity as a result of the usual weekend readjustment of speculative accounts.

Further accumulation of the automotive issues was based on reports of high current earnings, due to the unusually heavy spring demand for cars and the relatively low production costs as a result of the recent softening of basic commodity prices. Willys Overland common and preferred, Mack Trucks, Continental Motors, Pierce Arrow and Packard preferred all sold at new high prices for the year.

Predictions of higher prices for tires as a result of the recent increase in the price of crude rubber brought fresh buying into the rubber group, United States Rubber, common and preferred, and Kelly Springfield, all mounting to new high ground.

The April tonnage report of the United States Steel Corporation showing a decrease of 416,993 tons in unfilled orders, which was issued at the close of the market, was slightly larger than Wall Street had anticipated. Trading in the steel shares was rather quiet pending the publication of this statement. U. S. Steel common closing fractionally lower at 115.

Heavy buying of Transcontinental Oil, which touched a new high level for the year, was the only feature in the petroleum group. American Sumatra Tobacco preferred, which recorded a sensational advance on urgent short covering yesterday, opened 3 1-4 points lower but soon made up its loss and advanced a point above last night's close.

Realizing sales brought about moderate recessions in some of the public utilities. American and Foreign Power, Columbia Gas & Electric and Montana Power dropped a point or so, while Utah Securities fell back more than four points to 118 1-2.

Reactionary tendencies in the rail group were particularly pronounced in Southern Railway, which closed more than two points lower at 91 1-2 on selling inspired by President Harrison's remark that an increase in the common dividend has not been considered and by Union Pacific, Wheeling & Lake Erie Pfd., Lehigh Valley and New York, Ontario & Western, all of which closed a point or two lower.

Foreign exchange rates held relatively firm with trading of the usual week-end character. Demand sterling ruled unchanged around $4.84 1-2 and French francs around 5.20 1-2 cents. The Canadian dollar still was quoted at a slight premium.

Floating Supply of Many Stock Issues in Strong Hands---Platt

New York, May 9.—(Special to The Constitution.)—The stock market was strong during much of the past week. About a dozen stocks made new highs for all time or the best record in recent years, and many others made the best figures they have seen since the March declines started. There were periods of profit-taking reactions, but in no case did these extend far enough to alarm holders into heavy liquidation. A few stocks were weak, but in each case there was some special development affecting the particular issue to account for this. The stock market has been backed up for some time by big interests. They bought stocks in large quantities on the March declines, and while they took their profits on the first rallies in April, they reaccumulated stocks on reactions last month. The public did very little trading through April but has been doing much more in May so far, which resulted in a restoration of a 2,000,000-share trading day in the past week.

The accumulation of stocks that took place in April has placed the floating supply of many issues in strong hands. These holders are bullish on the outlook, believing that the low point has been reached in the business recession and that general business conditions will be much better towards the close of the year. There are indications of an improvement now in the steel industry. Motor car production has continued at a very high rate. There is a good volume of business for this season of the year in many other lines. The main cause for optimism over the business outlook is to be found in the steady improvement which is taking place in the situation abroad. The restoration of the gold standard in Great Britain, the $300,000,000 credit for that country established here and the climb of the pound sterling back to parity are reasons for believing that foreign trade for this country will increase later, and that other countries will gradually build up their financial position.

Big Short Interest.

In the past month a tremendous short interest was built up in the stock market by the fact that rallies did not go far. There would be a 6 or 7 point gain from the March lows, and then most of it would be lost, and some stocks even slipped into new low ground in the various reactions in April. Bearish sentiment thereupon spread far and wide, and when the market started to show a more real improvement early in May, the shorts continued to fight the advance and only got in deeper because there was such strong support back of the leading stocks. Then with the advances gaining weight, an increase in public buying has developed. The public is ready to trade much more freely now, for there is the kind of encouragement being furnished that leads to an increased outside interest. Thus the public never will buy at the bottom of a decline or even near to it, but will get enthusiastic whenever prices show a strong upward tendency. It is easier to get a public following on rising prices than on stationary or declining ones, and the sharper the rise, the easier it is to find new buyers. Therefore, when pools wish to get the public behind them, they usually slowly work the price up to a certain point and then accelerate the advance by sudden concentration of the buying for pool acount.

Numerous Pools.

The present market has many pools operating in it and others are forming. In some cases, the pools are looking for an immediate increase in new buying that will allow of a gradual distribution of holdings on a rising scale. In other instances, they expect that the market will not be in shape to take their distributing selling for several months, planning to continue to move prices up until late in the summer and then expecting the buyers to carry on without pool support and take up the pool holdings. Among the factors that are counted on this summer to keep the market up are expectations that business news will be better, also the news of plans of the government for further tax reductions. Many mergers are being worked out, and almost daily there has been some intimation of the actual plan for these combinations. Several stock split-ups are being planned, and some dividend increases are looked for before long. It is still a market to be very discriminating in, as it has not carried everything with it in the recent rise and some companies are in such poor shape that their stocks might go much lower, even if a new bull market is in the making. Taking all factors, it looks as if stock prices will move up a little, react a bit, move still higher, react again, etc., rather than go straight up like they did in the November-March market.

Money was easy in much of the week, although the increasing public trading held call money up at times on increased stock market trading. There has been a softer tone in time loans, and there is no indication that money will be firm for many months to come, excepting possibly for a few days flurry in call money every now and then.

British exchange hovers near to parity and it is momentarily expected to go to that figure ($4.866 to the pound). Other exchanges have shown a steady tone, and some improvement in French exchange is looked for before very long.

Biz Bond Issue.

A sale of a big issue of New York city bonds was the feature of the week. These were taken on a basis of just over a 4 per cent yield and this indicates that there is still a very good market for municipal bonds and that large sums of money are available for high-grade investments.

Public utility issues have been strong for some time. This is largely a reflection of the better sentiment that exists in many communities towards the utility companies. Even in New York, where the traction lines have been under political pressure for years, there are signs of a change on the part of the majority of the public in favor of greater liberality to the traction lines.

A severe decline has taken place in raw sugar prices to the lowest level in years, resulting from the great increase in Cuban sugar output. This weakness is believed to have about reached its limit and there are signs of an improvement.

Oil market conditions are better. The steady increase in the demand for gasoline offsets the recent price cuts in some sections, as it is believed that gasoline consumption this summer will far surpass the production and as a result there will be heavy withdrawals of the stored surplus on rising prices. Production of heavy crude oil has shown a great increase but the output of light crude, from which the bulk of the gasoline is taken, has been on the wane.

A rise in grain prices has resulted from the further decline in the condition of winter wheat and disappointing prospects for spring wheat in some sections. The lower potential production is not favorable from some angles but the rising price is an aid in the purchasing power in the rural communities.

Auto Sales High.

Motor car production in April was very high and there are good sales reported for May so far. Signs are not lacking, however, that the price situation in motor cars is none too secure and there are hints to be heard that pleasure car prices will be reduced in the near future. The truck sitation is good and the outlook for business is promising.

Rubber tire prices have been advanced and there are indications of a further marking up of quotations. This is based on a further rise in crude rubber to the highest level in years. There has been a combination of rubber interests in Great Britain who have restricted the production, or rather the exports from the growing countries, to a point below actual consumption. Surplus stocks of crude rubber in Europe have been reduced to almost nothing by these restrictive measres. Manufacturing interests in this country have a large supply of crude rubber which was mostly bought before the rise in this commodity got started.

Copper metal prices are not far from the low point, but there is a better feeling in the industry. Some of the larger companies have been cutting down their mine output and this will bring about a stronger statistical position before long.

While the April high production of steel products and smaller ordering brought about reductions in unfilled tonnages, this position is better in May because steel makers have reduced their rate of operation and business is on a somewhat larger scale. There are indications of a further improvement in the steel trade soon and the outlook for business next fall is considerably better.

Cotton has been irregular but at times the reactionary trend has been much more prominent. The relief that was given in Texas by the recent heavy rains has caused an outlook for a good crop from that state. This is not the main depressing influence on prices, however, which have been more affected by the poor condition in the textile trades. Wool conditions are bad and the woolen goods business has hurt cotton goods to some extent. This situation may prevent any substantial rallies in cotton for a time, but many trading interests look for a better market in the summer and fall.

WEEKLY COTTON GOODS REVIEW

New York, May 9.—It has been a very quiet period in primary cotton goods markets with prices showing a declining tendency. A few of the more staple wide print cloths still remain fairly steady, with a premium of about 1-4 cent a yard prevailing on spots compared with futures. Southern print cloths have few to offer and are contracted ahead for two months on these constructions. Brown sheetings, drills and other coarse yard convertibles are dull and lower.

The fine-combed yarn goods are irregular and have not been selling freely, but mills still have a fair amount of business in hand. On 4-4 bleached cottons the market is weak and irregular and lengthened discounts are obtainable on wide sheetings, sheets and pillow cases. Colored domestics are dull and lower and some of the cheaper ginghams are also dull and weak. The demand, where noted at all, has been for small lots as a rule. There has been a fair demand for some of the wide cloths for rubberizing for automobile tops, etc., and tire fabrics have been in small spot demand. Duck is easier.

The heavy goods end of the industry is rather better off than the medium lines. Fancy printed goods in fine count percales constructions, in broadcloths, pongees and sateens are selling moderately for prompt shipment day-to-day business is offered on fine ginghams and rayon mixed materials, but on the whole orders are very light; curtailment is increasing. Fall River printcloth mills are operating on about 60 per cent of capacity and there has been some curtailment begun in southern colored goods and yarn mills.

Prices on standard staples in primary markets are as follows:

Print cloths, 28-inch, 64x64s, 7 cents; 64x60s, 6 3-4 cents; 38 1-2-inch 64x64s, 9 3-4 cents.

Brown sheetings, southern standards, 15 cents; denims, 2.20s, 19 to 20 cents.

Tickings, 8-ounce, 24 1-2 to 26 cents.

Prints, 9 1-2 cents.

Staple ginghams, 11 1-2 cents; dress ginghams, 18 1-2 cents and 21 cents.

"The test of sound banking is to be found not in any adventitious political influence, but simply and only in the quality of the assets covered under the loan item."

Branch Banking or Free Units? Ideas of U. S. and Europe Differ

"Ultimately that system will survive which by the sterling character of the loan assets in its banks gives best assurance of open doors under all conditions.

BY JOHN CUMMINGS.

In the United States we have some 30,000 banks of all types, including institutions of large resources and of course thousands of small banks located in our smaller cities and towns. A number of states permit banks to organize with a capital of only $10,000. Even less than this amount has been required in some states. Of these banks, large and small, according to official compilations last June, only 681 were operating any sort of branch office and only 305 of them were operating more than one such office. Our thousands of small banks which in almost any other country would be branches of larger institutions are except for such supervision and control as is provided under Federal and state laws, independent unit banks.

Outside of the United States quite the reverse of this condition prevails. Excepting our own, the banking systems of the more important commercial countries, as well as some countries which are primarily agricultural, are branch systems.

Our 681 parent banks were operating a total of 2,233 branches, the largest number of branches in any one system being 88. One British bank operates close to 2,000 branches, and another is not far behind its big competitor. A score of British banks operate between them some 10,000 branches. On the continent of Europe, also, branch banking is the accepted practice, and to come nearer home, Canada's 14 chartered banks operate over 4,500 branches.

The Canadian farmer living in some remote pioneer settlement of the far northwest prefers to deposit his savings in the Bank of Montreal, or in some other of the big Canadian institutions, one of which is certain to open up a little office in the settlement. He knows that his little branch is precisely as safe and big in resources as the parent bank itself, and rests easy in this assurance.

Last June, to quote precise official figures, our banking system comprised 8,085 national banks operating under federal statutes and 21,363 state institutions, all of whose charter powers are defined in state laws. National banks have never been permitted to establish full power branches, although in recent years they have been permitted under an administrative ruling to open so-called "additional offices" in their own home city, and some national banks operate branches established originally under state charters, or acquired by merger of state institutions.

Over the branch banking powers of state banks the federal government has no jurisdiction whatever except that the federal reserve board may prescribe conditions of membership in the federal reserve system for such state institutions as freely elect to join the system.

As one such condition, the board has required state banks entering the system to agree that they will not establish any new branches except with approval of the board. At the end of 1924 the membership of the federal reserve system comprised 1,544 state institutions, the number of non-member banks being considerably in excess of 19,000.

Seventeen states have expressly by statute prohibited branch banking or at least any further extension of branch systems; 20 states have authorized, and 11 states, of which only three report any branches in operation, have to date enacted no legislation either prohibitive or permissive of branch banking. This general situation is set forth on the accompanying map. By way of indicating further the diversity of state legislation, it may be noted that ten states permit branch banking on a state-wide basis; five permit branches only in the home city or county of the parent bank or territory contiguous thereto; and four permit branch offices or agencies but not full-power branches. Texas has included in its constitution an article prohibiting branch banking.

Of the 2,233 branches reported in operation, 1,463 were located in the home city of the parent bank, and 770 outside the home city. All of New York's 359 branches, all but five of Michigan's 327, and all but 21 of Ohio's 182 branches, were home city branches. California reported 249 home-city and 289 outside branches.

Few Branches.

Except in California, very few banks located in our larger cities were operating outside branches, 239 of the 310 banks operating such branches being located in cities of less than 25,000 and none of them in cities of 1,000,000 or more population. Insofar as branch banking outside city limits has developed, excepting in California, it is largely a country bank development rather than a reaching out of our large metropolitan institutions into rural communities.

These institutions have, however, in some instances built up in recent years very considerable urban systems, as in the case of one state bank in New York city which operates between 50 and 60 branches. Including additional offices of national banks more than half of the branches reported last June had been established since 1920, and a large majority of the new branches were home city offices.

California is preeminently our branch banking state. Nearly one-fourth of all the branches in the country were in this state. Even in California, however, there were 576 independent unit banks, the number of such banks exceeding the number of banks operating branches nearly six times over. Moreover, more than half of the 99 banks operating branches in the state were one-branch systems, and only 13 were systems of 5 or more branches. California is very far from being a 100 per cent branch banking state, but it provides our nearest approximation to such a condition.

In his annual report of 1924, the comptroller of the currency, Mr. Dawes, expressed in no uncertain terms his opinion that branch banking is "opposed to public policy as being in its essence monopolistic." He makes, however, a very important exception.

Strictly city systems are not, he thinks, properly classified as branch banking, since they do not involve the essential evil of "absentee control" Where the branch is located outside the home

Bradstreet's Review

New York, May 8.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

"Numerous cross-currents still rob the general trade situation of uniformity. Beneficial effects of the breaking of the southwestern drought tend to offset retardation due to colder weather overspreading the country at the close of last week. Hence retail trade reports are as a whole better.

"Wholesale trade is hardly as active, but is still fair for an ordinarily quiet season. Industry is irregular, demonstrated gains in several important lines being partially offset by reactions to dullness in others.

"On the favorable side as affecting sentiment is the continuance of the strength manifested toward the close of last week in the securities and grain markets; the more uniformly favorable reports from the surplus crop areas, some winter wheat areas excepted; the demonstrated vitality of the automobile and allied trades exhibited by the setting up of new high records of production in April, and sign of a recurrence of activity in building, with a gain in permit valuations not equaled for two years past."

An initial quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share has been declared on the 6 per cent preferred stock of the Associated Gas and Electric company, payable June 1, to stock of record May 11. Shareholders have been given the option of taking payment either in cash or in Class A stock at the rate of three-fiftieths of a share for each share of preferred, which is equal to about $1.70 a share on the basis of the present market value of the A stocks.

The financial district hears that negotiations are in progress for a loan of $25,000,000 to the city of Tokio which will be offered in the New York market under a guarantee from the government of Japan. The proceeds of the bonds will be used for reconstruction work and the development of the municipality. It is understood J. P. Morgan & Co. will handle the financing.

American Power and Light earned $3.39 a share on the common stock in 1924 after preferred dividends against $2.41 a share in 1923. Net income was $6,364,669 compared with $4,029,318. Gross earnings increased to $7,686,275 from $5,153,673 the year before.

OPERA TO FEATURE BIG CELEBRATION AT MORRIS BROWN

The fortieth anniversary of Morris Brown university, an institution operated for colored youths, will be observed in connection with the commencement exercises beginning May 19 and closing May 27. The initial program will be a dramatic opera, "Samson and Delilah," rendered at the city auditorium Tuesday evening, May 19. Students of Morris Brown will be assisted by choirs of the city in presenting this Biblical play in three acts.

The play is being directed by Eva A. Lewis and Annie Mae Blossomgame in the interest of funds for the institution. Trustees and alumni are hoping to raise from all sources, $40,000.

For the convenience of white people, tickets for the opera are on sale at the Cable Piano company, and seats are reserved for white patrons.

News, Views And Reviews

Cotton Letters.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, May 9.—There was more reactionary sentiment in evidence this morning but the disposition to cover short contracts for over the week-end was restricted by relatively easy cables and favorable weather reports. Active months sold about 9 to 12 points net higher during the early trading, but except for scattering shorts, there appeared to be very few buyers and the market eased again on official forecasts for further rains or showers in both western and eastern sections of the belt. The idea is that these showers, particularly if followed by warmer weather, will bring the crop up to a very good condition by the end of the month.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, May 9.—Cotton prices moved but little today owing to unwillingness of most traders to make new commitments over Sunday on account of fear of weather developments. Most of the trading was largely of an evening up character with many shorts inclined to cash their profits. The dry goods market reported quiet, due largely, according to some authorities, to belief that prices for goods are too high. The weight of sentiment is still bearish but the trade as a whole is apprehensive that the west may get too much rain now while the east not get enough.

New Orleans, May 9.—The market has been more or less idle during the short session today. Rains were general over Texas last night, reaching some sections of southern and southwestern parts of the state which were still requiring moisture. The prospects are that these rains are headed for the sections east of the river, in which event we consider that the crop generally would be placed in excellent condition. In view of the favorable outlook this feature would indicate more probability of a rally than a decline for the next price movement. July Liverpool due Monday 12 44.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, May 9.—The market can be said to have little or no trend, everybody waiting further weather reports next week. It will come to a point where these continued rains in the southwest, if they keep up, will cause planters there to become very disappointed as it will delay their field work and in the long run will be the cause of serious complaint. Much will depend next week on the weather information and the market will be governed accordingly. Liverpool futures are due on Monday, July, 12.43; October, 12.20.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, May 9.—(A. V. Curran & Co., Correspondent.)—The market may rule lower temporarily if the needed rains materialize in Arkansas, Louisiana and eastward to the south Atlantic coast; but if the rains continue in the southeast they would likely be considered favorable, because of having had so much rain in those sections of late, especially in western and northern Texas, where planting is already backward. With new crop deliveries under the 22½c level, values are sufficiently low to attract trade and speculative buying, as there will likely be an urgent demand for new crop cotton, fall delivery, because of the scarcity of staples in the south and small stocks of all descriptions in the interior.

Grain Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, May 9.—WHEAT: There was general liquidation and prices broke sharply early because of the failure of the government report to substantiate the radical crop estimates made. The selling was heavy and required exceptionally large buying to hold prices within the range made. There was some of the early buyers trying to unload near the finish and prices carried down to near a new low for the day. We look to see Monday's statistics of a bullish nature and feel wheat can be bought on this setback.

CORN: Sold off with wheat and met with indifferent support on breaks, shorts covered freely at the finish. Volume of trade moderate.

OATS: Cash interests bought May while trade in the latter deliveries was mixed influenced by action in wheat and corn. Volume of business moderate.

JNO. F. CLARKE & CO.

Chicago, May 9.—WHEAT: The government estimate of wheat yield issued yesterday was given a bearish construction because it did not confirm a very radical newspaper estimate of the previous day. Any yield of winter wheat below 500,000,000 necessitates liberal crops in all other exporting countries in order to provide for annual requirements. Of course it is not possible to determine whether our crop will improve or deteriorate between now and harvest, but it is well known that the weather in the month of June has very much to do with the final outcome. A local authority places a bullish construction upon the report for the reason that a considerable portion of the remaining area was sown on Timothy or clover land and, therefore, not plowed up. From this basis it is argued that the average yield at time of harvest will not be excessive. Seaboard reports a moderate export business caught on the decline in prices, but in a general way foreign buyers are awaiting the action of North American markets. It is quite possible that a incentive must develop if the market is to recover.

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, May 9.—We have consistently recommended the purchase of selected stocks throughout reactions and we still believe that an active summer market at advancing prices is ahead of us. The average price of 50 stocks is only slightly below the high of March 3 and we anticipate new highs before any reaction of consequence is brought about.

The present strength and activity of the stock market is materially different from that of the markets which followed the election and the overenthusiasm which resulted. The spirit of optimism is not too violent and is based more upon bedrock, which the solid rock under superficial formations.

Easy money, an abundance of raw materials and of labor, combined with a general solvency of American business confirm the judgment of investors. The speculative interests remember the quicksands of February and March and are inclined to study the real value and prospects of each individual issue before purchase or sale.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, May 9.—Pools continue to make most of the activity. Stocks have gained a great deal in the past two weeks without any reaction to speak of and some setback should come the first of the week. We believe that any setback now will be temporary. Rock Island will sell a great deal higher and we believe the other speculative rails which we have recommended from time to time, including MOP pfd., Texas-Pacific, Pittsburg and West Virginia, will reach much higher levels.

JNO. F. CLARK & CO.

New York, May 9.—The oil group was in better demand, rubber tire shares were conspicuous on the up side, rail issues showed a firm tone, while the industrials and many specialties showed evidence of increasing optimism. There is a fairly widespread feeling that the oil industry's prosperity is just in front of it. Motor shares are discounting this quarter's favorable outlook. There was nothing special to influence the rail issues, though the new merger possibilities and heavy traffic figures continue to act as the outstanding influence. The week-end profit-taking was of minor influence, and considering all angles of the present situation believe that a broad movement may get under way next week.

BIBLE CLASS PLANS MOTHERS' PROGRAM

"Mothers' Day" and Co-ed day combined will be observed by the members of the Young Men's Bible class of the Central Presbyterian church Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock, the regular Sunday school hour. The first Sunday of each month is usually Co-ed day, but due to a special program and "Mothers' Day" the Co-ed day was postponed and will be held in conjunction with the tribute paid to mothers Sunday. DIXIE SEAL & STAMP OFFERS LETTER SIGNS

Novel ideas in window display advertising are offered by the Dixie Seal and Stamp company. This organization is now supplying a bulletin board equipped with interchangeable lettering. The board is proving useful as a building directory, window display and for other advertising devices.

For more than twenty years Dixie Seal and Stamp company has furnished Southern customers with bulletin devices, lettered boards and rubber stamps. Rubber stamps have probably brought the company to general attention more than any other article sold at the Dixie Seal offices, for these rubber stamps are made with a deep, clear type that are known for the good print they give.

Stamps for use on fruit crates are made of thick gum with cushions between face and wood. These stamps stand hard usage and their durability makes them unusually economical for offices and factories. Ink pads are also furnished.

Another popular line at Dixie Seal and Stamp company is the stencil line. Stenciling is sometimes preferable to rubber stamping and for this stenciling work the Dixie Seal and Stamp company supplies every modern style and cut.

"Twenty years is a good long time," says a statement from the company's offices, "and when a concern has been making an article during that term of years and growing steadily, it is reasonable to believe that the article is being made properly and giving satisfactory use. This is why we feel so good over the growth of our business in rubber stamps throughout the south."

Offices, mills and factories needing rubber stamps or stenciling equipment are urged to confer with the service department by the Dixie Seal and Stamp company. A catalog will be mailed to inquirers and recommendation submitted for stamping and stenciling equipment.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF BUTTS CLOSE SUCCESSFUL YEAR

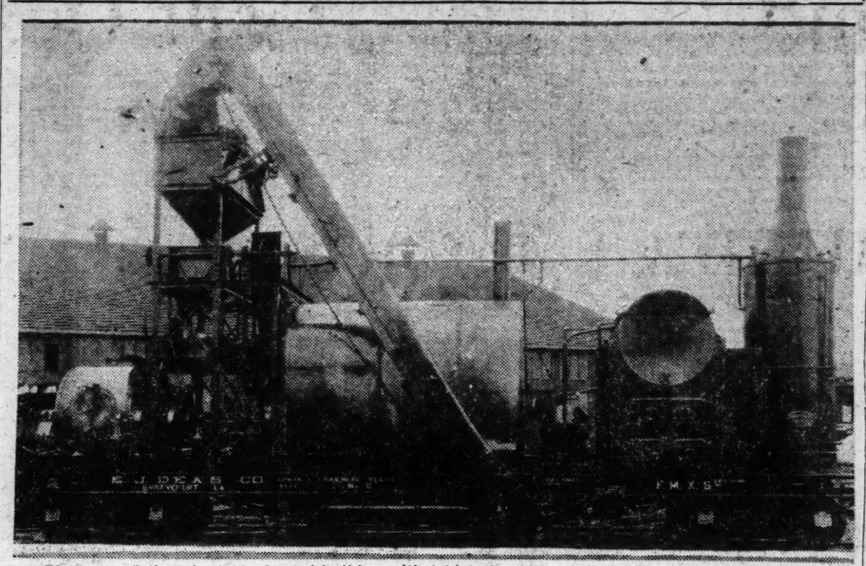

Jackson, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) The public schools of Butts county are closing one of the best years in their history. Some of the schools have already closed, others close this wek and the remainder will end the term within a few days. Five of the schools, outside of Jackson, have been able to operate for eight months, funds having been raised for an extra month. All other schools were operated for seven months only.

By careful and efficient management the county board of education has been able to pay all salaries. The board is out of debt and has been highly complimented by the state school auditor for the fine showing made.

BUTTS COUNTY NAMES MEN FOR ROAD MEET

Jackson, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Delegates named by O. A. Pound, president of the Jackson Kiwanis club, to attend the good roads meeting for the sixth district, to be held in Thomaston May 19, include J. L. Lyons, representative from Butts county; W. M. Redman, postmaster at Jackson; Major G. E Mallet, member of Jackson city council, and J. D. Jones, editor of the Progress-Argus.

Putting Small Towns on Motorists' Maps

Close-up of the giant steel road-builder with which Sam E. Finley, of Atlanta, delivers asphalt mixtures for roadways in small cities and towns. These communities hitherto have been unable to lay asphalt pavements because of the extraordinary expense involved in the erection of stationary machinery. Mr. Finley's portable invention permits big city paving for the small town at moderate cost.

BY HAL DANIELL.

Sam E. Finley, of Atlanta, announced Saturday the addition to his company's road-building equipment of a new "Finley Method" railroad asphalt plant. Officials of the Finley organization expect this powerful constructor of modern highways to revolutionize methods of road-building.

The portable Finley asphalt plant for the first time brings improved sheet asphalt pavements and other asphalt mixtures within reach of the smaller cities and towns of the country. These smaller communties heretofore have been at a disadvantage in building roads for automobiles. Stationary types of asphalt plants had to be shipped into the small towns at an expense really too great to be borne by a sparsely-settled community.

Although scores of these towns have been anxious to undertake small jobs of street paving according to their tax revenues, contractors could not afford to take a contract for paving areas of less than twenty to thirty-thousand square yards.

Now, however, the Finley Portable Plant can move into Gopher Prairie or any other small town and pave a small stretch measuring anywhere from 8,000 to 10,000 square yards. And this can now be done in the length of time it would ordinarily have taken simply to put up the machinery formerly required for beginning the job.

With equal ease and dispatch the Finley Portable Plant is put in readiness to ship to another job in another town.

The giant Finley machine, which would have gladdened the heart of a Caesar in the old days of Roman roads, is a product of the modern mechanical age and man's unwearying ingenuity. Strong, widely and capacious, the monster rides on its steel railroad car into a community and immediately unlimbers for operations. Crews man the way-maker and within two day's time asphalt is actually being delivered into the roadway. As soon as the required amount of mixture is poured forth, the Finley giant bundles up its metal limbs and moves on into new fields.

Those who have seen it say that in all probability Mr. Finley's latest piece of equipment will create a sensation in paving circles. It is considered by experts to be the greatest advance in the industry since the Finley "Air-Pressure Rotary Asphalt Mixer" was brought into use several years ago, and Mr. Finley's host of friends in and out of the business are congratulating him on his new pioneering feat in the science of paving the way for automobiles of pleasure and commerce.

CARLTON GLISTENS WITH NEW VITROLITE

Vitrolite Products company has been awarded contracts for all tile, marble, terrazzo, bath accessories and steel cabinets for the new Carlton apartments, the new bachelor hotel next to the Georgian Terrace. The contract, it is understood, will run well into five figures.

Securing of this important contract by the Vitrolite Products company is considered proof of the appreciation on the part of the big general contractors for the efforts put forth by the sub-contractors. Vitrolite Products company is just past its second anniversary, but the company has established a remarkably good following by adhering to the principle of full and faithful service to the customer.

Besides the Carlton, other hotels ordering white steel cabinets of Vitrolite recently are the Fleetwood, Miami; the Henry Grady, Atlanta, and the Garrison, Atlanta. Vitrolite walls are also becoming the standard for baths and kitchens in many modern homes, apartments and hotels. Thsi product is guaranteed not to craze, stain, discolor, come loose from the walls or crack. Vitrolite is said to look and to be as good 20 years after installation as it was at the time of being first installed.

Further information on the entire line of Vitrolite products may be obtained from the company at 10-12 West Baker street, Atlanta.

Liquor Running Launch Is Seized Off Norfolk Coast

Norfolk, Va., May 9.— The gasoline launch Bank Eloise, with 300 cases of whisky aboard, was towed into port here early today by the coast guard cutter Mascoutin. Three men found on the launch were locked up in the city jail on charges of violating the prohibition and customs laws.

Inquiries at the local coast guard station in regard to details of the capture of the Eloise were met with vague responses, but despite the reticence of officials word leaked out that the rum fleet off the New York and New Jersey coasts is either sending its cargo south in small boats or it has itself moved its base southward.

The launch was docked at the St. Helena reservation in a badly damaged condition as a result of a mysterious fire that broke out aboard her shortly after she was taken in tow by the Mascoutin. When the flames were discovered by the crew of the coast guard cutter a detachment of guardsmen were sent aboard the launch but it was not until the Eloise had been almost filled with watre that the fire was extinguished. The launch is of the regular type employed by the rum fleet for its shore activities.

METZGER ANNOUNCES IMPROVED MATTRESS

Metzger Mattress company is extending a cordial invitation to Atlantans and Georgians generally to visit the Metzger plant at No. 142 Haynes street. Here, Sidney Metzger, popular young official of the Metzger company, is showing an attractive line of improved mattresses, beds and springs.

The demand for Metzger products, constructed for the promotion of sound and restful sleep, is reported generally on the increase throughout the home territory in the south. The White Cross mattress, a splendid example of the company's successful introduction of new methods of mattress manufacture, is proving unusually popular this year.

The Metzger catalog for 1925 will be distributed from the Metzger offices to all who ask for it. This booklet, picturing and describing in detail the wonderful bedroom equipment sold under the Metzger trademark, can be had by calling in person or by writing to Metzger headquarters in Atlanta.

Keely's---a Name That Has Meant Quality for Over 55 Years

Everything That's New---Everything That's Pretty
Is to be Found in Keely's Collection of Silks for Summer Frocks

A new silk comes from the looms of Mallinson, Cheney Bros., or one of the other famous silk weavers. You read about it in your favorite fashion publication—and find it immediately at Keely's.
Or—you read of a new color or an unusual pattern—and Keely's has it before you know it. For Keely's Silk Section takes an especial pride in presenting new things. In fact, Keely's whole Silk Department is a veritable style show of what's new and right, according to Fashion.

Gay Printed Silks
$1.98 to $4.95

What a variety of them here to choose from! What a range of colors! What an assortment of patterns! There's every kind of printed silk you could possibly want! Large floral printed georgettes for late afternoon and early evening wear, small design printed crepes for morning wear, dot and spot effects for sports wear—all types of designs are here—all colors and all fabrics; georgettes, crepes de chine and chiffons. 40 inches in width.

54-inch Prints, $6.95 to $7.50

Pretty bordered crepes in a variety of colors and designs. It takes just a yard and a half to make a dress.

Plain Color Sheer Silks
$2.50 to $3.50

Some of the most beautiful of Summer dresses are being made of dainty light silks in solid colors. And not only dresses, but evening wraps, coats and ensembles, as well, such materials as we mention below:

40-inch ombre chiffons shaded from dark to light, yard $2.50
40-inch georgette, all colors.. $2.00 to $2.95
40-inch chiffon, all colors..... $2 to $2.50
40-inch crepe Romaine, all colors..... $3.50
40-inch Indestructible voile in all the wanted colors $2.95
40-inch Pierrette Crepe in all colors.. $2.95

Washable Stripe Silk
$2.95 to $3.95

Dresses of these pretty striped silks are a perfect joy. You can wear them anywhere at any time—on an outing, at golf or tennis, about the house, just anywhere. For the minute they become soiled, you know you can put them in warm suds and they'll come out fresh and clean, with the colors just as bright and fresh as ever they were. Stripes are woven. White grounds with colored stripes or colored grounds with contrasting stripes.

—33-inch stripe crepes ..... $2.95 to $3.95
—33-inch stripe broadcloth..... $3.19

Summer Coating Silks
$5.95 and $6.50

Light coats of silk are coming into strong favor for Summer. Many silk frocks even have their coats to match, but every fashionable woman has at least one coat of silk in navy blue, black or some favored Summer shade that goes nicely with any costume. Made of such silks as these—

40-inch satin stripe Bengaline in black only $6.50
40-inch Argosy Cord in navy, green, cedarwood, cocoa, black and white $5.95
40-inch flower brocade faille in black only $6.50
40-inch Char-Mova brocade in redwood, fallow, green and black $6.50

Prices Were $29.75 to $49.50

Silk Dresses Reduced

$19.75

Plenty of them were formerly priced at $49.50, and many of them formerly sold at $35 to $37.50, so you see what prizes these are!

Pretty as they can be. One would never, never guess that they'd ever been anything but their former prices. They're dresses that LOOK their quality!

Wash Silks	Sports Frocks
Figured Crepes	Street Frocks
Plain Crepes	Afternoon Frocks
Plain Georgettes	Dinner Frocks
Novelty Silks	Evening Frocks

Lovely Summer styles; some of them are trimmed with lace; some of them are beaded; some have jabots; some circular apron effects in front—there are almost as many styles as there are dresses. And they're the very type of dresses that women are choosing for week-end trips to Summer resorts and to pack in vacation trunks later on.

Summer's Fashion List of Novelty Cottons
Checks Exactly With Keely's Array of

Sheer Light Fabrics

Like a hot house of colorful flowers is Keely's Cotton Section. Each table is like a flower bed blooming with colorful new patterns. Everything that's new in weave and pattern and color for Summer is here for you to choose from. That's Keely's Cotton Section from a fashion angle.

But there are other angles from which women view this huge Cotton Goods Room of ours. The QUALITY angle—quality of every piece of cotton goods that comes from Keely's is always Ace High! And the PRICE angle—there are always, always lovely cottons to be had at special prices at Keely's!

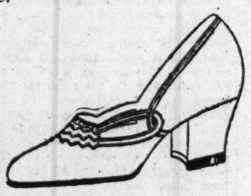

Seeing Keely's Display of New Fabrics Is Like Seeing a Style Show of Summer's Newest Light Materials

Keely's Is Ready With Intriguing New Styles in

Footwear of White

Days of voile frocks of sheer loveliness and frocks of silks that seem to be woven of thistledown are near. That means days for white shoes are almost upon us! And white shoes must be bought.
But that's nothing to worrry about, for Keely's is ready with the most captivating of new footwear styles in gleaming white.

The Shoe Illustrated

A step-in style of white glazed kid with graceful cut-outs at the sides. Either Spanish or block heels in this model. $12.50.

Priced $10.00 and $12.50

Novelty step-ins, graceful strap styles and comfortable cut-outs in many variations are here to choose from. Some are all white, some are trimmed with black patent leather inlays. Heels are either high or low.

In Keely's New Oriental Rug
Section—a Beautiful Showing of

Real Chinese Rugs

Wonderful rugs if you're seeking beauty. For the Chinese have a highly-developed artistic sense. And their art as expressed in their rug weaving harmonizes beautifully with the interior decoration ideas of the moment. Solid colored centers, mostly with borders of contrasting colors—with flowers strewn through the borders and over the rug, vase designs, and the like.

Priced from $35 to $110

are Keely's Chinese rugs—priced according to sizes, which range from small 2x4-feet rugs to large 4x7-feet sizes. Flaming rose with blue borders, tawny tans with sapphire borders—there are lovely harmonizing tones for bedroom or living room. And they're rugs that will wear a lifetime.

One of Fashion's Newest Novelties

Rayon Suiting---Bagdad Stripes

New in Atlanta! But they're winning instant popularity. First, because they're beautiful—highly lustrous and with rich color combinations. Second, because they're so practical—you can wash them just as often as you wish because they tub perfectly.
36 inches in width. In practically any color combination—red, tan, gold, blue, green, yellow, helio and Copen. Lovely—and they make such inexpensive dresses at $1.19 yard.

S-h-h! The Secret of a Good

The Right Corset

Some think that corsets are out of style. But not the woman who is fashion wise! It's only the old unrelenting walls of steel that have been cast into disfavor. And rightly so. The real corset of the day is just as modern as the gown with which you wear it. Just enough bones to make your figure trim. And Keely's is admirably equipped to help you find YOUR corset.
Light little girdles with hardly a bone—for the girlish, slender figure; corsets with a few more bones for the heavier figure; and for the heavy figure—wonderful corsets that are well boned without being heavy and cumbersome.

Priced from $3 to $10

Of plain batiste, silk brocades and silk brocades combined with silk elastic and silk jersey.

Stylish Stout, La Vida, W. B. Wrap Around, La Premiere and Youth Line—these famous makes are all here for you to choose from.

Expert Corsetieres to Fit You Just Exactly Right

Beautiful Stockings—But How Wonderfully Well They Wear

Finery Silk Stockings

Buyable at Keely's only in Atlanta. And they uphold the fine old Keely name for quality! So beautiful that they seem to be made with only one idea—the idea of beauty. But when you wear them, you find underlying their beautiful exterior, wearing qualities like iron!

Finery Coral Band silk stockings in chiffon or medium weight with lisle tops. In white, new peach, fallow, blonde, rose-beige, maize, mole, silver, neutral, cruiser, medium gray, nude, buff, light wood, orchid, gold, beige, cashmere and black. $1.85 or box of 3..... $5.40
Finery Coral Band silk stockings of all-over silk in white, silver, blush, cashmere, cruiser and opera blue. $2.25 or box of 3 ..... $6.50
Finery Coral Band silk stockings in extra large out-sizes. Lisle tops. White, black, beige and neutral. $2 or box of 3. $5.85

$1.25 Silk Cotton Crepe, 98c

Soft and crepey with a silky lustre—they look so much like silk that it's hard to tell them. And they come in the same pretty designs as printed silks. 36-inch.

49c Striped Pongette, 39c

These are silky finished materials that resemble broadcloths—they're ideal for summer dresses for women and children. 32-inch. Wide variety of stripes.

Pretty Satin Stripe Voiles, 49c

Fine voile with a lustrous satin stripe running through. In a wide variety of pretty patterns. 36-inch. A fabric that you usually find priced more than 49c.

$1 Broadcloth for 69c

Temptingly pretty is this table of pretty silky finished broadcloths and cotton charmeuse. In a wide variety of printed and woven patterns for shirts and frocks.

Baby Check Charmeuse, 49c

Some know this material by the name of broadcloth. A silky finished fabric in a variety of pretty fast colors with tiny baby checks. 36 inches.

Pre-Shrunk Linen, 89c

A new shipment from Belfast, Ireland. We can hardly get enough of it. Shrunk from 46½ to 36 inches. In almost every imaginable wanted Summer color—and white.

Novelty Linen, $1.50

What lovely wash dresses they make with their gay plaids and stripes! There are ever so many attractive patterns to choose from and a wide variety of colors.

Novel French Voiles, $1.39

Exquisite creations! Designed by artists and woven by experts! Lovely, unusual nubbed designs, peculiar knotted thread effects and designs that defy description.

Novelty Crepes, $1.39

Some of them are in beautiful brocade designs, some are in plaids—there's a fine variety of designs in all the wanted summer colorings. 36 inches in width.

Solid Color Voile, 44c

44 inches in width. Evenly woven with a fine chiffon finish. You'll find it in all the wanted street shades as well as the lovely underwear pastel shades.

THE WAY TO RELIEF.

The Constitution presents today an exceedingly interesting interview with Hon. Walter F. George, our junior senator, on the issue raised by Vice President Dawes on the revision of the senate rules.

The vice president takes the position that by a revision of the senate rules so as to limit debate and force action, the public can be protected against the rapidly growing evil of the filibuster.

There is no doubt that the sentiment of the country is overwhelmingly with the vice president as to the necessity for the elimination of this nuisance.

Senator George, declaring his personal esteem of the vice president, concedes his sincerity, and admits there is much force in the position he takes as to the necessity for relief.

But he disagrees with the vice president as to the best method by which relief can be brought about, holding that the short term of congress is at the bottom of the evil and that the best method of protection against the unwarranted filibustering of a few is by the adoption of a constitutional amendment, on which the senate has already acted favorably and which, if ultimately approved by the states, would assemble congress in January following the November election rather than holding off its meeting, as now, until thirteen months after the election.

The Constitution has time and again pointed out the folly of the present system by which a congress composed of many defeated members sits in judgment on issues passed upon by the people, and yet in which representatives specifically chosen on public issues have no voice.

The situation is presented with striking force by Senator George, who holds the short session of congress responsible for the filibuster nuisance, and who very forcibly shows the relief that would follow the enactment of the proposed constitutional amendment.

The Constitution very warmly commends the position of Senator George.

He presents the question so clearly that it is inconceivable how there can be but one side to it.

Senator George urges the powerful cooperation of General Dawes in directing public attention to the best method of securing the relief advocated by both, and undoubtedly demanded by the public.

It is to be hoped that the vice president will take this view of the question, for by so doing favorable action would be assured against a growing evil, and to overcome which the united effort of both democrats and republicans should be directed.

AN INTERESTING SURVEY.

The United States department of education has just made a survey of 600 farms in the coastal plains of Georgia as to the average number of hours of labor used to produce one acre of several of the standard agricultural commodities.

Although the survey covered only the coastal plain area of Georgia, it is pointed out that the data should be useful to farmers in parts of North and South Carolina, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi, states within the coastal plain, where soil, climate, types of farming and farm practices are similar.

The survey shows that the average number of hours of labor used to produce an acre of cotton on 249 farms is 132.5 hours of man labor and 59.6 hours of mule labor. Every operation from preparing the land to the final disposition of the crop is included in these figures.

The average labor requirements per acre of corn on 250 farms totaled 36.3 man hours and 32.6 mule hours; sweet potatoes on 59 farms required 131 hours of man labor per acre and 66.4 hours of mule labor; combinations of corn, velvet beans and peanuts on 89 farms required 37.1 man hours and 33.7 mule hours; sugarcane (plant) on 32 farms required 282.9 man hours and 182.3 mule hours. Oats, wheat and rye on 202 farms required 18.4 man hours and 23 mule hours per acre.

There is a wide variation in the number of hours per acre which different farmers put on the same kind of crops, due almost entirely to the different operations performed by different men, the number of times certain operations are performed, and the method of harvesting the crop. The range of hours on cotton, for example, is shown to be from less than 60 hours of man labor per acre to more than 180 hours of man labor, and from less than 30 hours of mule labor to more than 90 hours.

WILSON TAX VIEWS.

The address of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to the Mississippi Bankers' association, at Jackson, emphatically stated that events have proved the soundness of the tax views held by Woodrow Wilson, and his last two secretaries of the treasury, Glass and Houston.

In renewing his fight for lower rates governing the surtaxes, the secretary of the treasury pointed out that the treasury under Mr. Wilson had been consistent in insisting the controlling factor regarding tax rates should be their effectiveness in yielding revenue over a long period of years. He said:

"We want a tax system which produces revenue. We do not want merely a gesture in taxation. This is the crux of the whole problem. It is the only reason for advocating a reduction of the surtaxes. And it is the reason which has been consistently advocated by the treasury, not only during my own term of office, but during the administrations of my distinguished predecessors, Senator Glass and Secretary Houston, both of whom served under a democratic president."

The secretary of the treasury is correct. Secretary Glass in 1919 realized the high surtaxes had passed the point of their greatest productivity. He advocated a reduction. Following him Secretary Houston, in 1920 or 1921, very vigorously urged reduction of the surtax rates, claiming that the high rates were reducing the revenues for the government, thus defeating their own purpose, and at the same time forcing great wealth out of productivity into tax-exempt securities.

The position of the secretary of the treasury is unanswerable. Unfortunately, by reason of Mr. Mellon's own great wealth, the saneness of his position has been eclipsed by political prejudices.

In the first session of the last congress the tax question was permitted to become a veritable political football. Preceding a presidential election the issue was thrown squarely into partisan politics.

It is hoped the next congress will view the situation with more economic reason. The problem of wealth buried in tax exempts cannot be overlooked. The problem of increasing the labor-employing industries of the country cannot be overlooked.

What we need is a scientific lowering of taxes, with due regard to the government's obligation to the people and their equitable obligation to the government. Large surtaxes cheat the government of great revenues that it should get, and close many a productive enterprise.

INSPIRED STATEMENT.

Senator Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, after a conference with President Coolidge, issued a statement which is supposed to have been the expressed voice of the executive. He declared that three major problems —tax reduction, rules revision and ratification of the world court protocol—will command the senate's attention in the next session.

Discussing the tax question, he said:

"Lightening of the tax burdens of the people is made possible by the very satisfactory return from the tax laws now in force and by the substantial economics wrought by the administration of President Coolidge. Congress cooperated with the president and the budget commissioner in bringing about these economies; indeed, in some cases, congress reduced appropriations even below the budget estimates. The $100,000,000 surplus this year and the estimated surplus next year of $300,000,000 make certain import tax reduction."

It is said the ways and means committee of the house will begin preparations of the new tax bill in October so that the measure will be ready for prompt action when congress assembles in December. The plan is to have the reductions enacted before the next income tax returns are made.

It is very probable that the financial legislation of the 69th congress will be limited to tax revision.

The statement made by Senator Willis that rules revision would be a major problem before the senate is significant. It not only means that he is personally backing Vice President Dawes' fight, but that the president is backing it also. It is probable, therefore, that the president will include the recommendation in his message, or certainly in a special message to the senate.

If this is true, and the Ohio senator very probably made an inspired statement, there is little doubt that the vice president will win his fight, even though the radicals and some of the democrats will fight any revision.

PAUL H. NORCROSS.

The loss of Paul H. Norcross in the Mississippi river tragedy near Memphis is distressing. It shocks not only the entire south, but the whole country, for in his profession as a municipal engineer, and in his activities as a developer and a leader in progressive civic activities, his reputation was national, and there was not a more outstanding figure in the south.

During the year 1924 he served as president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Prior to that for years he had served as chairman of important committees. He was an official of the national organization of engineers, and was prominently identified with various other organizations. Although a busy man no person gave more unselfishly of time and resources to every forward-looking activity associated with the material, social and cultural activity of his native city and state.

As an illustration of his high standing in the engineering world his services as counsellor and referee were in constant demand by reason of his expert mastery of his profession and his uniform fairness, and unimpeachable personal integrity.

Perhaps no greater honor could fall to an American engineer than to have been chosen as a member of the board to make the investigation and technical recommendations in the celebrated Lake Michigan dispute between Illinois and the city of Chicago.

Paul Norcross was yet a young man, with his father—one of the pioneer builders of Atlanta—surviving him. Surviving him too is a devoted little family circle. And to these loved ones the tragedy is of overwhelming sorrow. And all of Atlanta, his native city, bows with them in their grief.

In the tragic passing of this beloved and useful citizen a loss is sustained that is indeed irreparable.

SCHOOL EQUALIZATION.

On this page is a communication from R. H. Bell, of East Point, commenting most logically on the story by J. E. D. Shipp, of Sumter, in Sunday's Constitution, telling of the rural school revolution that has taken place in that county in the past five years.

Mr. Bell sees, as does every thinking citizen, the necessity for raising the general standard of the rural schools of Georgia in order to restore that same community spirit and attractiveness that existed prior to the "movement to the town" period inaugurated when municipal school systems began to penalize—as they do—the rural systems.

There is no question about the distressing situation that has followed the inauguration of the dual system of public schools, as now existing in a large majority of the counties of the state. The city, or the town or towns, of such counties, run school-tax walls around their own municipalities, and establish as a rule standard grammar and high schools.

The taxable wealth of a county is very largely concentrated in, or adjacent to the towns. The corporations, industries, businesses, etc., in and around the towns, in conjunction with the naturally increased realty valuations, create the taxable wealth, excluding the farm and unproductive lands.

With this taxable wealth the city or town is enabled to bond for modern school plants, and to receive enough revenues from special school taxes to properly maintain them, with trained teachers running through the grades, during the normal nine months' school year.

Although the bulk of the school population may be rural, these rural schools are naturally penalized in not being able to corral sufficient taxable wealth to build or maintain standard nine months' schools. Thus equal opportunities are not given to all the children. This in turn builds up resentment, prejudice, intolerance. It does more. It drives the families who are ambitious for their children's education to the towns, and to this extent breaks and disorganizes country life, rural community spirit, etc. In the meantime those rural children who cannot get adequate advantages necessarily grow up without the opportunities for citizen-usefulness that would be theirs were conditions equalized, and the same opportunities were given to all.

The town is dependent upon the country, and it is a short-sighted economic policy to impair the progress of the country by a school system that builds caste and destroys democracy.

The answer to the situation is the county unit school system, which does not mean lowering the standard of the town school, but does mean a parity by which the rural school shall be brought up to the standard of the town school.

This will be an important issue before the forthcoming Georgia assembly.

LAND OF OPPORTUNITY.

In New York, within 24 hours last week, two citizens brought their names to the first pages of the newspapers by deeds illustrating their great wealth.

One of them—it matters not the name—established a $1,000,000 trust fund for sick and needy jews, and in addition an annuity of $50,000 for the same purpose, this annuity to continue until his death. The trust and the annuity are to be administered through the federation for the support of Jewish philanthropic societies of New York.

The gift is said to be one of the largest ever made to a charitable organization in New York while the donor was alive.

The feature of greatest human interest is that Frederick Brown, who made this munificent donation, came to America just twenty years ago as an immigrant boy from Czecho-Slovakia. He had no money, and worked in a small retail clothing store, subsequently buying the business. He then began to put his savings in real estate, and from this modest beginning developed in a dozen years into one of the largest real estate operators on Manhattan island. Today he is recognized as a millionaire many times over.

The other instance was the sale of the noted old Astor home at 65th street and Fifth avenue for a sum in excess of $2,000,000, to Benjamin Winter, who came to this country penniless just 24 years ago from Poland. He did odd jobs, and lived in the direst poverty in the years of his boyhood and young manhood. He developed into a small contractor and made some money. This he, too, invested judiciously in real estate. Then he began a systematic real estate career. Today he is reported to be a multi-millionaire.

The Astor house is to be torn down—a historic relic of the old social life of the metropolis—and the purchaser will erect a $10,000,000 hotel on the site.

The passing of the landmark recalls the world-wide phrase "New York's 400," referring to the social elect. The fact is the late Mrs. William Astor, a great social leader, opened the house with a grand ball to which she invited just 400 guests, the invitation list being made up by Ward McAllister, a social lion of the day. From that fact sprang the phrase as quoted.

The point is—and so is the thought—that America, as no other country on earth, offers opportunity of great success to the young man who is willing to work, economize and exercise the fundamentals of sobriety, honesty and application.

These two immigrant boys were handicapped. They came as strangers into a strange land. They could not speak the language. They had neither friends, nor influence. And yet in the comparatively brief span of a single score of years they have arisen to the highest pinnacle of financial affluence.

These are just two cases in thousands. What the immigrant boy can do most assuredly the native boy can do.

America truly is a land of opportunity. We need to give more thought to the serious side of our economic situation and possibilities, and less frivolous thought to the joy-ride tendency of the hour.

Speaking of gifts to authors, any one of them would prefer a paying interest in a marble yard here to the prospect of a monument hereafter.

The Indianapolis News says that "with little boys wearing long trousers and their fathers taking up knickers, it is small wonder that the world is slightly topsy turvy."

TO A MOTHER

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

I.

Your gentle hand still beckons through the years
When, weary of the way, I fain would rest,
And as a child, from Life's dark thorns and tears,
Fly to the refuge of Mother's breast.
Tho night falls deep where sad the wanderers roam,—
Your child is coming home.

II.

The wounding world has left its battle-scars
On brow and breast, and some heart-veiled from view;
But in the lovelight of the sweet home-stars
I come for rest and recompense to you.
What is Fame's laurel? What all world-renown?
Your love has been my crown.

III.

Love that shall lead when the last night draws near,
The journey done, the bearer of rest in sight;
Your living love, to light the shadows there
With arms around, to kiss your child good-night.
To sleep the last sleep as earth fades from view
And wake in heaven with you.

Distinguished Georgia Attorney Gives Views on State Highway System

Editor Constitution: It is with reluctance that I wish to call the attention of the public to additional facts relative to Georgia highway construction. Were it not for the numerous letters and personal statements of approval of a practical road building plan suggested in a former letter and the great importance of the subject discussed, I might refrain from writing more.

There are now apparently three proposals before the public to provide a definite fixed program for paved roads in Georgia. Briefly stated these are:

1. A state bond issue of seventy ($70,000,000) millions of dollars, to be issued and sold at the rate of $10,000,000 per year, and maturing in thirty years.

2. Using convict labor and providing an issue of bonds of thirty or forty millions, with which to provide material, stockade, guards and other expenses of this labor.

3. Use the fuel oil tax, auto tag tax and federal aid fund annually, and provide just how this money shall be applied, thus paying for the roads as we build.

The intention of the advocates of each of these plans is conceded to be laudable, and all of them agree on the fact that we shoul have a definite plan for constructing hard surfaced roads. It remains to consider which is the most practical and best adapted plan for the state under existing conditions.

If the seventy millions of bonds are issued the credit of the state will have to be pledged, even though the sinking fund and interest is paid out of specific revenue. If issued annually for ten years, and maturing all in thirty years, the interest term woul be twenty-six and a half years. Assuming that they could be sold at an interest rate of 4 per cent, the interest would amount to $2,800,000, or the total sum of interest of $74,200,000. Thus we would pay as principal and interest the sum of $144,200,000. In this way we would have ten millions each year for road construction in addition to the federal aid fund. It is also apparent that if submitted to the people we would have to wait two years until the next general election to vote. It is hardly conceivable that the public would be willing to pledge the state's credit for $144,200,000 to obtain seventy millions for highways.

The plan of working convicts on road paving, with smaller issue of bonds, would be objectionable in many ways. A considerable amount of interest on these bonds would have to be paid. The convicts would be withdrawn from present road work. It is quite likely that on account of the cost of stockades and extra guards it would not be economical. And the chief objection is that we would secure very poor paved roads with convict labor.

It is, therefore, reasonable to conclude that the third method is decidedly the best. The highway fund based on last year's revenue would be as follows. (Exact figures of 1924):

Fuel oil tax (3 cents per gallon)	$3,361,370.61
Auto tag license fees...	2,532,266.21
Federal aid fund	2,061,000.00
Total	$7,954,636.82

The oil and tag taxes are increasing and the total revenue from these three sources with the federal aid fund will be more than $8,000,000. If two-thirds of this fund is set aside for paved roads and the balance for overhead, maintenance and repair, and grading top soiled roads, the budget would be about as follows:

For paving roads	$5,333,333.34
Overhead expense at 6 per cent	480,000.00
Maintenance and repairs	1,386,666.66
Grading and soiling (secondary roads) ...	800,000.00
Total	$8,000,000.00

Thus at $25,000 per mile for the cost of construction of hard surfaced roads we could pave and pay for 200 miles of hard surfaced road each year. A sufficient fund is provided for overhead, maintenance and repair, and provision is made for grading and top soiling 100 miles of secondary road preparatory to paving subsequently.

The maintenance and repair could be better handled by the county boards of commissioners under a mileage contract with the highway commission in proportion to state road mileage in each county.

The main traveled roads in continuous sections should be paved under contract, without overhead, and then the secondard roads.

If this plan is adopted, assuming an increase in oil and tag tax, within four years the main traveled roads could be paved and much secondary road graded and soiled and made ready for pavement. All of the roads could be maintained, and this done without bonds, and paid for each year out of each year's revenue.

In view of the foregoing, then, why should we not use the funds available, or that would be made available for road purposes, instead of levying a tax on the future, paying a large sum as interest on bonds, which interest will exceed the amount of the bonds.

Next Presidency Is Involved in Fight for House

BY SAM W. SMALL.

Congress is adjourned and the president has recommended that the people "forget Washington" for a season and take up social and economic home problems; but all attemps to "adjourn politics" is something else again.

Whenever one listens in on current conversations the political prospects of the future are, most frequently, the uppermost topic.

The President's Prospects.

Politicians of both parties are discussing the president and his policies. They realize that in some way they cannot satisfactorily explain, he has caught the imagination of the people-at-large and is regarded by them as their friend and champion. His stand for rigid and drastic economy in the administration of the government is immensely popular. While they cannot grasp all its working details, nevertheless, it listens good and they are strong for it. They believe that what he is aiming to do is what they want done—that is, to get as dollar's worth for every dollar spent and reduce their taxes.

That, in a nutshell, is what the president is trying to accomplish. Evidently he is banking upon his success in those two lines to give his administration distinction and popularity. He is repeating the processes that made Jefferson's regime one of fiscal fame and popular favor; and that way lies the best chance of another term for him.

Does He Want Another Term?

That question is the puzzler with which the leaders of his own party are wrestling. No one expects him to give any information for its solving. The querists can only look to his acts for an answer. They are eagerly and curiously watching his smoke. They are firmly convinced that he likes the job. It is not visibly wearing on him. His phlegmatic temperament and precise living reduce sensibly the burdens of office. Its opportunities and powers fascinate him and few will be surprised when, and if, he lets it be known that he wants another term. It is very generally agreed that his filling out the Harding period was not a term and that the "no-third-term" cry would carry little force against him.

The Big Risk Ahead.

The feeling grows that the president's big risk is in wheat congress may do with his policies when it convenes again. When he assumed office he inherited an administration already organized and a congress elected without any thought of him or his particular views. Now he has to face a legislature with a majority of republicans, it is true, but not all of them in complete tune with his ideas of what the country needs and should have straightway.

The insurgent bloc in the senate is making hay out west while the vacation sun shines. It has blood in its eyes and "revanche" for its ostracism by the regulars in its battle-cry. But its only chance to ball up the president's program is to join the democrats, or vice versa, and to the latter proceeding there are strong objections in regular democratic ranks.

Winning the West.

There is a lively suspicion that the president has gone out to "win the west." Half of his cabinet is from the west—Kellogg, Wilbur, Work, Hoover and Jardine—and there is a growing belief that if Secretary Weeks retires from the war office, as is expected, the portfolio there will pass to a western man. That would give the people west of the Mississippi the heaviest representation in the cabinet since the government began.

The grand idea seems to be that the political balance for the next decade, at least, is going to turn on what the west does. The south does not figure much in republican calculations; the east alone is impotent; without strong and reliable support in the west, the G. O. P. will "go out permanently," and so the president is well advised to pray and work for fair republican weather in the west and northwest.

A Very Real Danger.

The very real danger zone through which the president and his party must navigate is marked by the ides of November next year—the off-year election of a new congress.

Should the democrats win the house, which is their present main objective, all presidential and republican plans for the future would require drastic revision. Signs are accumulating that the democrats, by playing their hand adroitly next winter, can win the house of the seventieth congress, cut the administration's line of march, and have the promise of an open road to the white house in 1928.

Past performance in the national arena since 1874 warrant the faith that the party that wins the house next year will win the presidency two years later.

Mothers' Day

BY M. ASHBY JONES, D. D.

No matter what one's view of the Christian religion may be, he is, indeed, dead to the highest and holiest appeal who does not respond to the beauty of that scene at the cross when Jesus, turning to Mary, said: "Woman, behold thy Son. Then said He to the disciple, 'Behold thy mother'." The appeal is to that which is best in human life.

Civilization will have lost its vitality when it ceases to respond to the sentiment of this scene. It is a sentiment, but every genuine sentiment has its significance. When sentiment loses this it becomes a maudlin mimicry of a real force in human life. Here, I think, we may readily catch the beauty of the chivalry of Jesus as He remembers, even in the hour of agonizing death, to commit His mother to the protecting care of the beloved disciple. But there is something even deeper here. He is the "Son of Man." Is not this manhood at its very highest, committing motherhood to the protection of manhood, for all time as a sacred obligation? Is not Jesus saying to the men of today, as He points to womanhood, "Behold thy mother?"

Conservation of Civilization.

It is something more than a mere appeal to physical strength to protect physical weakness. Here is an appeal for the actual preservation of the human race. It is an appeal for the conservation of those forces and faculties by which we have climbed thus far, and by which alone we can ever hope to reach the highest levels of living. There are many ideas which we have considered to be fundamental, which we have had to revise or surrender. They did not stand the test of human experience. But here is one, which we may safely say, has been proven beyond even the hypothesis of a doubt.

To woman alone has been entrusted the sacred function of motherhood. It is this, and this alone, which differentiates her from man. All that is truly feminine grows out of this high and holy office. Upon her ability to bear and rear sound children, depends the whole future of the race.

It is difficult even to suggest the profound meaning of this. The nation's destiny—its hopes, its dreams of achievement in commerce, art, literature, religion, all its unfinished tasks, its uncompleted plans—the deepest purposes of its life, depend upon the quality of the mothers of today. Here are to be found the springs of the life of tomorrow, the source of its thought, the stamina of its accomplishment, the quality of its purposes. With such a conception of motherhood, we must not limit our vision to those women with favored homes and surroundings. We must be thinking of the womanhood of the community, of the nation, the womanhood of the offices, the stores, the factories, the streets and the tenements, and then hear Jesus saying to a nation, "Behold, the mother of your children."

A Mother's Obligation.

But Jesus also spoke to the mother, saying: "Behold, thy Son." Upon her He placed the most tremendous of all human responsibilities. Motherhood means more than the bearing of a child. It also means the rearing of a child. Biologists tell us that the most significant difference between brute and human life, is to be found in the lengthened period of infancy. It is that period when the babe is dependent upon the mother. It is dependent so largely for the very direction which its personality shall take. It is dependent upon her for its very definition of life, itself. It is the mother who will summon those latent and sleeping faculties and forces of the personality, either to the highest and the holiest, or to the baser and more degrading. She is to give to that boy his first definition of woman, and will largely determine his obligations and attitude toward the motherhood of the world.

No mere sentimental weakling is fitted for this greatest of all tasks. The mother who can be kissed, laughed at, petted, and then set aside, is a failure. Her interests should be as broad as those she hopes for in the life of her son. Her knowledge of life must be varied and accurate. Her sympathies must be broad, as well as sensitive. Her honor must be high, and her principles clean and strong.

A mother's religion must not be what is so often called "a woman's religion," as if it were something to be kept within the quiet of the home too fragile to be carried into life. The very phrases, "Mother's Bible," and "Mother's God," too often carry with them the idea of feminized sentiment, which is to be kept in the quiet of the home, and only to be referred to in sentimental condescension. A mother's religion, which is to be of value, must be one which her boy, as he leaves home, can take into the daily experiences of life.

May the chivalry of Jesus possess the hearts of the sons of America today, and may the loyalty of Mary be the inspiration of our mothers.

Hope of Rural Youth Is Largely Dependent On Standard Schools

Editor Constitution: What has been done in Sumter can be done in nearly all counties in the state. That county did not wait for the state to step in and give them these consolidated schools—even if it is the duty of the state to do it. A few counties like Sumter and men like J. E. D. Shipp, who have seen the vision of greater educational advantages for the country child, will lead other counties to make the same great step toward progress in every line in Georgia, for that is what it means.

Compare the rural districts of fifteen years ago with now. Why the difference? Why so much land lying out? Why the communities so thinly populated?

Fifteen years ago the rural sections were well populated, every one contented and apparently prosperous. Every community had its baseball teams—and such ball players! And picnics where everybody from all the surrounding country met, talked farming, politics, etc., and had a general good time—with all kinds of eats for a "dinner on the ground," or, perhaps, a well-cooked barbecue. But where have all these pleasant customs gone? When have we seen a good old-fashioned picnic, etc.?

The answer is easy: Every one lived up to society and society was living up to every one. A young man decided to become a lawyer; he read law, was admitted to the bar, or, perhaps, he decided to become a doctor. With his scanty knowledge—at the same time equal to every one in an educational way—he went to a medical college with no requirements (as now) to meet, and numerous other instances. Now, let a young fellow who takes every advantage of the country school read Blackstone and see how far he will go as a lawyer, or even become admitted to the bar. Let him finish one of our country schools and try to even enter college, saying nothing about meeting medical college requirements, and see if he will get in or ever become a doctor.

I am not criticising society at all for this state of affairs, but I appreciate the fact that the requirements are as stringent as they are, because society will be benefited and the people blessed. But here is my question: How is the country boy going to compete with the city boy? And here is my point:

Give him this opportunity without having to leave home at 12 or 14 to get it. The consolidated school is the only solution to the question. When this system of schools is established in every county prosperity will return in every business line and there will be no more talk about Georgia slipping. The rural communities will grow and prosper—just as sure as they did when our own fathers walked four and five miles to school in order to come up to social requirements of the time, who will now make every effort to make those same four or five miles made easy with Ford trucks, good roads and at the other end a good standard school so their children may meet social requirements now.

Turn about is fair play—so give him a chance!

Let the work go on and give us more men like Mr. Shipp!

Highway Division Bonds Solution of the Problem

Editor Constitution: The good roads meeting held at Ellijay last Friday has created a great deal of interest among the people of Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer, Fannin and Union counties and has tended to convince all of our people that the next session of the general assembly should create by constitutional amendment another road district by grouping the counties of Fulton, Cobb, Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer, Fannin, Union, Towns, and perhaps other north Georgia counties into one district with authority to authorize and issue road bonds for the purpose of constructing a first-class hard-surface highway from Atlanta to Hiawassee in Towns county, Georgia.

It seems that under present conditions the state as a whole is unwilling to vote in favor of authorizing the sale of public road bonds for the sum of seventy million dollars or even for a much less amount. If in creating the district as suggested the proposed constitutional amendment carries a provision setting aside the proportion of the license tax on automobiles and the gasoline tax to which the counties which may compose this road district are entitled for the purpose of creating a fund with which in part to pay off and discharge the bonds so issued, there will be no difficulty in inducing the voters of such district to authorize their issue at an election to be held for that purpose. We have reached a point where it has become entirely unnecessary to resort to argument to convince any person of the necessity and importance of good all-the-year-round public roads. Our argument must be confined to showing the people how much less it will cost them to retire the road bonds than they are now spending for gasoline and repair of the cars which they own and use on bad and muckey so-called public highways.

The Rose of Mother's Day

A red rose if she's living,
A white rose if she's dead.
And, oh! they own the whole wide world
Who still can wear the red!
A red rose for her laughter,
The glory of her eyes,
Her tender voice and guidance
And when the twilight dies
The fragrance of her kiss,
Her soft and warm embrace,
The rare and petaled loveliness
That gleams within her face!
The hundred things she's doing
Each hour of the day
To make this whole world better
In every mode and way;
A red rose for her singing
As on through life she goes
With never thoughts of resting
'Til life's sweet chapters close!
Oh, rich you are, unmeasured,
If still today you know
Her constant smile and nearness,
If still your heart can go
Beside her, cheer her, love her,
And give her cause to see
In you her prayers all answered,
All virtues that should be!

A red rose if she's living,
And brightening life's page,
A white rose for her memory—
Our priceless Heritage!
A white rose for the glory,
A mother leaves behind,
Her high and stainless virtues,
That every day we find
Are such a noble pathway
For our feet to go—
A path that leaves our hearts unstained,
Our souls as white as snow!
For mothers' pathway through this life
Tho' hard it is for them,
Is always fragrant—beautiful,
As was the Life of Him.
A white rose for the courage
That gleamed within her eyes,
The courage that a mother knows
And never, never dies—
Te vigils that she kept above
Each small and trundle bed
When illness came, and even Death
Crept near with pallid tread;
A white rose for her valor,
The faith within her breast
That won a partnership with God
Within the Gates of Rest!

A red rose if she's living,
A white rose if she's dead—
And, oh! they own the whole wide world
Who still can wear the red!

WEEKLY BIBLE TALK

Saul Becomes a Christian

BY WM. JENNINGS BRYAN.

TEXT OF TODAY'S BIBLE TALK BY MR. BRYAN.
(Acts 9:1-12, 17, 18)

And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest.

And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem.

And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a oice, but seeing no man.

And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

And he was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Arise, and go into the street, Ananias. And he said, Behold I am here, Lord.

And the Lord said unto him, which is called Strait, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus; for, behold, he prayeth.

And hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hand on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord , even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost.

And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

Saul becomes a Christian—the four words that constitute the sentence that embodies the subject for consideration today state one of the most important facts in history.

When we consider the part that the Christian religion has played in the world during the last nineteen hundred years and the part that Paul has played in the interpretation and spread of the Christian religion, it is doubtful whether there are any other four words of such large import—except only words used in reference to Christ.

Paul has not only played one of the greatest of roles, but his conversion is the best known and the most dramatic of all conversions recorded in religious literature. Paul was a scholar—a pupil of Gamaliel, one of that day—and carried into his religious work an educational equipment unequalled by any of his co-laborers, and unapproached by any except Luke, who was a physician.

A Unique Conversion.

Paul's conversion was not only sudden, but it turned Paul from a violent opponent of Christianity to one of its chief exponents. In few other cases has such a revolution been wrought in a life and in no one else were the two extremes, the former and the latter atttiude, so far apart.

The first mention that we have of Paul, known then as "Saul of Tarsus," was when, as a young man, he was present at the stoning of Stephen, the first martyr. Luke casually remarks, in describing this scene, that "The witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul."

Our text for today begins with the first and second verses of the ninth chapter of Acts in which we are told that "Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest," and that he requested "letters to Damascus unto the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem." There is no disguising the fact that Saul bitterly hated the Christians.

The Indifferent Man.

I digress a moment to say that even such hatred as Saul exhibited was scarcely less discreditable than the indifference of unmentioned multitudes.

The man of conviction, however wrong he may be, is worth converting; if he can be won over there is no telling what good may be accomplished, but an indifferent man is of little value to a cause after he has been won. If he just leans one way or the other, it does not matter much which way he leans.

Saul's zeal against the Christians measured not only his menace to the Christian church, but it also measured the aid that might be expected of him when his heart surrendered to Christ.

As Saul drew night unto Damascus, "suddenly there shined round about him a light out from heaven: and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" The light was real and the voice was audible. The men who were with him "stood speechless, hearing the voice, but seeing no man."

Conclusive Proof.

The skeptic may scoff at the account that Luke gives, but it only shows how prejudice may blind one to the most conclusive proof. That Saul saw the light is sufficient; it outweighs the testimony of all the skeptics who have lived since. That Saul heard a voice is likewise established beyond the possibility of a doubt. Both the light and the voice are proven by the conduct of Paul afterwards. Any court of justice in the world would, according to the rules of evidence, decide that the account is authentic and that the facts are true as stated.

Saul inquired, "Who art thou, Lord?" and the answer received was, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest." No one who has followed the career of the great evangelist and read his defense of Christianity can doubt that he was convinced that it was Jesus who addressed him. From that moment on, he was a living witness to the reality of Christ and to the incomparable character of His message.

Blind Saul.

Saul was told to rise and enter the city, being assured that it would be told him there what he must do. When Saul rose from the earth, he found that he was blind; he had to be led into Damascus. For three days he was without sight and did neither eat nor drink. And now we have another one of those meetings that cannot be explained as a mere coincidence. There was "a certain disciple" at Damascus, named Ananias who, like Philip, of whom we have recently studied, had a vision. He was a man whose heart was open to divine suggestion and the suggestion came to him.

Ananias was directed to go into a certain street, called Strait, to a certain house—the house of Judas (both Ananias and Judas had unpopular names, but they were in no way related to the Ananias who tried to cheat the church or to Judas who betrayed the Savior). He was to find in the home designated a man of Tarsus, named Saul; Behold, he prayeth." Here we have a devout follower of Christ, just the kind of man to carry the message intrusted to him, and it was to be carried to one ready to receive it—to one who was praying.

Paul's Vision.

The next verse gives us another fact that has an important bearing on the result. Paul had a vision or dream also in which he had seen this same man, Ananias, coming to restore his sight. Ananias immediately set out upon his mission and found Saul waiting for him. And then comes the statement of another fact; Ananias had been informed of what had occurred to Saul when he was blinded by the light from heaven.

Ananias proceeded to restore Saul's sight. "There fell from his eyes as it had been scales; he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized."

It is a simple story and yet of tremendous import; it has meant regeneration to millions upon millions of human beings. Let us consider some of the practical lessons that may be drawn from the conversion of Paul.

First it proved that there is such a thing as a new birth.

The change wrought in the heart of Saul was as mysterious and as marvelous as any miracle recorded in Holy Writ. If the feeding of a multitude with a few loaves and fishes cannot be accounted for by the laws of nature and must be explained by the exercise of supernatural power, equally impossible of explanation by any natural laws is the change that took place in Saul's heart. God alone, or Christ exercising a power which God imparted to Him, could transform Saul, the persecutor, into Paul, the Christian hero and martyr. Saul's mind was purged of selfishness and egotism and filled with humility and a passion for service.

An Oft Repeated Miracle.

A similar miracle has been wrought in the hearts and minds of millions who have been led by the Holy Spirit to love God devotedly and neighbor as self. Those who deny the possibility of the miracle simply shut their eyes to that which has gone on in other's lives and will take place in their own hearts if they are but willing to "let the Saviour in."

Saul's conversion is also proof of the Bible truth that the heart—not the mind—is the center of volition and the seat of the will.

Saul's conversion was not the result of an argument addressed to his intellect. No effort was made to convince Saul's reason that he had been mistaken in his facts or in his conclusions about Christ. A Christian would not have dared to enter into an argument with Saul of Tarsus and Saul would not have listened to him for a minute. This was a subject upon which his mind was not open—"he breathed out threatenings and slaughter." God blinded Saul with a light that was brighter than the noon day sun. The hour chosen for this miracle in the physical world was an hour when nothing but a light more powerful than sunlight could have been seen.

Mind and Heart.

Christ's question was more compelling than syllogisms. It is not necessary to approach one through the mind, however much skeptics may declaim against the use of any other route leading to the will.

We learn, also, that the mind is but a mental machine and the servant of the heart. Saul had a master mind, but it had not a word to suggest in reply to the question of Christ. Why did not the giant intellect of this persecutor of Christians rush to the defense of its master when he was confronted with an indictment against the conduct which his mind had approved?

Because that is not the business of the mind. There is no morality in the mind, neither has it any inherent strength to resist the heart or to refuse the commands issued by the heart. When Saul was persecuting the Christians his thoroughly trained and ever active mind was running to and fro in search of plausible arguments to justify the killing of Christians, and it found arguments sufficient for Saul's heart. The heart does not need many arguments or strong arguments to support what it wants to do, and the mind, therefore, has no trouble in manufacturing them.

What Paul Preached.

But when Saul was converted, his splendid mind was just as ready to furnish adequate reasons to justify his new course. If the reader will examine Paul's speeches as reported by Luke in Acts or as embodied in the epistles of Paul, he will see how loyal his wonderful brain was to the heart as that heart waged an unceasing warfare against the world, the flesh, and the devil.

If all the rest of the Bible were burned up, leaving only the words of Paul, his activities were so great and his utterances so comprehensive that the vital principles of Christianity could be gathered from his sermons and letters.

He preached "Christ and Him crucified."

He declared the deity of Christ and dwelt upon the atoning power of His blood.

He testified to the wonder working power of His Lord and Master, and in the name of Christ wrought miracles himself.

Emphasizing the Resurrection.

He laid special emphasis upon the resurrection. No one has stated the facts about the resurrection more clearly or more positively, and no one has more magnified the vital importance of Christ's resurrection. The fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians contains the consolation most frequently drawn from the Bible for the comforting of those who mourn the death of loved ones.

In Saul's conversion, we see the beginning of a mighty career. It was marvelous at its start, matchless in its course, and magnificent in its conclusion.

Things New and Old About The Bible

Biblical Difficulties and Explanations

BY REV. W. P. KING,
Pastor First Methodist Church
Gainesville, Ga.

There are several examples in the Bible of a literary structure which results from the compilation of different documents.

The compositeness of the Pentateuch or inclusive of Joshua the Hexateuch is now generally admitted. Sovce, a conservative scholar, assures us that "modern research has shown that a considerable part of the most ancient literature of all nations was of composite origin, more especially where it was of a historical or religious character. The most ancient books that have come down to us are with few exceptions essentially compilations. About the general fact of the compositeness of the Pentateuch, competent critics of all schools are now agreed."

Furthermore there is general agreement as to the existence and number of documents in the Hexateuch, the Johevist, the Clohist, Deuteronomy and the priestly Code: J. E. D. and P.

There is no more occasion for being disturbed over the existence of these four documents than for the analogous fact of the four Gospels in the New Testament. The Diatessaron of Tatian in latter part of second century combined into a continuous narrative the four Gospels.

Prof. C. A. Briggs, writes: "I doubt whether there is any question of scholarship whatever in which there is greater agreement among scholars than in this question of the literary analysis of the Hexateuch." Prof. Delitzch writes: "God is a God of truth. The love of truth, submission to the yoke of truth, abandonment of traditional views which will not bear the test of truth is a sacred duty, an element of the genuine fear of God." The compilation of different documents is so evident that it may be seen by the person who possesses no technical scholarship. Two accounts of creation can easily be detected. In Genesist the first chapter and through the third verse in the second chapter the creation is in six days, the order is plants, animals, man, and the man and woman, all created simultaneously. In Genesis second chapter from the fourth verse to the conclusion of the chapter there is the second account of creation in which the number of days is indefinite, the order of creation is man, plants, animals, and the woman is created after man. There are two accounts of the flood. In Genesis 6:19 one pair of all the animals is taken into the Ark, and in Genesis 7:2 seven pairs of clean animals and one pair of the unclean. Other variations occur in the two accounts.

Three Versions.

We have three versions of the Ten Commandments. The first and oldest is in the 34th chapter of Exodus and moves altogether in the realm of ritualistic religion. The second version of the Ten Commandments is in the 20th. Chapter of Exodus and is the one most commonly used in Sunday schools and churches. The third version is in the 5th chapter of Deuteronomy. While in substantial agreement, there are certain marked differences between the second and third versions. In Exodus 20, the motive for observance of the Sabbath was in the fact that God after the six days of creation rested on the seventh day. In Deuteronomy 5, the motive for the seventh day rest was gratitude to God for the deliverance from Egypt. These and many other varying accounts of the same events make utterly impossible the verbal dictation theory of inspiration.

Dr. C. R. Brown says: "We cannot play tricks on the trained intelligence of mankind in claims we make about the Bible and get away with it. If we should succeed in getting away with it for a time with carefully selected groups of people, who feel that there is something pious and truthful in hiding their heads in the sand while their sentiments go marching on, the day of reckoning which is forever on the way, which soon show us that the cause of truth and righteousness which we were supposed to defend had gone down at that very point in shameful defeat."

The master said, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." To all those who are tempted to any sort of intellectual shuffling in the interest of this man-made dogma of the inerrancy of scripture I would command those words of the Apostle, "Not walking in craftiness or handling the word of God deceitfully, but by the manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to everyone's conscience in the sight of God."

There is the peculiar bias of the different writers of the prophetic and priestly periods. The Priestly Book consists of the priestly laws and the priestly narratives. The priestly laws are in the book of the covenant, the deuteronomic torah and the priest code. The priestly narratives differ from the phophetic in the stress placed upon the ceremonial features of religion. Dr. H. L. Willett writes: "According to the priestly interpretation of Israel, past the kings and other leaders who give due regard to the liturgical elements of the national faith were the ones who prospered."

In the difference of motives appealed to in behalf of Sabbath observance the priestly conception was employed in Exodus 20, which urged the day of rest as following the example of God who after the work of creation in six days rested on the seventh. In Deuteronomy 5, the prophetic author does not appeal to a ritual obligation but to a humanitarian consideration in behalf of those who toil.

Stand Far Apart.

Dr. C. R. Brown writes: "These divergencies are not confined to mere verbal inaccuracies. It is perfectly clear that the priestly and prophetic schools stood far apart in their points of emphasis and in their conception of that which is vital in religion. If we were to confine our study of scripture to the book of Leviticus and other portions of the priest code, we might well believe that a man's eternal salvation depended at that time upon his painstaking observance of cerimonial requirements, even to the proper burning of the two kidneys and the fat in animal sacrifice. But when we turn to the great phophets of the, eighth century before Christ, Amos and Hosea, Micah and Isaiah, we find in their utterance an open scorn for the current ritual of that day as a positive hindrance to the cause of real religion. The offering of a thousand rams or of ten thousand rivers of oil in sacrifice would avail nothing. "He hath showed thou O man what is good! And what doth the Lord require of Thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

The difference between priestly and phophetic conceptions run not only through the Pentateuch in the creation story, the account of the flood, and the giving of the Ten Commandments; and through the prophets in which the priestly elements is reduced to a minimum, but are seen also in the variations between Chronicles and kings. Dr. George T. Ladd writes: "It is doubtless true that the writer of Chronicles shows a strong priestly bias and generally reproduces the speech of the ancient prophets, without much attempt at exactness, but in his own fashion and language. Nor can it be claimed that his work has the same value and trustworthiness as history, which belongs to the work of the writers of first and second Kings."

However the historical revelation which was made to the Patriarchs and Moses is assumed in the prophetical writings and is by no means disturbed in its essential and permanent features by the differance of viewpoint between the prophetic and priestly writers.

Among Us Georgians

Some Observations by W. C. WOODALL

It is not strange that confidence in the powers of the Georgia legislature to perform almost the unperformable itself is growing, and so a communication that finds its way to this column from an earnest-minded citizen in a Georgia city need not excite surprise.

It was just a year or so ago, it will be recalled, at a late hour on the last night of the dying legislature, that the house passed a resolution repealing the law of gravity. The law in question has at times occasioned serious inconvenience, especially to those of our Georgia citizens who chance to fall from high buildings or other eminences and clearly are in dire need of repeal.

On the same night a law was passed decreeing that in future the Chattahoochee river should empty into the Atlantic ocean instead of the Gulf of Mexico. It was the idea of the legislature that change is the law of life, that variety is essential and that a river that empties too long into just one gulf, or one ocean, gets into a rut, not to say a channel. For untold centuries the Chattahoochee has been favoring the Gulf of Mexico with its company and its patronage, while the body of water leaving the shores of Georgia itself—the Atlantic, Georgia's own ocean—has been passed by, ignored and really insulted, if you can call a snub an insult.

So the Georgia legislature very properly took the Chattahoochee in hand and by the resolution adopted not only rebuked it in most practical manner for its partiality, but told it most explicitly where it should go!

* * * *

Our friend at Athens must have had all this in mind when he wrote this column as follows:

"There is a wrong to be righted. The Georgia legislature is the right body to right it. I appeal to it, in confidence, for relief. Let the facts be set forth in the 'Among Us Georgians' column—they speak for themselves.

"I speak of the limitations of northless and southless as compared with the boundless eastness and westless of this world. You start to traveling east, say, and you will be traveling east from then to eternity. You can go around the earth 40 times in succession and you will always be headed east. Or, start out going west and keep on traveling and you will be going west for all time.

"But start due north. Very well; the beginning is fine. You think you have enough northness to last forever, but when you reach the north pole you find that you are entirely out of northness, that you have only southness left. You can keep on traveling, in a straight line, but from then on you will be going southward: that is, until you reach the south pole, when you find your southness—tank all empty, but in some way you have acquired a new supply of northness. From then on you are traveling northward. They shift you about too much. You are still going in a straight line, but instead of letting it be an all-north or an all-south proposition they just give you a 50-50 deal.

"All this is not only confusing and demoralizing and intensely annoying, but is also unfair. The situation should be equalized in some way and the injustices should be corrected. I know of no other body on earth quite so well qualified to straighten this tangle and give acutely needed relief—or any other assemblage that would tacke this, or any other problem, with greater alacrity or good cheer—than our own Georgia legislature. I make this appeal in the full confidence that the necessary bill will be prepared and passed.

Arthur Emrich, of Columbus, used to work for a wholesale firm in one of the Alabama cities as a traveling salesman. The contract under which they operated was rather unusual. While Mr. Emrich was in the home city for the week-end the firm was to pay his expenses. The contract also provided that either party could end the relations at any time without giving the other party previous notice.

Every Friday afternoon Mr. Emrich would get in from his five-day trip and duly make report. The management usually found some serious flaw in his work for the week, or reproached him bitterly for some sin of omission, winding up by firing him in dramatic manner. The young man would draw his pay and it would be all over.

At a very early hour Monday morning one of the members of the firm would telephone Mr. Emrich at his hotel, reemploy him, and give detailed directions about where to spend the week. In the meantime, of course, the young man had been "on his own," paying his living expenses for Saturday and Sunday out of his own pocket!

Sometimes when the 'phone message came early Monday morning nothing would be said specifically about reemploying him, but the firm member speaking would simply tell him that the train for Opelika or Tuscaloosa or Calera or wherever it was he was to be sent, would be leaving in just one hour.

A good many years ago an enterprising Georgia real estate dealer secured an option on Warm Springs. He had never been to Warm Springs but he had heard a good deal about it and thought it would be a good thing to get an option on. Getting options, by the way, was his specialty and the very joy of life to him. He never went to New York but once; his friends said that he returned home almost heartbroken because, in his own words, he "couldn't get an option on the place!"

This gentleman, as we say, had never been in person to Warm Springs. He had heard that the water there was warm but this claim he privately considered as mere bunk—just a point in salesmanship. In other words, he regarded it as a case of hot air, instead of hot water.

But he was good business man enough to know that warm water would be a real attraction and a strong talking point, and so enjoined those charged with the responsibility of preparing his advertising matter to lay it on strong about the hot water.

Finally our friend decided to visit Warm Springs in person one day. He found that the picturesque location of the place, in the heart of Pine mountains, not only justified but possibly surpassed the alluring phrases in his advertisement. And then he came to the brisk-flowing branch that ran from a warm-water spring. It was a cool morning and the water was giving off vapor.

"Dip your hand in it!" a friend told him.

He did so and the expression of this honest-faced, fatherly-looking real estate man was almost ludicrous as he exclaimed:

"Why it IS warm."

This little incident—it is given just as it happened, for the writer chanced to witness it—may take on timely interest now that the present owners of Warm Springs are making such extensive improvements at that widely-known Georgia resort.

Sunday Health Talks

Food for the Athlete

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

A second year high school boy aged fifteen says he is trying to make the track team, particularly for the mile run. He asks whether with proper training this will be beneficial or harmful, and if harmful whether a shorter distance would be so. Finally he would like to have a diet recommended.

A high school boy should not try for the mile run, but he should go in for the short run. When he is of college age and development, then the mile run will be all right for him. The same rule applies in the question of football. Anyone with any training in physical education or medical knowledge knows that football is a dangerous thing in high school, that the sport is far too strenuous for immature boys. It is all right for young men of college age and development. Likewise marathon races are not for growing boys. Short races are all right. The main trouble with high school athletics in general is that the thing is too often controlled by uneducated "coaches" and various outsiders who may have professional standing in the sporting world but are certainly not qualified by education or training to control this important part of education. Again, it is a very common practice in high schools where this abuse prevails, to permit any youngster who has the inclination to enter upon a more or less sketchy course of "training" without even a nominal physical examination to determine his fitness first.

The high school boy with athletic ambition should take precisely the same food as any other boy of his age, but more of it in proportion with his physical activity. A boy in his early teens ordinarily requires more food than his father does, for the boy is generally more active physically than his father, and the boy requires a surplus to supply the energy necessary for growth.

There is an old fallacy among athletes that one in training, especially when approaching a contest, should restrict the amount of water he drinks. This probably arose from an ill-advised method of reducing weight quickly. The weight can be cut down a few pounds in a few hours if one refrains from drinking a few pints of water, of course. A pint's a pound the world around. But unless we ignore the physiology and hygiene concerned here, this method of "making" an arbitrary weight for a contest is to be condemned as a positive handicap to the athlete. Perhaps associated with this fallacy is another one, to the effect that the athlete training for a contest should not take milk. He should take as much milk as an ordinary boy of his age should have, and for the average high school boy this is around a quart a day. Of course this should be taken in small amounts spread over the day, at the usual mealtimes. It would be unwise to fill the stomach with a great quantity of fluid or other food immediately before a contest. A third fallacy of the old "trainers" related to the fancied strengthening value of protein, particularly meat, beef. Excesses in meat eating were actually a detriment to athletes in the old days. Too much protein is bad for anybody, and fatal to the aspirations of the athlete.

Here is a fair average menu for a high school boy in athletics:

Breakfast.

An orange or a baked apple. Any cereal, with cream and sugar. Glass of milk (the milk may be flavored with cocoa if preferred).

Lunch.

Any thick soup, with crackers or a roll or vermicelli. Bread and butter. Any kind of cheese or meat, or a salad. A glass of milk. Any sweet or dainty.

Dinner.

Meat or fish or fowl or eggs. One or two baked potatoes, preferably eaten with the skins. Butter or gravy. Toast, roll or bread. Some fresh green vegetable in season. A glass of milk. Pie, cake or other sweet.

It is healthful practice for any growing boy or girl to take an extra lunch, say at mid-afternoon or before retiring at night if desired, and such a lunch should consist of a sandwich and milk, or some cookies, and milk, or bread or crackers and milk, or just bread and butter with sugar on if desired, or bread and cheese.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Environment.

Which is the greater factor in a child's life, the prenatal influence of the influence of environment? Eleven years ago we adopted a week-old boy baby and we love him dearly, but since reading so much about prenatal influence we are afraid. Even as I write I can see our darling boy at play with his dog. He has a beautiful character and seems to be a fine, healthy, real boy. No one knows he is not our own. (Mrs. B. A. P.)

Answer—I think environment is the important factor. Aside from the physical or health question prenatal influence is of no importance.

When Georgians Work for Georgia---

THERE is in Georgia today a spirit of friendly cooperation between city and country and between cities themselves that will quickly reflect itself in an increased prosperity for every section of the state.

Georgians are realizing that one town cannot hope to prosper at the expense of its neighbor; but that the industry, the commerce and the agriculture of the state as a whole must be developed.

The Atlanta and Lowry National Bank has for many years been in close touch with leading men from every section of the state. We can see in this spirit of friendly cooperation a Greater Georgia—the full development of our tremendous natural resources and a permanent, dependable prosperity.

Our experience gained through sixty years of cooperation in the upbuilding of this section and our resources of $60,000,000 are available to our patrons. We invite you to make use of them.

"Charlie's Aunt" Howard Feature Mothers' Week

Celebrating "Mothers' week," the Howard offers Syd Chaplin in "Charlie's Aunt," as the special attraction for the coming week.

"Charlie's Aunt" is the funniest old lady that has ever been seen on the screen. In fact, the entire picture is a scream from start to finish. It is said that unless you are hysteria-proof you had better not see "Charlie's Aunt." Funny, why, man, that word is as weak as prohibition beer when you use it to try to describe this picture. It's nothing short of an hysterical spasm. Before it's half over you'll be gasping for breath and wishing you could get a minute to catch up on the laughs, Because, "Charlie's Aunt" is a HE.

Charlie and Jack are fiercely in love but they can't get the sweet young things alone long enough to propose to them. So when they learned that "Charlie's Aunt," from Brazil, "where the nuts come from," was going to pay them a visit, they gave three rousing cheers and invited the girls to luncheon. The girls arrived and so did a wire from "auntie," saying she'd be delayed. The boys were panic stricken, for they knew the girls wouldn't stay without a chaperone. Then along came "Babbs" on his way to a play rehearsal all dressed up in curls, black taffeta and bonnet and looking for all the world like a dear little old lady. The boys hastily grabbed him and introduced him as "Charlie's aunt from Brazil, where the nuts come from." Did the girls fall for "auntie?" We'll say they did. Then follows the host of embarrassing situations which make some of the most hilarious comedy that has ever been seen on the screen. If you do not want to laugh, our advice is, stay away from the Howard all next week.

No doubt has ever existed as to Syd Chaplin's ability as a comedian, and if there had his performance in "Charlie's Aunt" would have convinced even the most skeptical. It is far and away the finest thing that he has ever done. His characterization of "Charlie's Aunt" is one of the funniest that the screen has disclosed in many years. It places him well at the top of the list of the really few gifted fun-makers.

"Charlie's Aunt" is the type of picture that is sure to please all who see it. Although the stage play was written nearly 40 years ago, the picture revives all its original mirth. For sparkling comedy of the first water, nothing has ever been produced that even approached it.

The adeptness with which the players fit into their screen characters is remarkable. Each seems ideally cast regardless of the importance of the part, and the performances individually are very well done. Syd Chaplin, especially outdoes himself in the role of the dear sweet old lady "from Brazil, where the nuts come from."

"Mothers' week" is also to be a gala week on the stage. First there is to be a reproduction of Whistler's famous painting of his mother, posed by a living model. During the showing of this reproduction Mr. Charles Winn, one of the most gifted of Atlanta singers, will sing beautiful "Mother O' Mine." This number will be especially attractive, in view of the fact that the Howard is celebrating "Mothers' week" this week. As an extra added attraction the management of the Howard has secured the services of the "Old Home Town String Band," these boys coming to the Howard direct from the mountains of north Georgia. They specialize in playing the old-fashioned melodies as they are played by the mountain folk. This act should prove to be very entertaining and interesting. The music as played by these boys is the same type that is used for the old-fashioned country breakdown dances. The leader of this band is Clayton McMichen, who has won the state fiddlers' championship six consecutive times. Other members of the band are Robert Stevens, Jr., Mike Whitten and Low Stokes. Everyone is sure to enjoy this attraction.

Alex Keese conductor of the Howard Symphony orchestra has compiled an especially appropriate overture, which he is calling "When Mother Was a Girl." It is composed of numbers that were popular 30 or 40 years ago and will no doubt recall many pleasant incidents and associations to a great number of mothers. Another of the Robert Bruce scenic pictures, which are so popular with Howard patrons, will be shown as the orchestra plays the ever popular "Traumerel," by Schumann.

The feature picture, "Charlie's Aunt," is very carefully scored, many light numbers enhancing the funny situations in the picture. The nut theme that is to be used for "Charlie's Aunt" is an especially revised arrangement of "Forget-Me-Not," by Allen McBeth.

The entire show at the Howard this week is very funny and is sure to afford all who go to that popular playhouse an evening of excellent entertainment.

"Greater Than Marriage."

(At Alamo No. 2.)

Vitagraph's special production, "Greater Than Marriage," which will be shown at Alamo No. 2 for the first time in Atlanta beginning Monday, is an adaption of Louis Joseph Vance's famous novel "Joan Thursday." A cast of many film favorites has been furnished by Director Victor Hugo Halperin, of whom the principal artists are Lou Tellegen, Marjorie Daw, Dagmar Godowsky, Peggy Kelly, Tyrone Power, Mary Thurman, Effie Shannon and Raymond Bloomer.

The story revolves around a young girl who sought a stage career and was forced to choose between her art and her husband. Many interesting views of New York city have been introduced in the scenic background.

Another Vitagraph special, which is also a first Atlanta showing, is "The Beloved Brute," Stuart Blackton's latest offering to filmdom, which will be offered at Alamo No. 2 patrons on Thursday and Friday. An exceptional cast headed by Marguerite de la Motte, William Russell, Mary Alden, Stuart Holmes, Frank Brownlee and Victor McLaglen comprise the leading players.

Warner's Classic, 'The Dark Swan,' At the Rialto

The famous movie team of Marie Prevost and Monte Blue has covered itself with glory once more, this time in the new Warner classic, "The Dark Swan," recreated on the screen from the novel of Ernest Paschal, which is to play at the Rialto theater this week.

In addition to the superb interpretations of Miss Prevost and Monte Blue, Helene Chadwick completes the trio of leading players, who form the triangle of beauty, brains and love, each striving for supremacy over the other.

The story concerns itself with two sisters, Eve and Cornelia Quinn, opposites in temperament, disposition and physical appearance, and the audience is held fascinated by the silent struggle that Cornelia, the reserved, unattractive girl, makes for romance and happiness. Eve on the other hand has love, bounty and admiration thrust at her from all sides, and with the empty-headed selfishness of a peacock, demands the attentions of more than one man to keep her interested. She succeeds in winning Lewis Dike, the one man who might have loved and married Cornelia. Realizing the bitterness of defeat, Cornelia decides to live her own life, apart from those who have hurt her so deeply, but Dike returns to her, when he finds his wife lacking the finer qualities of her sister.

With a strong supporting cast, which includes Vera Lewis, John Patrick, Lilyan Tashman, Arthur Rankin, Carl Miller and Mary McLaren, "The Dark Swan" is a faithful reproduction of the vivid novel by Ernest Pascal, due to the able directorship of Millard Webb.

The manner in which the printed world differs from the visualized silver screen was never better exemplified than in "The Dark Swan."

In the book the reader is presented with a heroine who is in every sense of the word an "unattractive woman." She has no loveliness to speak of and we are given to understand that she is plain as plain can be. Neither rouge nor the thousand and one artifices with which a woman enhances her charm can avail Eve Quinn.

Now when it was decided to make this into a Warner Brothers' classic of the screen, a difficulty presented itself. Whereas imagination could conceive of a really homely girl, the eye refused to accept such a figure. The list of screen actresses was combed for one who would be "really and truly" ugly—without success. What chance would the picture have to succeed in popular favor, with a heroine who was a fright, who looked dowdy, who simply didn't exist.

Warner Brothers' casting department solved the problem by choosing Helene Chadwick for the role of Eve, the plain girl. Miss Chadwick was chosen, not because she is plain, but because she is such a splendid actress that she could adapt herself to the part, and by a thousand and one clever touches suggest the girl who couldn't vie with her lovely sister in looks.

Whitney Hubner will conduct the musical program. The comedy is "Fares Please." Pathe News is shown.

THE MONSTER AT LOEW'S FEATURING LOU CHANEY

Mystery, thrills and suspense are found in "The Monster" the Roland West screen production of the famous Crane Wilbur mystery melodrama which is the feature picture offering at Loew's Grand theater this week. Every element of suspense, every trick to send a chill down the spine is said to be found in this great mystery play.

There are ghostly hands that stretch forth menacingly, there are sliding panels in which queer faces appear, there are skeletons in closets, and a demented surgeon who fascinates his victims with hypnotic power. There is an exciting story of a mysterious disappearance, there are two young men in love with the same beautiful girl and their desire to win her by their boldness and courage, there are breath-taking moments that are said to make spectators hold on to their chairs in suspense.

Lon Chaney, famous for his characterization in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and "He Who Gets Slapped," appears in the title role, portraying a mad surgeon whose twisted brain manufactures a scheme whereby he lures victims to his sanitarium that he may perform operations upon them. He is superb as the suave and evil Dr. Ziska.

Johnny Arthur, noted as a stage comedian, makes his second cinema appearance in the role of the hero, who longs to be a detective and whose ingenuity finally solves the town mystery and wins him the town beauty.

The leading feminine role in the production is played by Gertrude Olmsted, who started her picture career via the Elks-Herald-Examiner Beauty Contest, and who seems more beautiful than ever in "The Monster."

Small town mystery, romance and the thrilling experiences of two men and a girl in the haunted den of the Monster, make up a story which holds one's interest by its tense moments, harrowing incidents, and comedy relief.

Others in the cast are Hallam Cooley, Charles A. Sellon, Walter James, Knute Erickson, George Austin, Edward McWade and Ethel Wales.

C. Gardner Sullivan wrote the titles, and Willard Mack and Albert G. Kenyon did the scenario. The photography is by Hal Mohr, and Roland West adapted to play to the screen, and also directed "The Monster."

NAZIMOVA IN 'MY SON' METROPOLITAN FEATURE

The Nazimova of "War Brides" and "Revelation" flames again before the cameras in Edwin Carewe's production of "My Son."

The Russian actress transcends even her fine work in 'Madonna of the Streets," and gives a performance that for sheer artistry and perfection of technique stands alone in the cinema field.

Carewe proved himself a great director when he produced "The Bad Man" with Holbrook Blinn. He topped that work with "Madonna of the Streets," and "My Son" bids fair to establish him in the class with Griffith and Lubitch. With keen touches he pains the picture of the Portuguese fisher woman who loves three men with the simplicity comparable to a real artist's painting and portrait.

Ana Silva, in the story, loves Ellery Parker, the sheriff, and Felipe Vargas, the fisherman. But more then either of these she loves her son Tony. She gives him all of a mother's love, and all is harmonious until a flippant flapper from the great big city comes to the town. The reaction is volcanic. Trouble leads young Tony toward prison walls.

How Ana's faith in her son and the great love she holds for him are justified forms the basis for the most delicious screen fare offered to the celluloid appetites of our local fans in some time.

Besides Nazimova, "My Son" boasts the presence of Jack Pickford, Hobart Bosworth, Constance Bennett, Mary Akin, Ian Keith, Charley Murray and Dot Farley, all of whom give splendid performances.

The settings by John D. Schulze, furnish picturesque atmosphere.

To carry out Mother's week motive Enrico Leide has selected another song by an Atlanta composer as the theme for "My Son," "Mother" by B. S. Williams, a tender melody cleverly harmonized, has been orchestrated for the feature production. The overture "Seminola" is a new Indian love song arranged in a syncopated form and excerpts from Elsie Janis's puzzles will accompany the comedy picture.

In keeping with the spirit of Mothers' Week" one of "Our Gang" comedies, "The Love Bug," will be presented. This is said to be the funniest comedies that these clever children has ever made. The Metropolitan News and Views with a number of local interesting views made by Tracy Mathewson, the local Fox cameraman, will complete the program.

'COBRA' LAST PLAY AT LYRIC THEATER

Acclaimed by critics as one of the very best plays of its kind ever put on the American stage "Cobra," the sensational hit of last season, will be presented this week at the Lyric theater as the climax and final farewell of the Lyric Players who end their long record of success in Atlanta Saturday.

The selection of the play was made because the management wished to give patrons of the theater a vehicle that will make the memory of the players live in the minds of Atlantans, it is said, and from advance information no better selection could have been made.

The play is a drama by the young and brilliant Martin Brown, author of "The Lady," "The Exciters" and other hits, and is said to be his masterpiece. It is a virile document of life today and while intense and at times startling it is not at all offensive. It will provide an excellent opportunity for the versatile players to make a profound impression on their last appearance here.

The story is a rather elemental one, built around two college chums, who are utterly unlike. One of them is a quiet and studious chap and the other a virile and magnetic athlete. A designing woman of the world meets them and is instantly attracted to the latter. But she learns that the other has inherited several millions and marries him for his money.

Later she begins to tire of her bargain and seeks love outside the marriage bonds. She turns to her husband's friend, who is in love with his secretary. She finally persuades him to accompany her to a hotel but he resists her lures and returns to his home. Later the hotel burns down and the woman is killed in the conflagration. The play ends on a note of tragedy with two lovers united and the husband deriving what joy he can from their happiness.

String Band.

(On Howard Prologue.)

Another surprise feature of the Howard bill during "Mother's week" will be "The Old Home Town String Band," featuring Clayton McMichen. These boys are from the hills of north Georgia and they play the old-fashioned music as it is played in the hills.

McMichen, who is the leader of the band, is known as the "Georgia Wildcat Fiddler." He has won the state fiddling contest six consecutive times. Other members of the band are Robert Stephens, Jr., Mike Whiten and Low Stokes.

This feature is only one of the many surprises in store for patrons of the Howard during the showing of Syd Chaplin in "Charlies' Aunt."

Colleen Moore holds three of the first four box office records of the West Coast theaters chain, one of the largest in the country. The honor productions, all First National release, are "Flaming Youth" first, "Sally" second, and "So Big" fourth. To First National goes third place as well, credit being given Frank Lloyd's "Black Oxen," starring Corinne Griffith.

LOEW'S GRAND OFFERS ALL-STAR VAUDEVILLE

Five of vaudeville's most popular acts will form the all-star bill to be offered this week at Loew's Grand theater and which will include a wide variety of entertainment. The big bill has been winning popular approval everywhere and has been hailed by many critics as the best bill offered on the circuit this season. Each of the five acts is of the headline kind and has appeared many times as a headline attraction. Eighteen people are used in the five acts showing the magnitude of the new bill.

One of the pleasing acts of the new bill is the musical comedy gem, "Ideals," presented by Forrest & Chilton. This bright and breezy skit is filled with pretty songs and dances and is bristling with bright lines The plot is based on the theme of the domestic lottery. Warren and Frank DuFrane play the leading roles and are assisted by Dorothy Byrne and Elsie Chilton. The skit is a laugh provoker and ends in a surprising and funny climax.

Another popular turn is the harmony singing program offered by the Piccadilly Four. Good quartets are always popular, and these four singers have an unusually good reputation. They include harmony songs both new and old and also some of the latest topical song hits. They vary their act by presenting some dancing and some clever comedy. The Piccadilly Four is one of the ablest singing organizations in vaudeville and will bring a large repertoire of musical numbers for the local engagement.

Pantomime acts always please through their novelty and Charles C. Grohs has one of the best acts of this kind on the stage this season. It is filled with novelty surprises and also produces lots of fun. He is assisted by J. Haw and Winona who add some pleasing singing and novelty dancing to the turn.

Every now and then the circus contributes something unusually good for vaudeville and this is the time it happens to be the Five Lelands. Here are five sensational performers who amuse themselves by juggling human beings. They present a daring and dangerous juggling act which keeps the crowds thrilled and entertained.

One of the best offerings on the new bill is that of Ward and Bohlman in their laughing skit, "After the Banquet." These performers are known as "the chaps with the aristocratic walks" and they are able and resourceful funmakers. Ward is a clever comedian with some original ideas of fun and he produces something new for the vaudeville fans this season. His partner is a capable player and is an admirable foil to the comedian.

The Loew full-week policy is one of the magnets which draw these excellent acts to the Loew circuit and this policy is providing Atlanta with some of the best things in vaudeville. The new bill is one of the biggest and one of the most varied sent out on the circuit and has been praised everywhere it has appeared.

The Loew feature picture offering for the week is "The Monster," a mystery play said to offer a thrill a minute. Lon Chaney, one of the screen's foremost actors, heads an all-star cast in the picture.

HARTLEY, PATTERSON TOP KEITH PROGRAM

Arthur Hartley and Helen Patterson, who have been seen in Atlanta on several occasions in their numerous vaudeville successes, are returning the first three days of this week to Keith's Forsyth theater where they will present their latest skit entitled "One Night" as the headlining feature.

"One Night" was written by J. Arnold and Kenneth Keith and revolves around the sinister but alluring theme of a thief in the night.

But the thief happens to be a young lady thief and the burglary is for charitable purposes, which makes it entirely different. There is absolutely nothing serious about the skit. On the contrary it affords as much fun as is possible to cram into a limited space of time and there is an equal amount of capable singing and dancing.

At all of these things the clever principals excel. They keep the material provided them by their authors in constant action increasing its amazing velocity with every gesture and every line.

Another act of unusual merit will be that of Fred Elkins, Joe Fay and Jack Elkins in "Mirth and Melody."

After a tour including the principal music halls of England, Ireland, Scotland and France, this popular trio have returned to America to again amuse vaudeville patrons with their droll wit and melodious qualities. They help things up a bit by the use of a piano, castenets and tambourines. Then while one of the trio presides at the piano, the other two show some real clog dancing.

The Mallia Bart company, stars of the New York Hippodrome, will deliver to Forsyth patrons a carload of laughs in their vehicle entitled "The Baggage Smashers.' Mallia-Bart company are comedy athletes. Their act is replete with hilarious fun but nevertheless requiring the utmost skill in its presentation.

The Royal Gascoignes, another feature of the bill, begin where most jugglers and equilibrists end. Their performance is a series of feats beginning with the most difficult and ending with the seemingly impossible.

The Royal Gascoignes were commanded to appear before the King of England in 1912 and in 1913 gave a private performance at the Marlborough House, London, before Queen Alexandria.

Juan Reyes, famous concert pianist, often called the "Paderewski of Vaudeville" will conclude the program in a wonderful demonstration of his ability.

A Pathe news reel and a Felix Cat comedy also are features.

LASKY OFFERS YOU MOVIE OPPORTUNITY

If you want to get into the movies, you don't have to go to Hollywood now.

Such is the advice of Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation.

The screen colony of the west is deluged with thousands of beautiful girls and talented young men eager for a screen career, Mr. Lasky pointed out, adding:

"Their chances of winning film fame are just about one in 50,000. There are no facilities at the bustling studios of Hollywood or New York to give the aspiring newcomer a chance. There is, however, a crying need in the films for new faces, new talent, new personalities."

Mr. Lasky cited the remarkable overnight rise to picture fame of Betty Bronson, Mary Brian and Esther Ralston, the trio of young beauties who appeared in "Peter Pan." Also the case of Greta Nissen the beautiful Norse girl, who has been the leading feminine role in three outstanding pictures right at the outset of her film career.

A way has now been found, Mr. Lasky said, for the screen-struck girl or boy to enter the picture ranks on a substantial basis without even going to Hollywood.

"We plan to accomplish this by means of a school for screen acting," he said. "Approved by the New York commissioner of education and incorporated under the laws of New York state, this institution will be known as the Paramount Pictures school, and it will open its first term on July 20, with twenty students—ten boys and ten girls.

"How are we going to find these twenty eligible young people? I'll tell you.

"We have divided the country into thirty zones. In each of them we have representatives. Young men between the ages of eighteen and thirty, and girls between sixteen and twenty-five, who would like to get into the movies, have been told to apply to the Paramount representative nearest their homes. With their applications they should send three photographs. One should show a front face, another a profile, and the third a full length figure.

"From the thousands of photographs received from all over the country we shall select the most promising, and these boys and girls will receive camera tests. Those who show the finest results in these tests will be selected to enter the school.

"Any boy or girl who reveals exceptional talent will be offered a contract to act in Paramount pictures. This contract will be for one year at a reasonable salary, but will carry an option on the player's services for four additional years, with adequate increases in salary provided for each successive year."

Send your photos or call and see E. E. Guyer, southeastern representative, 51 Luckie street.

Dorothy Sebastian, brunette beauty of Birmingham, Ala., has quit George White's "Scandals" to enter the movies. She is now playing a featured role in Frank Lloyd's new First National picture, "Winds of Chance." Screen tests indicate a very promising film future for Miss Sebastian, who is just 19 years old.

Betty Bronson, the "Peter Pan" girl, has completed a feature role in "Are Parents People?", in which Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor also have leading roles.

NEW CAMEO THEATER OPEN ON PEACHTREE

Atlanta's newest theater, the Cameo, opens its doors to the public for the first time Monday. It was built especially to bring back to Atlanta the big feature pictures after they have had their first run. It was felt by the owners that there was a special demand for just this type of a theater. Quite often something comes up to prevent the movie fan from seeing some special picture on its first presentation, and the desire still lingers to see this picture. Then again theater goers want to see a favorite production a second time, or take some friend that they want to see the picture. This new theater affords all this in an atmosphere of perfect refinement. Programs will be changed every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, three times a week.

The Cameo theater will fill just this demand and located at 61 Peachtree street just below Auburn avenue it will be easily accessible to the entire downtown section.

A choice selection of pictures, playing within a reasonable time after they have had their first showing, and at popular prices should make this an immediate favorite in Atlanta.

This theater has been equipped with the very best screen, thus assuring Cameo patrons first class projections.

During the warm weather the theater will be cooled with twin typhoon fans, in this way providing a most comfortable place.

Short schedules will prevail at the Cameo, thus making it possible for many to see some of their shows within the lunch hour. This will also prove of interest to those who have only a short time between shopping hours. Located in the heart of the shopping district the Cameo makes a special appeal to the women of Atlanta.

Patrons who are particularly anxious to see a feature from the start can telephone the box office for starting hours and then arrange the shopping schedule accordingly. Experienced employees will be in charge of the theater and information will be furnished by all cheerfully.

An announcement of the program for each week will be made in the Sunday papers.

The program for the opening week is Monday, Tuesday, "A Thief in Paradise" with Aileen Pringle and Ronald Colman. Wednesday, Thursday, Coleen Moore in "So Big" will be the feature. This is taken from Edna Ferber's Pulitzer prize winning novel. Paramount's big special "North of 36," featuring Lois Wilson, Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence and Noah Beery is the Friday, Saturday offering.

Carl Callaway Tenor.

(At the Rialto.)

Carl Callaway, Atlanta's finest lyric tenor, has been engaged to sing the prologue at the Rialto theater in honor of Mothers' week, it was announced Saturday night. The prologue will be staged by Whitney Hubner, and will be one of the most unique ever put on in Atlanta, according to the management.

"Mother O' Mine," in a new and charming arrangement, will be featured in Mr. Callaway's repertoire for the prologue. He will be accompanied by Whitney Hubner's Rialto orchestra. Several other ballads appropriate to the occasion will be sung.

Carl Callaway, having scored a great success in a prologue during the run of "The Swan" at the Rialto recently, was brought back for the Mothers' week prologue by popular demand.

In addition to the accompaniments for Mr. Callaway, Director Hubner has arranged an exceptional musical program for the Rialto's feature picture, "The Dark Swan."

Thomas G. Coleman Back Home Again; New Theater Boss

You know the old saying "once you live in Atlanta and leave, you always come back." That's Thomas Coleman's case. The New Cameo theater manager, The Cameo opens its doors for the first time at 61 Peachtree street Monday. Coleman's case is two-fold, for it was only a few years back he married an Atlanta girl, Miss Doris Tolbird, so you see at once why he gives up the management of Three Macon theaters to become part owner and manager of the Cameo in Atlanta.

In coming to Atlanta to accept his new position, Mr. Coleman returns after an absence of a number of years. He was at one time connected with the American Telephone and Telegraph company, of this city, and during the World war he served with the Fort McPherson Red Cross unit.

Football Star.

He is a graduate of the University of Virginia, where he was a noted football player, and it is said that in a game played against Yale, he made a touchdown which marked the first time a football player from a southern college crossed the Yale goal line.

For three years he was a member of the Birmingham organization of the Famous Players Lasky corporation. He was city manager of Paramount's Macon theater before coming to Atlanta and for the past five years has divided his time between Birmingham, Ala., Memphis, Tenn., and Macon.

"Way Down East" Is Palace Feature for Monday and Tuesday

D. W. Griffith's wonder photoplay, "Way Down East," taken from the famous New England play of that name will be seen at the Palace theater, Inman Park, Monday and Tuesday. In "Way Down East" Griffith has taken this simple story of plain people and infused into it the charm of New England homesteads with their quaint surroundings, dreamy perspectives of enchanting roadways, meadows and hills; old-fashioned sleighing parties, barn dances and bucolic humors in a manner which is said to create a new form. It is a tale of the love that conquers all things but which is retarded for the time being by gossip and thrilling adventures prompted by the stern dictates of a simple people who have but one code of honor. It is presented by what is said to be the finest cast ever assembled for a screen production. Lillian Gish and Richard Barthelmess have the leading roles.

Jack Pickford is announced as the feature attraction for Wednesday when he will be seen in his latest starring vehicle, "The Hill Billy," a thrilling and entertaining comedy drama.

"Barbara Frietchie," the photoplay of the greatest romance in American history, will be shown for two days starting Thursday. Lovely Florence Vidor has the title role and Edmund Lowe is seen opposite her at the head of a large and notable supporting cast.

"Beyond the Border," Harry Carey's latest western, will bring the bill to a close on Saturday. For action and romance this picture is said to put all his previous pictures in the background.

"The Border Legion" Stars Antonio Moreno At Alamo No. 1

"The Border Legion," a screen version of Zane Grey's immensely popular novel by that name, will be shown here.

Antonio Moreno and Helene Chadwick are featured, and Rockliffe Fellowes, Charles Ogle and Gibson Gowland have prominent supporting roles. William Howard directed the picture, his first work under the Paramount banner.

The story is a typical Zane Grey Western thriller, an appealing tale of romance and adventure in the old days when a men was judged by his ability to handle his six-guns.

Here's a real "he-man" story in more ways than one, for Miss Chadwick is the only woman member of the cast.

"The Border Legion" is one of the best-selling stories by the author of the natural-color picture, "Wanderer of the Wasteland," etc., and has made a great picture.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

STEWART EDWARD WHITE.

On Tiptoe: A Romance of the Redwoods, was a story written by the author several years ago, and yet it is still considered one of the best and most up-to-date instructive stories that has been written.

The following is an interview with Mr. White as to the basis for this story:

Mr. White says: "On Tiptoe" was conceived and partly written when I discovered that a boy in Seattle had apparently discovered a method of tapping electricity from the earth's magnetic field without the intervention of dynamos or other mechanical devices than some especially wound coils. Credible and hardheaded witness looked into it, and reported that they had taken said coil, installed it in a boat of their own choosing and driven the boat for hours. Ditto with a motor car. Ditto with electric lights. This was very discouraging to an honest, fairly young author who had a bright idea all his own. Fortunately the inventor has run against difficulties of application which permits the yarn to get before the world is completely upset. Joke of it is, there really seems to be a basic idea this fellow has stumbled upon. But I did not get the notion from hearing of him."

The works of Stewart Edward White are widely read. He was known as an interesting figure while fishing for salmon and trout in the coast waters of British Columbia. This was one of his hobbies. (George H. Doran company, New York.)

BURNED EVIDENCE.

Mrs. Wilson Woodrow has woven an unusual story around the murder of a well-known financier, the other characters being an adventuress called "Fer-de-Lance," a young lawyer, the usual confidence man, and a beautiful orphan girl whose position is both interesting and tragic.

If the reader will pause for a moment and get his bearings, as well as a drawing on his imagination, he will know that he is going to have the pleasure of experiencing a mixed thriller full of dramatic moments with plenty of mystery which adds plots and counterplots as the story travels across the ocean to Monte Carlo especially in the effort to connect the charming adventuress with the death of Mr. Fosdick.

But why should she murder one of the world's richest men?

Why should this beautiful adventuress plot against the young and lovely granddaughter?

These two questions and many others are answered in the telling of this thrilling story which holds you in suspense until the last chapter. It also adds another laurel to the literary brow of the writer. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

THROUGH THE YEARS.

Through the Years. By Irl Allison. John Boardman, middle-aged naturalist, and also a man of mystery, landed in the mountains of northern New Mexico, land of "sunshine, silence and adobe," from no one knew where, accompanied by an invalid wife, whose days were not lengthened by the long march to this far-away country.

The pen and the eye of the writer are both well trained to describe the beauty and the weirdness of New Mexico from the description of the annual ceremony on Good Friday of the Penitentes, natives of that country, to the charm of the little adobe house which nestled 2,000 feet skyward in the giant horseshoe formed by the walls of granite rock making Hermit's Peak. The forest surrounding it is a wilderness of pines, aspen, balsam, oak and spruce.

It was in this hidden spot that John Boardman, hermit, lived with his little daughter, Ellen, who, through the many questions she asked her father, who was a man of deep study, had become well informed on tree and plant life, insect and bird life and the geographical nature of this country. But it was the birds that Ellen loved and she could easily recognize the song of almost any bird of the Rocky mountains, as well as imitate the sad lyric of the western thrush, the piping of the oriole, the cheery notes of the western robin and the musical notes of the towhee.

This is the beginning of an appealing story of a father and daughter whose life was spent far away

"Through the years.
Through the years" . . .

The story is one in which the reader will find the appeal for sympathy as the story unfolds, and later with the unfolding of the pages of Ellen's life pride and friendship will be added to the above, so that when the finale is written it will bring with it only a real pleasure in having known and loved Ellen—Elena. NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Silent Voice. By Berenice V. Dell, is a story based on a beautiful romance of the fortieth century in which the greatest knight of knighthood of all ages offers his life to science after failing to gain favor with a beautiful maiden of his own land.

While this is a beautiful romance, it is something more than that, and it will be interesting to each grown up member of a family, to scientists, inventors, astronomers and astrologers, every lover of adventure, every instructor and student, clergyman and skeptic, judge and lawmaker, philanthropist and even suffragettes will find something entertaining, in fact every American will thoroughly enjoy the author's style of weaving in a fortieth century story features that seem as impossible as did the up-to-date telephone, telegraph, airplane, radio, etc. (Four Seas Co., Boston).

The Romance of a Great Store. By Edward Hungerford, with eight illustrations by Vernon Howe Bailey. Sometime ago the author wrote a story on the "Personality of American Critics," which was widely read, but this is a more enjoyable as well as instructive book for it deals with "an aspect of business which touches every member of the community."

The book is dedicated "To the men and women of the great Macy family whose fidelity and interest, whose enthusiasm and ability have upbuilded a lasting institution of worth in the heart of a vast city."

The story is woven around the great modern mercantile establishment of R. H. Macy & Co. Mr. Hungerford tells most interestingly the history of the Macy department store from its beginning in the imagination of a New England sailor to the present day.

Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow tells the story. (Robert M. McBride & Co., New York).

The Annexation Society. By J. S. Fletcher, author of "The Wolves and the Lamb." Once upon a time there appeared in an English newspaper the following headline: "Plot to Steal England's Art Treasures."

This is the subject around which the author has woven a fascinating tale of adventure in which crooks, treasures, robbers, and the hero, who in search for the robber of the Tsar's Cross, falls in love with an innocent accomplice, who becomes the heroine.

The story moves with the swiftness of an aeroplane as it passes over cities of many lands hunting for clues.—(Alfred A. Knopf, Publisher, New York).

Spindrift. By Harold Titus. "He would not be beaten!" This is the story of a man's fight against a hidden, mysterious enemy, against the law itself, and against the elemental chill of stormy Lake Superior.—(Doubleday, Page & Co., New York).

Reconstruction. The word "reconstruction," composed of 14 letters, is not easily written by the amateur, and the study of the word is almost exhaustless. J. D. Whelpley, author of "The Trade of the World," and other books of value to the business world, has this time written a conservative, unbiased authority on the economic conditions of the nations most affected by the world war. It is called by its readers, a volume of sound common sense and pratical value.

The author has been abroad on special missions for the U. S. government and in this volume he presents material which he gathered from first hand sources during his residence in England, France, Italy, Germany and Austria.

He discusses international trade before and after the war—also immigration and emigration, as well as the conditions in the British Empire, France, Italy, Germany and Austria, as well as other countries.

The keynote of the volume is revealed in the following quotation from the preface: "If the readjustment of the now seriously dislocated affairs of the world were simply a matter of economics or business it could be accomplished without much delay; it is not, however. Passion, prejudice, jealousy, politics, ambition and self-interest, individual and national, play dominant parts in the international relations of today. It is necessary, therefore in attempting to make any estimate of the economic state of the world at the present time, and of the probable course of events in the near future, to take into account these powerful forces in their bearing upon all national and international activities."

In addition to showing clearly how the mental attitude of the peoples of the world is affecting reconstruction both favorably and unfavorably, the author examines international trade before and after the war; touches upon emigration and immigration, and individually analyzes the conditions in the British empire, France, Italy, Russia, Germany, the war allies of Germany, the European neutrals and the new governments of Europe.

The sound common sense of the book will appeal to every reader and interest in it will be threefold; from a business viewpoint, from the viewpoint of economics and from the viewpoint of political relations. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.)

JUNIOR BOOKS.

Carl and the Cotton Gin.—By Sara Ware Bassett. This is the fifth volume in the invention series. The title of the book tells that Carl must have become interested in cotton before he did the cotton gin. In fact, he had always loved the sight of the fleecy staple and he would have much preferred to have worked in a cotton mill instead of going to school.

Finally Carl's Uncle Frederick, a sea captain, came to see them and told the family wonderful tales about the different countries he had visited and of King Cotton, which he had seen growing in several different states. So Carl learned everything about cotton from the growing of the plant to the making of spool thread and different kinds of cloth.

There is an element of mystery woven all through the story which the young reader will find of special interest. The illustrations are by William F. Stecher. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

Tony and the Big Top.—By Allen Chaffee, who has written a story of the circus and the circus people who are just as ambitious to succeed in their chosen profession by keeping up the traditional standards, as the people of any other profession. The author, who has made a close study of the circus as a whole, will tell you what hard-working people they are, how the men and women are just as good, kind and clever as are to be found anywhere else.

The author has woven his story around Tony who was sent to a good boarding school upon the death of her father and mother on the trapeze, but when Tony finished school her ambition was to follow in the footsteps of her father and mother. It was soon learned that she would not be able to follow the trapeze, and the story of her new line of work is what Mr. Chaffee tells you about, how she becomes the friend and trainer of wild beasts, etc.

It is a story that will be read with interest by any of the younger set and the general tone of the work is beyond criticism.. (The Century Co. New York.)

The Indian Canoe.—By Russell D. Smith, who knowing how boys love the great out of doors, with its fishing, hunting, trapping, camp fires and all the adventures incident to an outing party camping on the banks of a stream.

The author has written a most interesting story of two men and their Indian guide on a fishing expedition in the Maine woods, and it is a tale that all lovers of outdoor sports will find full of enjoyment.

While there is really no plot, but a story is unwoven that is filled with interest, suspense, plenty of excitement, as an unprincipled man and his daughter is discovered watching the camp and the result.

Boys, and men, too, will find real enjoyment in reading about the fishing lessons that are given. What kinds of waters are best to fish in, with what kinds of bait, and how and where and when? He tells of the different moods of fish, just like the fishermen, and the reasons for the former, but not the latter.

It is a splendid book filled with plenty of common sense facts and information that is equal to that given by a private instructor, and is suitable for the boy or man who is going to spend a summer in the great out-of doors. (The Century Company, New York.)

The Camping Ideal—The New Human Race—is an appropriate book to follow "The Indian Canoe," notice of which is given. This book is a brief survey of the summer and winter outdoor camp movement in the United States with particular reference to organized cultural camps in the Atlantic and midwestern states, based upon observations made on a second camp tour undertaken for The Red Book Magazine by the associate editor, Henry Wellington Wack, author of several interesting and entertaining books for boys and girls, with a greeting by Mary Roberts Rinehart. This book is published by The Red Book Magazine, Department of Education, New York.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Cooperative Banking. By Roy F. Bergengren, whose motive in writing this book is to explain phases of cooperative banking as exemplified by the credit union, with some reference to other types of cooperative banks.

Among the interesting subjects discussed are thrift promotion, the elimination of usury, the farmer's several worthwhile problems, etc. (The MacMillan Company, New York.)

The Personal Equation. By Dr. Lewis Berman, who has written several up-to-date books, which have attracted attention. What am I? What is my neighbor? What is the secret of man's frailty or genius? The author, who is a modern scientist, answers all these questions as well as many others, so that the average reader or student can easily understand.

The following criticism explains the subject matter of this interesting book:

"And now Dr. Berman has written a thoroughly scientific, authoritative work for the layman, as thrilling a thing to read as was ever printed. It would seem from what Dr. Berman tells us that, for once, the newspaper reports have leaped ahead of actual achievements in the administration of glandular extracts. He is decidedly an authority. He is the man who wrote "The Glands Regulating Personality," the first work to handle the subject so that a hint might be inferred of the significance and extreme importance (individual, social and economic) of what we are now learning of the way in which the ductless glands regulate powers, talents, health, happiness, usefulness and character. (The Century company, New York.)

Pleasant Pioneers. An interpretation of the slavic peoples in the United States. By Kenneth D. Miller, author of the "Czecho-Slovaks in America." The attractive Slavic cover design is by B. Mrazek. (Published by the Missionary Education Movement, New York.)

The New Practical English for High Schools. First course, by W. D. Lewis, formerly deputy superintendent of public instruction, Harrisburg, Pa., and J. F. Hosic, professor of education, Teachers' college, Columbia university, New York. (Published by the American Book Co.)

PAGECOUES POINTS.

The Deadly Cross-Word.

Broken collar bones and nervous breakdowns we have heard charged to the fascinating fad of cross-word puzzling, but the most startling casualty is that of the North Chinese-American Import company, who recently went bankrupt, charging that the popularity of cross-word puzzles had ruined the mah jongg trade!

One thing is certain—in the field of indoor sport the cross-word is far ahead of mah jongg or anything else, and bids fair to remain so. According to F. R. Fraprie, whose Boston Cross-Word Puzzle book has recently been published by L. C. Page & Co., this fasciuating form of puzzle has retained its popularity in various forms, since the time of mediaeval monks. The first known puzzles were in latin, and consisted of only five words. From them, through various vicissitudes, has developed the mighty puzzle of today, which is so popular that it throws mah jongg companies into bankruptcy and devoted fans into destraction.

The Art of Jazz.

"Jazz is really counterpoint . . . Real musicians may produce effects of the most wonderful kind of good jazz. Their work will prove that there is more in jazz than the average musician usually suspects."

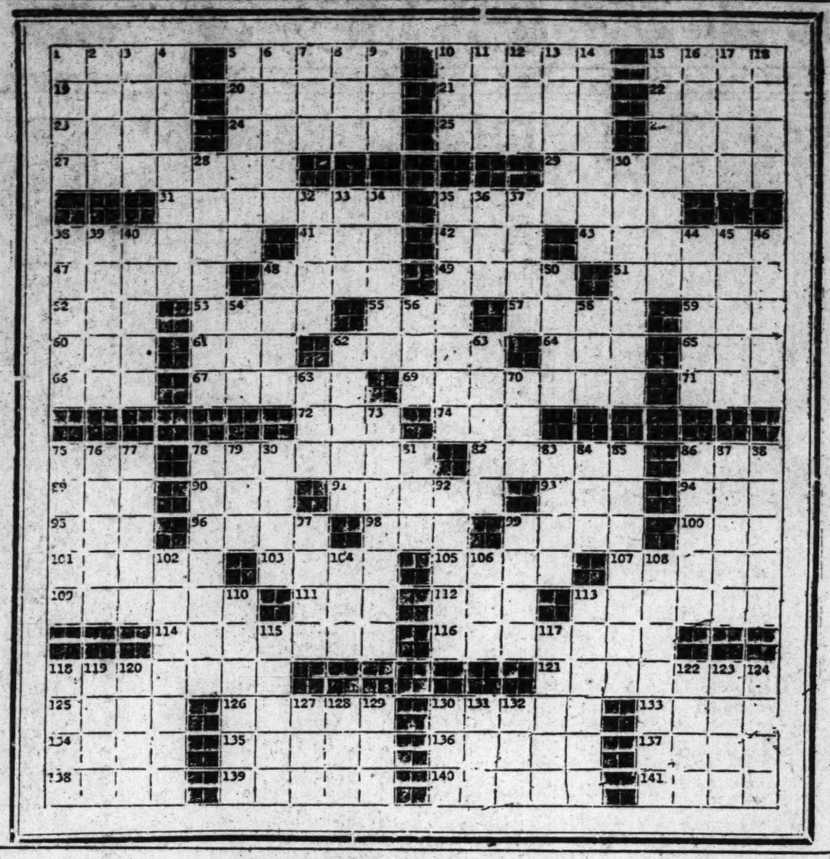

So speaks Arthur Elson, in the revised edition of The National Music of America, and his words were well illustrated at a recent private concert by one of the most prominent of the younger musicians of Boston, Louis J. Calabrese. Mr. Calabrese is unquestionably one of the few "real musicians" whom one is privileged to hear in a program of popular music, and a master of the art of jazz. His exquisite music on the trumpet and banjo will never be forgotten by those who heard him.

Radio fans will be interested to know that Mr. Calabrese is considering offers to broadcast his distinctive music, and is likely to be heard "on the air" in the near future. Those who wish to hear jazz at its best should write to Mr. Calabrese at 72 Egmont street, Boston, requesting him to broadcast; and those who wish to understand what they hear should read The National Music of America.

JOHN CROWE RANSOM AWARDED PRIZE FOR POETRY.

News comes from Charleston, S. C., that at the last meeting of the Poetry Society of South Carolina in that city John Crowe Ransom was awarded the Caroline Senkler prize for his volume of poems, "Chills and Fever," which appeared several months ago under the Borzoi imprint. The amount of the prize is $50 and the award carries with it much prestige in the south. It is given annually for the volume of poems by a southerner judged to be the best to appear during the preceding twelve months.

Today's Cross-Word Puzzle

HOW TO SOLVE CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

The numbered squares are the starting points for words extending horizontally or vertically or both. One letter to a square. Words end at first black square encountered or border of puzzle. Pick out a word that fits a given definition and space. This gives you a clue to other words that cross it, and they in turn to still other words.

CONSTIPATION means INEFFICIENCY

Watch your bowels! Constipation produces disease, misery, inefficiency, premature old age, senility. Have your bowels moved today? If not, you are constipated. They should act at least twice daily to be healthy. They should be kept open to carry off the parts of food the body does not use, and which, if left in the body, become horrible and loathsome poisons which breed sickness and often fatal disease. If your bowels don't move, they need help badly.

Dr. Caldwell's
SYRUP PEPSIN
The Family Laxative

—gently opens the gates of clogged-up bowels and allows nature to restore a healthful condition. It is the prescription Dr. Caldwell used for years in his extensive practice and consists of a pleasing liquid combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and aromatics. People have used it for over 30 years, and it has kept millions healthy and well.

It Helps Nature Do What Our Modes of Living Prevent

The work of professional men, clerks, bookkeepers, students, shop men and nearly every one today, because of deficient muscular activity, tends to produce constipation. If you are constipated, you need Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. 10,000,000 bottles used annually prove its effectiveness.

It is sold everywhere medicine is sold—and guaranteed. Try it at our risk. Your druggist will return your money if it fails to do as promised.

When baby is constipated, has wind-colic, feverish breath, coated tongue, or diarrhea, a half-teaspoonful of genuine "California Fig Syrup" promptly moves the poisons, gases, bile, souring food and waste right out. Never cramps or overacts. Babies love its delicious taste.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has full directions for infants in arms, and children of all ages, plainly printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Vast Army of Boys Headed for Camps Under Y.W.C.A. Care

New York, May 9.—This is the season when the snap of rod and line, the whisper of wind through the forests and the chatter of streams, warble a siren song to boys, old and young. To satisfy the thirst of youth for the out-of-doors, the Young Men's Christian Association is already making preparations for its hundreds of summer camps, the attendance of which is expected to exceed that for any previous year since the first camp in 1885.

Arthur N. Cotton, head of the Boys' Work of the National council, estimates that the enrollment this year probably will reach 100,000 for the 600 Y. M. C. A. camps which will be held from June to September throughout the United States for boys from 12 to 18 years of age.

This is only one phase of the summer's program. Thousands of other boys who are unable to attend camp will be given opportunities for free swimming and gymnasium training, hikes, educational trips to factories, nature study, Bible study, and abbreviated scholastic courses in Y. M. C. A.'s from coast to coast.

"Y. M. C. A. camps," said Mr. Cotton, "furnish an outlet for boy energy and provide a pathway toward the development of clean, wholesome living. There boyish impulses are directed into proper channels, leading to the formation of mental, physical, social and spiritual power."

Oil heat is here and Nokol brought it

Here two Nokols are shown, one installed in a steam boiler, and the other in a water heater.

The success of automatic oil heating for homes dates from the day the Nokol combustion chamber was perfected. It is radically different from any other method of burning oil. In it oil burns with a clean, sootless, odorless flame.

The day of oil heat is here. Nokol brought it. The success of automatic oil heating for the home dates from the day 7 years ago when the first Nokol was installed.

The leadership of Nokol, established at that time has never been challenged. Of approximately 75,000 automatic oil burners installed in the United States, by 150 manufacturers, 22,000 are Nokols.

Nokol leadership has been maintained by the principles of oil combustion the first Nokol laid down. In 7 years not one fundamental change in these principles has been necessary.

Its operating cost is less than that of coal. It is also to the best of our knowledge less than that of any other oil burner, regardless of the grade of fuel used. Nokol efficiency makes possible the use of good fuel at the lowest cost.

Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's Husband

Blue Ribbon Fiction

By Booth Tarkington

"I don't care what your husband says," Mrs. Dodge interrupted, "the woman's a nuisance."

A Story About What a Woman Knows Because She Knows; and What A Man Can't See.

AT FIVE o'clock upon a February afternoon the commodious rooms on the lower floor of Mrs. Cromwell's big suburban house resounded with all the noise that a hundred women unaided by firearms could make. A hundred men, gathered in a similar social manner, if that were possible, might either be quiet or produce a few uproaring bellowing groups, a matter depending upon the presence or absence of noisy individuals; but a hundred habitually soft-voiced women, brought together for a brief enjoyment of one another's society and a trifling incidental repast, must almost inevitably abandon themselves en masse to that vocal rioting ultimately so helpful to the incomes of the nerve specialists.

The strain, of course, is not put upon the nerves by the overpitched voices alone. At times during Mrs. Cromwell's "tea" the face of almost every woman in the house was distressed by the expression of caressive animation maintained upon it. The most conscientious of the guests held this expression upon their faces from the moment they entered the house until they left it; they went about from room to room, from group to group, shouting indomitably, and, without an instant's relaxation, kept sweet liveliness frozen upon their faces, no matter how those valiant faces ached.

Men may not flatter themselves in believing it is for them that women most ardently sculpture their expressions. A class of women has traduced the rest: those women who are languid where there are no men. The women at Mrs. Cromwell's "tea," with not a man in sight, so consistently molded their faces that the invitations might well have read, "From Four to Six: a Ladies' Masque."

What gave most truly the color of a masquerade was the unmasking. This, of course, was never general, nor at any time simultaneous, except with two or three; yet, here and there, withdrawn a little to the side of a room, or near a corner, ladies might be seen who wore no expression at all, or else looked jaded or even frostily observant of the show. Sometimes little clubs of two seemed to form temporarily, the members unmasking to each other, exhibiting their real faces in confidence, and joining in criticism of the maskers about them. At such times, if a third lady approached, the two would immediately resume their masks and bob and beam; then they might seem to elect her to membership; whereupon all three would drop their masks, shout gravely close to one another's ears, then presently separate, masking again in facial shapings designed to picture universal love and jaunty humor.

But among the hundred merrymakers there was one of whom it could not be said that she was masked; yet, strange to tell, neither could it be said of her that she was not masked; for either she wore no mask at all or wore one always. Her face at Mrs. Cromwell's was precisely as it was when seen anywhere else; though where it seemed most appropriately surrounded was in church.

Calm, pale, the chin uplifted a little, with the slant of the head always more toward heaven than earth, this angelic face was borne by the straight throat and slender figure like the oriflamme upon its staff; and so it passed through the crowd of shouting women seeming to move in a spiritual light that fell upon them and illuminated them, yet illuminated most the uplifted face that was its source. Moreover, upon the lips the exquisite promise of a smile was continuously hinted; and the hint foreshadowed how fine the smile would be; how gentle, though a little martyred by life, and how bravely tolerant.

The beholder waited for this promised heavenly smile, but waited in vain. "You always think she's just going to until you see her often enough to find she never does," a broad-shouldered matron explained to two of her friends at Mrs. Cromwell's. The three had formed one of the little clubs for a temporary unmasking and were lookers-on in venice for the moment. "It's an old wornout kind of thing to say," the sturdy matron continued; "but I never can resist applying it to her. Nobody can ever possibly be as good as Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite looks. I'll even risk saying that nobody can ever possibly be as good as she seems to behave!"

"O, Mrs. Dodge!" one of the others exclaimed. "But isn't behavior the final proof? My husband says conduct is the only test of character."

"He doesn't know what he's talking about," the brusque Mrs. Dodge returned. "When we do anything noble, it's in spite of our true character; that's what makes it a noble thing to do. I've lived next door to that woman for five years, and, though I seldom exchange more than a word with her, I can't help having her in my sight pretty often. She always looks noble and she always sounds noble. Even when she says, 'Isn't it a lovely day,' she sounds noble—and, for my part, I'm sick and tired of her nobility!"

"But my husband says—"

"I don't care what your husband says," Mrs. Dodge interrupted. "The woman's a nuisance!"

"To me," said the third of the group, gravely, "that sounds almost like sacrilege. I've always felt that even though Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite is still quite a young woman, she's the focus of spiritual life for this whole community. I think the people here generally look upon her as the finest inspiration we have among us."

"I know they do," Mrs. Dodge said irritably. "That's one reason I think she's a pest. People are always trying to live up to her, and it makes cowards and hypocrites of 'em. Look at her now!"

Mrs. Braithwaite had reached the hostess, who was shouting in concert with several new arrivals; but when Mrs. Braithwaite appeared the voices of all this group were somewhat lowered (though they could not be lowered much and hope to be audible) and, what was more remarkable, Mrs. Cromwell's expression and her manner were instantly altered perceptibly: so were the expressions and manners of the other about her, as Mrs. Dodge vindictively pointed out.

"Look at that!" she said. "Every one of those poor geese is trying to look like her; they feel they have to seem as noble as she is! Instinctively they're all trying to take on her hushed sweetness. Nobody dares be natural anywhere near her."

"But that's because of the affection people feel for her," the second of the defenders explained. "Don't you feel—"

"Affection your grandmother!" the brusque lady interrupted. "What are you talking about?"

"Well, reverence, then. Perhaps that's the better word for the feeling people have about her. They know how much of her life she gives to good works. She's at the head of—"

"Yes, she certainly is!" Mrs. Dodge agreed bitterly. "She's the head and front of every uplifting movement among us. You can't open your mail without finding benefit tickets you have to buy for some good cause she's chairman of. She's always the girl that passes the hat; she's the one that makes us feel like selfish dogs if we don't give 'til it hurts! She's the star collector, all right!"

"Well, oughtn't we to be grateful that she takes such duties upon herself?"

"Do we ever omit any of our gratitude? Why, the papers are full of it: 'It is the sense of this committee that, except for the noble, unflagging, and self-sacrificing devotion of Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite, this fund could never have reached the generous dimensions necessary for the carrying on of this work. Therefore, be it resolved that the thanks of this entire organization'—and so forth. And, as a matter by the way, you never hear whether she gave any of the fund herself."

"She gives time," said the lady who had quoted her husband. "She gives energy. Mr. Battle says, 'Who gives himself gives all'; Mrs. Braithwaite gives herself."

"Yes, she does," Mrs. Dodge agreed. "It's her form of recreation!"

Her two auditors stared at her incredulously, so that she could plainly see how shocked they were; but, before either of them spoke, a beautiful change in look and manner came upon them. Both of them elevated their chins a little, so that their faces slanted more toward heaven than toward earth; both of them seemed about to smile angelically, but stopped just short of smiling; a purified softness came into their eyes; and, altogether, by means of various other subtle little manifestations, the two ladies began to look noble.

MRS. DODGE had turned her back toward the group about the hostess, but without looking she understood what the change in her two companions portended. "Good-by, ladies of Shalott," she said. "The curse has come upon you!" And she moved away, just as the ennobled two stepped forward to meet Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite in her approach to them.

"Clever of me!" Mrs. Dodge thought, with some bitterness. "Getting myself the reputation of a 'dangerous woman!'" For she understood well enough that she would do no injury to Mrs. Braithwaite in attacking her—on the contrary, the injury would inevitably be to the assailant; and yet Mrs. Dodge could not forbear from a little boomerang practice at this shining and impervious mark. The reason, unfortunately, was personal, as most reasons are: Mrs. Dodge had come to the "tea" in an acute state of irritation that had been increasing since morning. In fact, she had begun the day with a breakfast table argument of which Mrs. Braithwaite was the subject.

Mr. Dodge made the unfortunate admission that he had recently sent Mrs. Braithwaite a check for a hundred dollars, his subscription to the Workers' Welfare league; and he was forced into subsequent admissions: he had no interest in the Workers' Welfare league; and could give no reason for sending a check to it except that Mrs. Braithwaite had written to him appealing for a subscription. She was sure he wouldn't like to miss the chance to aid in so splendid a movement, she said. Now, as Mrs Braithwaite had previously written twice to Mrs. Dodge in almost the same words, and as Mrs. Dodge had twice replied declining to make a donation, the argument (so to call it) on Mrs. Dodge's part was a heated one. It availed her husband little to protest that he had never heard of Mrs. Braithwaite's appeals to his wife; Mrs. Dodge was too greatly incensed to be reasonable.

Later in the day she was remorseful, realizing that she had taken poor Mr. Dodge for her anvil because he was within reach, and what she really wanted to hammer wasn't. Her remorse applied itself strictly to her husband, however, and she had none for her feelings toward the lady next door. Mrs. Dodge and her neighbor had never discovered any point of congeniality: Mrs. Braithwaite's high serenity, which Mrs. Dodge called suavity, was so paradoxical a smoothness that Mrs. Dodge said it "rubbed the wrong way from the start." The uncongeniality had increased with time until it became a settled dislike, so far as Mrs. Dodge was concerned; and now, after Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's successful appeal to Mr. Dodge for what Mr. Dodge's wife had refused, the dislike was rankling itself into a culmination not unlike an actual and lusty hatred.

Mrs. Dodge realized her own condition; she knew hatred is bad for the hater; but she could not master the continuous anger within her. Fascinated, she watched Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite at the "tea;" could not help watching her, although, as the victim of this fascination admitted to herself in so many words, the sight was "poison" to her. Nor was the poison alleviated by the effect of Mrs. Braithwaite upon the other guests: everywhere the angelic presence moved about the capacious rooms it was preceded and followed by deference. And when Mrs. Braithwaite joined a woman or a group of women, Mrs. Dodge marked with a hot eye how that woman or group of women straightway hushed a little and looked noble.

Mrs. Dodge went home early. "I oughtn't to have come," she told her hostess, confidentially, in parting. "I try to be a Christian sometimes, but this is one of the days when I think Nero was right."

"But what—"

"I may tell you—some day," Mrs. Dodge promised, and gloomily went her way.

AT dinner that evening she was grim, softening little when her husband plaintively resumed his defense. Their daughter, Lily, the only other member of this family, inquired why her mother was of so dread a countenance.

"Me," Mr. Dodge explained. "It began at breakfast before you were up, and it's the old culprit, Lily."

"I guessed that much," Lily said cheerfully. "I haven't been falling in love with anybody foolish for three or four months now; and that's the only thing I ever do to make mamma look like this, so I knew it must be you. What you been up to?"

"Aiding in good causes," he answered, sighing. "She hates me for helping the Works, Lily. Our next door neighbor appealed to Caesar, over your mother's head. I've explained two or three hundred times that I didn't know there'd been any previous request to her; but she hates my wicked plotting just the same."

"No. I only hate your weakness," Mrs. Dodge said, somewhat relaxing her severity. "You were so eager to please that woman you couldn't even wait to consult your wife. Her writing to you and ignoring what I'd twice written her was the rudest thing I've ever had come to me, and your donation puts you in the position of approving it. She did it because she's furious with me, and you—"

But Lily interrupted her. "Mamma!" she exclaimed. "Why, you're talking just ridiculously! Everybody knows Mrs. Braithwaite couldn't be 'furious.' Not with anybody!"

"Couldn't she? Then why did she do such an insulting thing to me? Don't you suppose she knows it's insulting to show she can get a poor silly husband to do something his wife has declined to do? Is there a cattier trick in the whole cattish repertoire? She did it because she's the slyest puss in this community and she knows I know it, and hates me for it!"

Lily stared in the blankest surprise. "Why, it just sounds like anarchy!" she cried. "I never heard you break out like that before except when you were talking about somebody I liked! When did you get this way about Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite?"

"I've never liked her," Mrs. Dodge said. "Never! I've always suspected she was a whited sepulchre, and now I've got proof of it."

"Proof? That's quite a strong word, Lydia," Mr. Dodge reminded her.

"Thank you!" she said. "I mean exactly what I'm saying. Mrs. Braithwaite did this thing to me out of deliberate spitefulness; and she did it because she knows what I think of her."

"But you said you had 'proof' that she's a 'whited sepulchre;' that she's 'sly' and a hypocrite," he said. "The word 'proof'—"

"May we assume that it means reliable evidence reliably confirmed?" Mrs. Dodge asked, with satirical politeness. "Suppose you've done something disgraceful and another person happens to know you did it. Then suppose you play a nasty trick on this other person. Wouldn't it be proof that you hate him because he knows you did the disgraceful thing?"

"I'm afraid I don't follow you," Mr. Dodge said uncomfortably. "When did I ever do this disgraceful thing you're talking about? If it's actually disgraceful to subscribe a hundred dollars to the Workers—"

"I'm not talking of that," his wife said. "I'll try to put it within reach of your intellect. Suppose I know Mrs. Braithwaite to be a whited sepulchre; then if she does an insulting thing to me, isn't that proof she's furious with me for finding her out?"

"No," he answered. "It might incline one to think that she resented your poor opinion of her, but it doesn't prove anything at all."

"Doesn't it? You wouldn't say so if you knew what I know!"

Lily's eyes widened in hopeful eagerness. "How exciting!" she cried. "Mamma, what do you know about Mrs. Braithwaite?"

"Never mind!"

"But you said—"

"I said, 'Never mind!'"

"But I do mind!" Lily insisted. "You haven't got any right to get a person's interest all worked up like that and then just say, 'Never mind!'"

"That's all I shall say, however," Mrs. Dodge informed her stubbornly, and kept to her word, though Lily continued to press her until the meal was over. Mr. Dodge made no effort to aid his daughter in obtaining the revelation she sought—he appeared to be superior to the curiosity that impelled her, but this appearance of superiority may have been only an appearance; he may have foreseen that his wife would presently be a little more explicit about what she had implied against their neighbor.

In fact, Lily had no sooner gone forth upon some youthful junketing, immediately after dinner, than symptoms of forthcoming revelation were manifested: Mr. Dodge's physician allowed him one cigar a day, and it had just begun to scent the library.

"I suppose, of course, you're condemning me for a reckless talker," Mrs. Dodge said. "You assume that I'm willing to hint slander against a woman with only my own injury for a basis, instead of facts."

"On the contrary, Lydia," he returned mildly, "I know you wouldn't have said what you did unless you have something serious to found it on."

Probably she was a little mollified, but she did not show it. "So you give me that much credit?" she asked, sourly. "I imagine it's because you're just as curious as Lily and hope to hear what I wouldn't tell her. Well, I'm not going to gratify your curiosity."

"No?" He picked up a magazine from the table beside his chair, and began to turn over the pages. "Oh, very well."

"I am going to tell you something, though," she said. "It's because I think you ought to be told at least part of what I know. It may be good for you."

"For me?" he inquired calmly, though he well understood what she was going to say next.

"Yes, and you might find it wiser to consult your wife next time, even when you're dealing with people you think are saints."

"Why, I don't think Mrs. Braithwaite's a saint," he protested. "She looks rather like one—a pretty one, too—and the general report is that she is one; but I don't know anything more than that about her. She happens to be a neighbor; but we've never had the slightest intimacy with her and her husband. We've never been in their house or they in ours; I bow to her when I see her and sometimes exchange a few words with her across the hedge between our two yards, usually about the weather. I don't think anything about her at all."

"Then it's time you did," Mrs. Mrs. Dodge said with prompt inconsistency.

"All right. What do you want me to think about her, Lydia?"

"Nothing!" she said sharply. "Oh,

The Missing Link?

By Professor Raymond A. Dart

Written Exclusively for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

South African Man-Ape Closest Link to Man Yet Found, Says Prof. Dart, Its Discoverer; Is More Human Than Any Known Living Anthropoid Or Fossil, He Asserts

DURING November, 1924, there was brought to me by one of my students the fossilized skull of a monkey still partially embedded in limestone. This skull had been taken away from the lime cliff at Buxton, nine miles west of Taungs, in Bechuanaland, South Africa, as a souvenir by Mr. Izod, one of the directors of the Northern Lime Works, which is at present operating this ~~huge~~ lime deposit.

The deposit, which has the reputation of being, perhaps, the largest in the world, is one of extraordinary purity (97 to 98 per cent), but here and there in the solid face of the lime occur patches of lime-infiltrated sand. These represent old caves in the lime which, during the course of untold ages, have been entirely filled up with sand said to have been carried into the formation by underground river action from a long distance away.

Enquiry elicited the fact that from the earliest period of working lime about six or seven years ago, similar skulls had been discovered from time to time, together with many limb bones and even fairly complete skeletons. The request was made that any further bones should be saved for scientific investigation. By one of those queer tricks of fate during the following week some blocks of stone containing traces of bone were blasted out and preserved by a diligent foreman named de Bruyn. These relics were brought to the University of the Witwatersrand by Dr. R. B. Young, professor of geology.

One of these pieces of stone I immediately recognized as the cast of the cranial cavity of a creature which was closely related to the largest living anthropoid apes but more intelligent than they. This cast in stone of the creature's brain-case was found to fit accurately by its front end into one of the larger rock fragments, so one recognized that the facial skeleton of the creature must be present in this solid block of limestone.

A MONTH of steady work first with hammer, chisel and saw, and later with sharpened knitting needles and meat skewers proved this to be the case. Then there stood revealed, intact and uncrushed, virtually the entire face of a baby—the first record of a group of creatures long since extinct, but which were more human in features and in brain power than any anthropoid apes now living on the face of the earth.

Why is it that so simple, and so apparently haphazard a discovery is of interest to scientist and layman alike? Why is it that amongst numerous and seemingly more vital scientific discoveries the imagination of all humanity, sceptical or believing, is gripped by the Taungs infant?

It is because every thinking man and woman has weighed through many hours the perplexing problem of "whence have I come? what am I doing? whither am I going?" and it is because, amidst a myriad of philosophical hypotheses, science provides concrete and tangible evidence in answer to the first of this fundamental trinity of enquiry, that youth and man alike eagerly scan the writing in the rocks.

Just a century ago Charles Darwin entered Edinburgh as a medical student and began those studies which were destined to have a greater repercussion upon humanity than the work of any man within historical memory, by bringing mankind to the recognition of their evolution by the operation of natural laws. It is fitting that the centenary of his entry upon a medical career in one of the older universities of the far north should be commemorated in a medical school of one of the youngest universities of the far south by the discovery of an object presenting crucial evidence, so far as mankind is concerned, in support of his staggering assumption.

The data upon which the conclu-

DART'S FINDINGS ACCEPTED BY SCIENTISTS, U. S. SAVANT SAYS

BY DR. WILLIAM D. MATTHEW

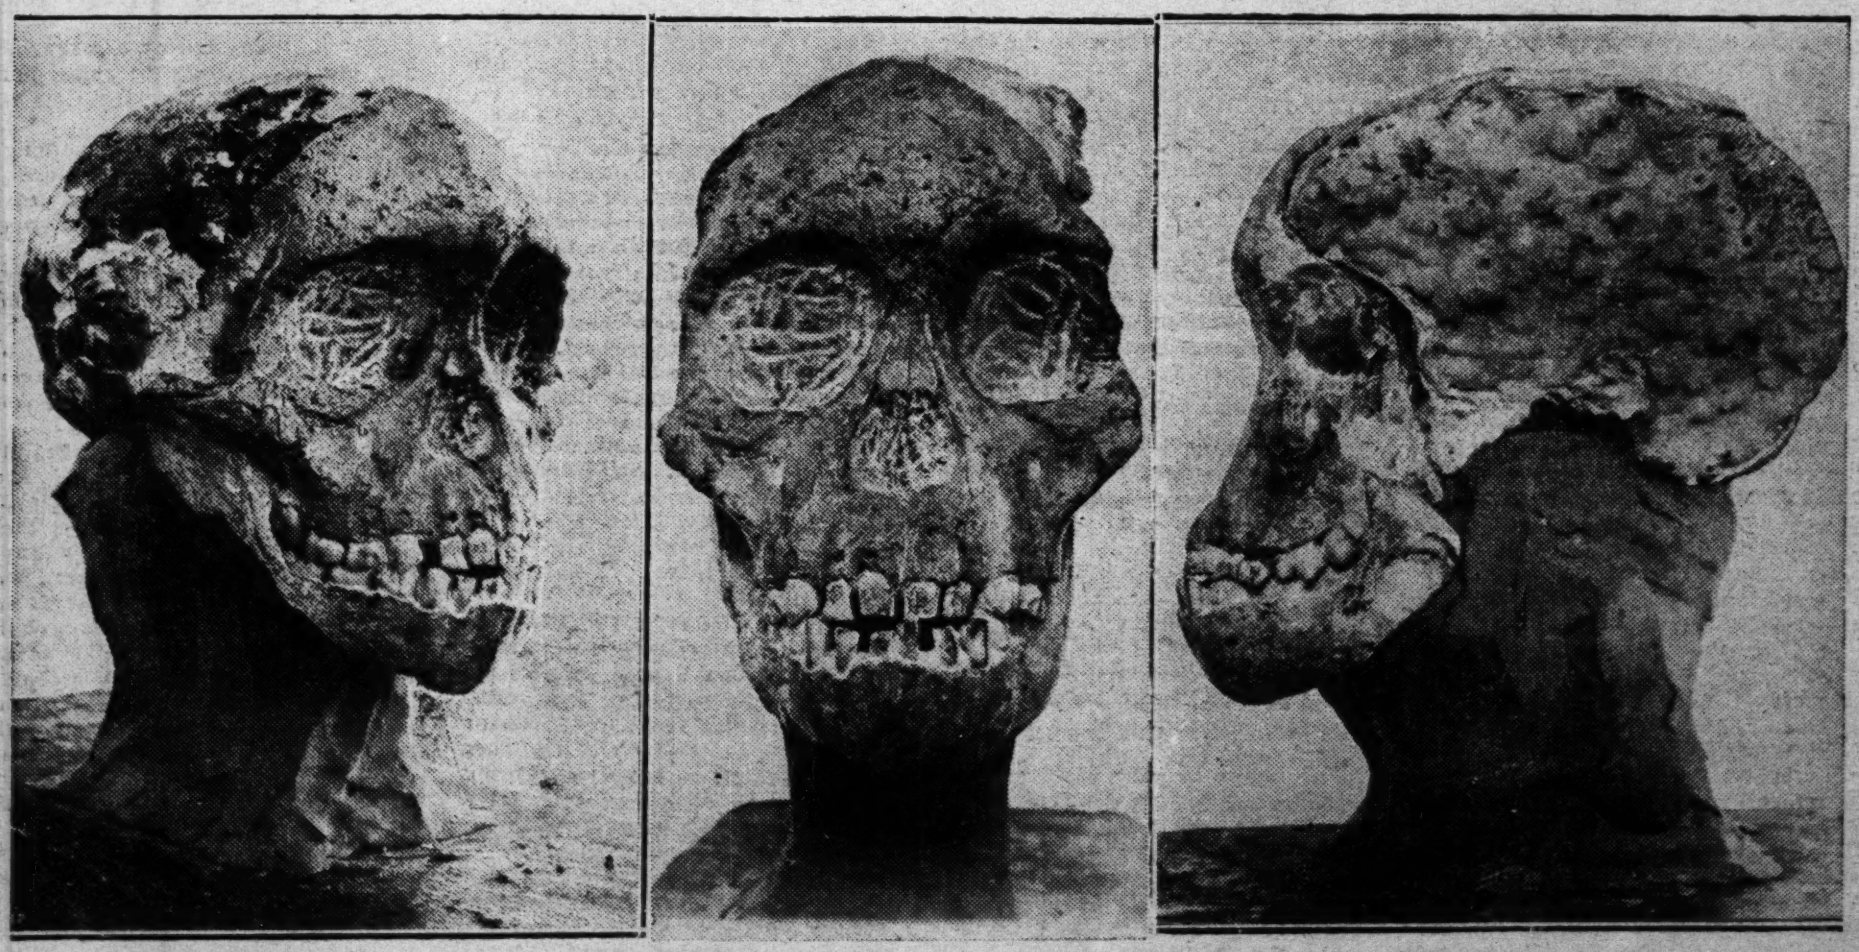

(Curator of Vertebrate Palaeontology of American Museum of Natural History)

IT IS most fortunate that this discovery came to the hands of Professor Dart, who has made a special study of human and comparative anatomy, especially of the brain. His observations and conclusions are accepted as of the highest authority by those who know him.

This new link between man and the higher apes will require most careful and detailed research before its true position can be exactly determined. Any opinions at present are more or less provisional. There is, however, as Dr. Dart points out, more evidence to go on than in almost any of the previously discovered "missing links."

An important point which has not been fully discussed as yet is the geological age of the specimen. If it belongs to the Miocene or Pliocene period it might be regarded as a common ancestor or near-ancestor of man and the higher apes. If on the other hand it belongs to the Pleistocene period it is a contemporary of early man himself and would be regarded rather as a survivor of that hypothetical common ancestor, little altered perhaps, but not quite the same thing.

Also, such a survivor found in South Africa would not signify that Africa was the cradle of primitive man, any more than the modern survival of the primitive Australian native indicates that man originated in Australia. It would point quite the other way. This is one of many interesting problems in connection with the Taungs skull that will be discussed during the next few years.

Three views of the Taungs skull. In C the brain-case is laid bare, where a piece of the cranium was lost when the rock in which the skull had been imbedded for so many thousands of centuries was blasted.—(Copyright Johannesburg Star.)

Defies the Law At

And Now Herbert Lyman Can Have the Farm Which He Swears His Dead Employer and Friend Returned From Her Grave to Urge Him to Take For His Own

NOT many weeks ago Herbert Lyman sat alone and dejected in the kitchen of a farmhouse in the outskirts of East Hampton, Connecticut, one of the little villages that surround the city of Middletown.

For twenty years he had lived there and carried on the farm for its owner, widowed Phoebe Simons. She had been more than an employer to him — a friend and congenial comrade, a woman as solicitous for his welfare as any man's mother could be.

Now Phoebe was dead and Lyman must leave the place that had so long been his home. Her heirs were claiming it and they had no use for him. They had served legal notice on him that very morning that he must get out at once.

In all the years he had worked for Phoebe Simons he had had for pay only his board and room and now and then a little money for clothes or tobacco or a day's outing at the fair. Soon after he came there she had said:

"Never you mind about wages, Herbie. You're bound to outlive me and when I'm gone I want the farm to be yours. There's a good living on the place and it will more than pay you for helping me carry it on."

So for twenty years he had plowed the fields, raked the hay, harvested the crops and, in winter, cut cords of firewood. And then Phoebe had died—without making any will. According to the law the farm belonged to her nearest relatives and Herbert Lyman, the man who had served her so faithfully, was left without a home.

Then sun had set on the evening when he faced the prospect of going he knew not where. He had not bothered to light one of the kerosene lamps. The gloom seemed a fitting match for that which filled his heart.

Suddenly, as he has already told under oath in a Connecticut court, he was astounded to see the darkness give place to a strange green radiance. He could distinguish objects in the room almost as well as if the lamp had been lighted.

As he looked about him in amazement he saw the green radiance, at a spot directly in front of him change into a patch of luminous white.

"At first," says Lyman, in telling of his experience, "it looked for all the world like a bed sheet dangling from the ceiling and swaying back and forth as if the wind was blowing it. After a minute or two the swinging stopped and I could see that whiteness settling into the shape of a human figure.

"All of a sudden it got brighter and I saw standing there so near I could almost touch her without leaving my chair—Phoebe Simons. Yes, sir, it was Phoebe looking just as natural as she did the day before she took her bed for the last time.

"She had on the gray wrapper she bought the last time I drove her to Middletown. On her hand I could see the scar where she burned herself with hot fat three years come next Thanksgiving. And she was smiling at me as good naturedly as she always did in life—no matter whether I'd tracked mud onto her clean kitchen floor or not.

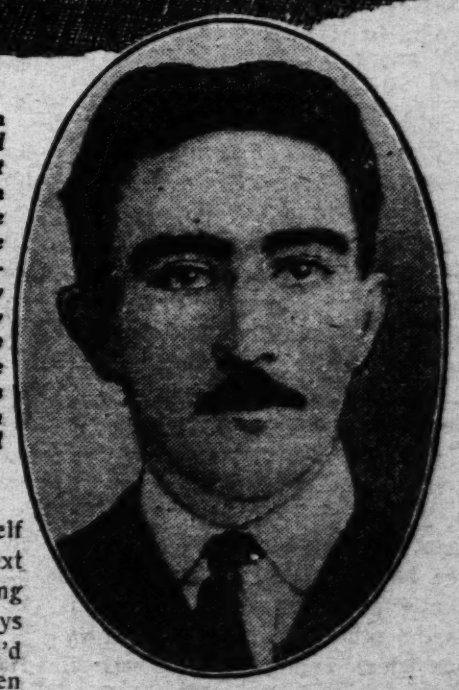

"I wasn't scared, but I couldn't have said a word if I had tried. My mouth felt dry as a hay mow and there seemed to be a lump in my throat getting bigger and bigger. But Phoebe wasn't long silent, no more than she ever was in the flesh.

" 'Herbie, dear,' I heard her say in that sort of trembly voice of hers, 'Herbie, my boy, don't you leave your home. Never mind what the lawyers say. I meant you to have the farm and it's yours as long as you live. You stay right along on the old place just as Phoebe tells you."

"That was all. With a nod of her head she disappeared a lot quicker than she came. The green light lasted for another minute or two, then went too and it was just dark."

Neighbors passing the farm house at night were attracted by the peculiar green radiance that streamed from the kitchen. When they peered in at the window they saw Lyman seated beside a table on which stood an unlighted lamp and, facing him from the other side of it, a shadowy figure which everybody who saw it instantly recognized as Phoebe Simons—the woman they had seen buried in the village cemetery months before. The lips of both were moving in earnest conversation and, by placing their ears to the window casing, the eavesdroppers were often able to hear Phoebe Simons urging Lyman to stay on the farm and pay no attention to the legal claims of her heirs

Herbert Lyman

THAT was the first one of many visits which Herbert Lyman swears the ghost of old Phoebe Simons paid him. On the subsequent ones he was able to talk with her—to tell her about the farm work, to a "Ghost's" Command

repeat bits of village gossip for her to smile over, to ask and get her advice about various matters.

Most of all, their conversations were about the efforts her heirs were making to dispossess Lyman. And she continually insisted, so he declares, that he defy the law and stay on the farm.

Lyman decided after that first visit to follow Phoebe's advice. Even when the heirs moved the furniture out of the house he refused to budge, but camped out as best he could in the dismantled rooms.

When the story of these spirit visits and conversations got noised about Lyman was the laughing stock of the community. A few of the more charitable thought his mind must have become unbalanced.

To the officers of the law who were trying to oust him from the farm he repeated what Phoebe Simon's ghost had said about her wanting him to have the property. But they said it was absurd to think that a command from the spirit world could defy the laws of Connecticut and they went right ahead with their plans for dispossessing Lyman.

When, in the hope of avoiding long and expensive litigation, they at last offered Lyman $500 if he would quit the farm, he said: "No, thanks. I'm going to stay right here. Phoebe says it wouldn't be right for me to leave."

In the meantime the neighbors who at first had refused to take the visits of the ghost seriously began to think differently about them. This was because a number of these matter-of-fact New England men and women claimed to have seen Phoebe's ghost just as Lyman had and to have heard her carrying on conversations with him.

Neighbors passing the farmhouse at night were attracted by the peculiar green radiance that streamed from the kitchen. When they peered in at the window they saw Lyman seated beside a table on which stood an unlighted lamp and, facing him from the other side of it, a shadowy figure which everybody who saw it instantly recognized as Phoebe Simons—the woman they had seen buried in the village cemetery months before.

THE lips of both were moving in earnest conversation and, by placing their ears to the window casing, the eavesdroppers were often able to hear Phoebe Simons urging Lyman to stay on the farm and pay no attention to the legal claims of her heirs.

"I dug fifty bushels of potatoes today, Phoebe," Lyman was heard to say on one occasion.

"That's a good day's work," the vision replied. "You must be tired. Wish I had been here to get supper for you. It's not right for a man to work in the fields all day and then have to cook his own meal."

Then the conversation turned to Harlan G. Hills, the administrator of Mrs. Simon's estate, who was doing his best to get Lyman off the farm. The ghostly figure wanted to know "what Harlan Hills was up to now."

"I told him you said for me not to leave the farm," said Lyman, "but he said you were dead and didn't count —that law was law and the heirs must have the place as long as you didn't leave a will."

"Pay no heed to what Harlan Hills or any one else says," the vision replied sharply. "You do as I say and stay right here."

After more conversation of this sort the ghostly figure seemed to grow tired. She yawned quite humanly and said, "Goodnight, Herbie."

As Lyman replied her figure faded from view. Soon the green radiance that filled the kitchen also disappeared. Lyman fumbled in the dark for matches and lit the old-fashioned kerosene lamp.

With evidence like this Hiram Day, Harry White, Joseph Smith and other reputable residents of East Hampton quickly turned public sentiment in Lyman's favor. The feeling grew that the ghost was appearing to him just as he said and that, law or no law, her wishes regarding the disposition of her farm should be respected.

But Harlan Hills remained unconvinced. He brought dispossess proceedings in a justice court.

Lyman's lawyer called numerous witnesses to testify that during her lifetime Mrs. Simons had often said she was going to leave the farm to Herbie.

But what seemed to make the strongest impression on the jury was Lyman's own testimony — the straightforward story he told of the repeated visits he had had from Mrs. Simons since her death and how she always commanded him to stay on the farm.

The jury was unable to agree. According to village gossip its members stood nine in favor of letting Lyman keep the farm and three in favor of giving it to the legal heirs.

So Lyman remained on the farm, the administrator of the estate sought new ways of ousting him and—Phoebe Simons kept right on advising Lyman "not to budge."

It was not always in the kitchen where Phoebe Simons spent so much of her life that she appears to Herbert Lyman. Sometimes he says he wakes from a sound sleep to see her standing by his bedside.

On several moonlight nights when he has been finishing up some work in the yard he has heard her calling his name and seen her coming across the greensward toward him.

Although Lyman never thought much about it until lately he now recalls that for years a remarkable sympathy had existed between him and Phoebe Simons. Their minds were so nicely attuned that either one of them instantly knew what the other was thinking about. In their everyday affairs they made practical use of what science calls telepathy.

"After I had worked for Phoebe for some years," says Lyman, "it got so that when I was some distance off she could concentrate on something she wanted and I would get it for her. When I was down in the village the thought would come to me that she needed a jug of molasses or a spool of thread, although she'd not said so. When I'd get home she'd say that was just what she wanted and she'd been wishing hard for me to bring it. Things like this happened so often that one Sunday we tried some experiments.

"I went to my room and she stayed downstairs. We wrote down what we wanted each other to do. She told me to raise the curtain and open the window and I promptly did. I wrote for her to open the Bible to the first chapter of John and when I went downstairs I found she had done so."

Each of the visits Herbert Lyman claims to have had from the dead woman filled him with new courage to obey her insistent command and stick to the farm. At last he grew bold enough to take the offensive in what he had become convinced was a fight for his plain rights.

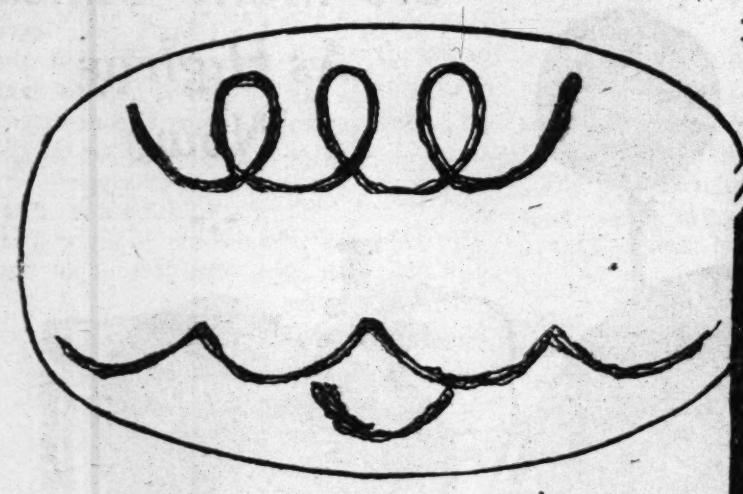

HE figured out that the cash value of the services he had rendered Phoebe Simons for twenty years was $9,000 and he brought suit against her estate to recover that amount in unpaid wages. Of course the suit was really for the possession of the farm, for that piece of property valued at about $5,000 is all the estate consists of.

The suit came up for trial a few days ago in the Superior Court at Middletown. At the outset the public was greatly disappointed by the judge's ruling against the admission of evidence bearing on the conversations with the supposed ghost.

But as it turned out Lyman did not need to quote what he says Phoebe has repeatedly said to him since her death. Before the trial had gone very far the contending parties reached an agreement by which Lyman retains possession of the farm on payment of $2,200 to the estate.

Herbert Lyman Is very confident this is a settlement which meets with the approval of Phoebe Simons. Ever since he filed the suit, Lyman says, Phoebe has seemed to feel sure that

The late Phoebe Simons

The lower of these figures, according to Sir Oliver Lodge, was drawn by a person sitting at a distance from the person who drew the upper one and concentrated his thoughts on it. This is an example of telepathy or thought - transference such as Lyman says existed between him and Mrs. Simons and which may help explain her alleged appearances since her death.

Another example of telepathic drawing, the lower one suggested by the one above to a person who had never seen it or heard it described.

Science Discovers a Wonderful

A Man-Made Atmosphere That May Enable Us to Tunnel Under the Ocean, Raise the Lusitania and Other Lost Treasure Ships and Build Skyscrapers Many Times As High as Now

-:-

In the steel cylinder are several live guinea pigs and they are being subjected, for experimental purposes, to the helium-oxygen mixture under the same high pressure which a diver far under water has to endure.

Supplied with the new air the diver in one of these modern suits can safely work for hours at depths where he can now remain only for a little while

SCIENCE has discovered a brand new kind of air. It is just as good for breathing purposes as the air to which we are accustomed, and for the lungs of divers and men who work in compressed air caissons in boring tunnels and laying the foundations for skyscrapers it is immeasurably better.

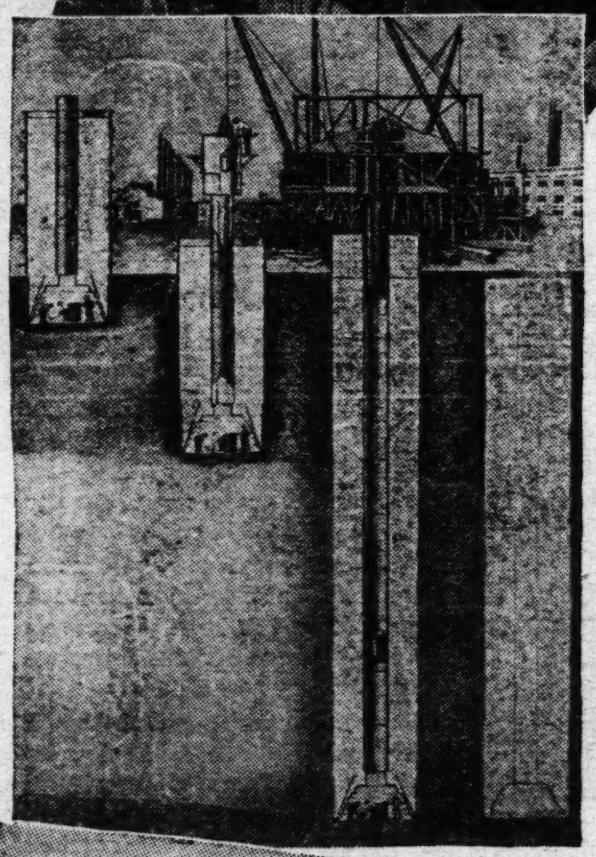

In fact, the discovery of the new air is the result of the effort of the United States Bureau of Mines to find some way to relieve the painful and dangerous conditions under which divers and caisson workers now have to labor.

After a long series of experiments it has been found that an atmosphere consisting of four parts of helium gas and a fifth part of oxygen is one which prevents or mitigates the dreaded caisson disease, popularly known as the "bends," and enables men to endure great air pressures with safety for much longer periods than at present.

It is thought that the new air may make it so easy for divers to work at great depths that the raising of the Lusitania and other lost treasure ships can be undertaken with every hope of success.

Certainly it will enormously reduce the cost and difficulty and risk to life and health of boring tunnels and sinking the foundations for huge buildings.

All sorts of new engineering marvels may follow the discovery of an atmosphere which enables men to subject their bodies to compressed air at very high pressures with little or no risk of contracting the bends.

The U. S. Navy Dirigible Z R-1 which flies with greatest safety when inflated with helium; and, above a diagram showing how a pneumatic caisson is sunk to bed-rock for the foundations of a skyscraper

With a mixture of helium gas and oxygen for divers and caisson workers to breathe the boring of tunnels under the ocean may become entirely practicable. There will be practically no limit to the depths to which the foundations of buildings may be carried and we may expect to see masses of steel and stone towering many times the height of the Woolworth building.

In experimental tests, several persons, shut up in a room filled with this "synthetic atmosphere," have breathed it for two hours or more without the slightest discomfort. In fact, if they had not known otherwise, they would have have failed to suspect that it was not ordinary air they were taking into their lungs.

Its only effect out of the ordinary is to raise the pitch of the voice. Nobody knows why this is so, but in this atmosphere a deep bass voice quickly becomes a tenor and a tenor is raised to a still higher pitch.

THE "bends," which attack men who work in compressed air, is due to the formation of bubbles of nitrogen gas in the tissues and blood. The bubbling is similar to that of a carbonated beverage when the bottle is opened, except that in the latter case the gas concerned is carbon dioxide.

A number of small bubbles may combine to make large ones, and the bigger they are the more dangerous. If they are formed in the spinal cord or the brain, paralysis or death is probable.

Ordinary air is four-fifths nitrogen and one-fifth oxygen. The nitrogen is of no use whatever except to dilute the oxygen, which in a pure state would be too strong for our lungs. It is a colorless, odorless, tasteless gas.

Helium is likewise colorless, odorless and tasteless. Mixed with one-fifth oxygen, it is found to be not less satisfactory for breathing purposes than ordinary air. But it has no tendency to form bubbles in the human tissues and blood. When the worker emerges from the caisson, or when the diver comes up from the depths, it is eliminated from the body five or six times as fast as nitrogen.

The body of a man working in

compressed air absorbs large quantities of the air. The absorption seems to cause no bother, but the trouble arrives when the diver comes to the surface, or when the tunnel worker leaves the caisson. When the pressure is removed, the tissues and blood give up the excess air, and if the decrease of pressure is not made very gradual, allowing time for the air to escape quietly into the blood and thence from the lungs, bubbles of nitrogen are liable to form.

When a diver goes down into deep water, in rubber suit and metal helmet, it is necessary to supply him with air at a pressure equal to that of the water in which he operates. He requires only five or ten minutes to descend to a depth of 200 feet, the air pressure being steadily increased; but to bring him back safely to the surface after a forty-five-minute stay at the bottom takes two hours' time.

That is why it is not profitable to do extensive diving work at a greater depth than 200 feet; it takes too much time. For the same reason caisson work above certain pressures is prohibitive, for hours may be required for the safe emergence of the toiler who, under such circumstances, must pass out through an air lock in which the air pressure is gradually diminished.

One of the hazards to which the diver is exposed is that of being compelled by some accidental cause to come quickly to the surface. A sudden storm may render it necessary for him to do so, or something may happen to entangle or disable his apparatus. If supplied with a helium-oxygen gas mixture for breathing, instead of air, he is in no danger of suffering serious consequences by coming to the surface quickly. No bubbles in blood or tissues will trouble him.

THE new air is expected to greatly facilitate the work of divers, and to enable them to operate in much deeper water. That is why the navy department is so keenly interested in the experiments and cooperating with the bureau of mines in carrying them on.

With the employment of a helium-oxygen mixture, it will still be necessary for the diver, or the caisson worker, to undergo the "decompression" process slowly, but it will require hardly more than a sixth of the time, because the synthetic gas is eliminated from the body so much more rapidly than ordinary air.

The experts say that the artificial atmosphere may be supplied to the caisson or to the diver while the work is being done, or, if preferred, when the worker quits and during the period required for "decompression." It is thought that the helium-oxygen mixture may be used in the treatment of men suffering from the "bends," helping to remove the nitrogen from the body and get rid of the bubbles.

At a depth of 200 feet a diver is subjected to a pressure by the water surrounding him of about 100 pounds per square inch. This seems enormous when it is considered that the body of an average man has 2,300 square inches of surface. But the man's body adjusts itself to the pressure by absorbing quantities of the air he breathes, and so he is enabled to work without much discomfort.

He may perhaps be troubled by a loud roaring in his ears. This is due to unequal air pressure outside and inside the ear drums. Small differences may cause pain, or may even rupture the drums. Experienced divers are not much bothered in that way, however, and are able with safety to descend in the water at a rate of thirty to forty feet a minute.

Tests of the synthetic atmosphere with human beings as "subjects" have been supplemented by experiments on white rats and guinea pigs. For the latter purpose use is made of a specially constructed pressure chamber—a steel cylinder provided with an arrangement of valves for the introduction of measured quantities of the helium-oxygen mixture. The apparatus is so contrived that the effect of the gas mixture on an animal contained in it is exactly the same as would be experienced by a man in a diving suit under the water.

The interior of the cylinder is illuminated by an electric lamp, and in one side of it is set a window of plate glass, very thick, to resist the pressure from within. Through the glass can be observed the actions of the animals shut up inside, as more and more of the gas mixture is forced into the chamber.

Below, "sand-hogs" working in an under-river caisson and constantly in danger of the "bends" with the air they now have to breathe

In view of the possibility that the window might be blown out by the pressure and do the observers harm, the animals are not watched directly through the glass. A mirror is used, which reflects the light that comes through the window, so that the rats or guinea pigs can be seen from one side of the apparatus.

One interesting conclusion drawn from the experiments on animals and human beings is that, if all the nitrogen in the earth's atmosphere were replaced by helium, it would make no difference whatever to us. The oxygen in the air is what we need for breathing, and the nitrogen we take into our lungs, being an inert gas, is of no account whatever except to dilute the powerful oxygen.

The helium-oxygen atmosphere is destined to find very important usefulness in the building of foundations for skyscraper buildings. A structure of that character must stand on bedrock and, in order to reach that safe bottom, it is often necessary to dig down to considerable depths.

In order to accomplish this, cylindrical caissons are put down. At the bottom of such a caisson the diggers work in a chamber whose connection with the surface of the ground is by a central tube. As they go deeper, the caisson surrounding the tube is filled with concrete stuff, which by its weight causes the caisson to descend.

At the top of the tube, above the ground level is an air lock in which the workmen, when they come out of the caisson, undergo "decompression," the air pressure inside the lock being gradually reduced until it is safe for them to come out.

The filling-in with concrete is continuously carried on while the cylinder and the tube are progressively lengthened with ring-shaped sections of steel from above. Thus we have, by the time bedrock has been reached, a solid concrete column of a diameter corresponding to that of the interior of the caisson resting upon an immovable base. Erected upon a score of more of such columns, the skyscraper has a perfectly secure foundation.

Such work usually involves great risk of the "bends." This malady manifests itself in excruciating pains in the muscles and joints. There may be bleeding at the nose, vomiting, nausea and vertigo. Abdominal pains double the sufferer up—whence the popular name of the complaint.

How Russia Is Making Ov

Lohengrin a Dashing American Red Cros
A Jazzy Modern Millionaire, Carme
munists Agitator—and Many Othe
Changes in the Famous Music

The hero of "Faust" as he appears in the new Russian version of the opera—a jazzy modern millionaire of the "bet-a-million, hang-the-expense" type

On the right, Lohengrin's rescue of Elsa as the Russians portray it in their made-over opera. Wagner's hero becomes an American Red Cross aviator and his celebrated heroine a very Up-to-date young woman.

MOT satisfied with uprooting Russia's ancient government and religion, and putting the country under an entirely new economic system, the soviet authorities are now turning their attention to making over the famous operas to suit their peculiar ideas of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Before the revolution Russia was one of the world's greatest operatic centers. The Soviet government intends that it shall be so again, but it insists that the music-loving Russians shall see and hear only operas which contain nothing in the slightest degree hostile to the doctrines of Lenine and Trotzky and which are filled from overture to final curtain with propaganda for those doctrines.

So in accordance with a recent edict of M. Ivanoff, the Commisar of Public Arts, most of the classic operas are being made over "to comply with the spirit of the time."

One of the first operas with which these artistic carpenters tinkered was Gounod's "Faust," beloved by generations of operagoers. But even Gounod himself would hardly recognize the new Faust in his Soviet setting!

Faust—his real name is Harry, Faust is only a nickname!—appears in the Russian version as an American of the "bet-a-million" type instead of the medieval Dr. Faustaus. While spending an evening with his friend "Mr." Mephistopheles, in his futuristic Berlin apartment, he tells of his love for Margaret Richards, an American motion picture actress—for this is the heroine that has replaced the Marguerite of the original opera.

Mephistopheles, who is a gambler from Monte Carlo, suggests that they "get her at any price," and he and Harry Faust leave a package of hundred dollar bills on the movie star's window sill. She is so tempted by the sight of the dollars that she breaks into the rapturous waltz we know as the "Jewel Song" and departs with Faust.

Perhaps the most startling change in the opera is in the famous spinning wheel scene in which Margaret mourns the loss of her lover. But instead of a spinning wheel she sits at the wheel of an automobile!

The heroine is greatly changed in appearance also. The flaxen braids which used to hang on either side of her shoulders are arranged now in a modern coiffure. Her character likewise is "jazzed up" to fit the spirit of time.

Even the scenery of the new "Faust" is calculated to shock the lover of the classic opera. Futuristic colors run riot everywhere. One of the most exaggerated settings is that in which Margaret first appears—an artificial garden in which flowers, animals, statues and shrubbery are all made of tinsel.

The new "Lohengrin" is not less startling than the new "Faust." In the Soviet version, it is no longer the legendary creation of Wagner, but a realistic revolutionary story of the Russian civil war. And the Soviet Lohengrin is not the son of Parsifal, the mythical priest-king of the holy brotherhood, but John Reed, the American socialist, who died in Moscow in 1918.

THE scene is laid in the old Russian free town of Pskoff, during the short-lived rule of the White Army under General Yudenitch. Elsa is the revolutionary daughter of the reactionary lord of Pskoff, and has been condemned to be shot because of being a sympathizer with the "reds."

When the modern Lohengrin (John Reed) comes to save her in the guise of an American Red Cross officer, he comes not in the swan boat of operatic tradition, but in an airplane.

The modern note is found everywhere throughout the opera. When Lohengrin kneels down to pray a radio package descends from heaven, instead of the dove as in the original Wagner story.

Many other changes, symbolic of Soviet political beliefs, have been made. The gallant officer gives Elsa a red flag in parting in place of the traditional ring, and tells her that he must return "to guard the cause of liberty!"

The costumes of the singers have been altered to fit the new story. Lohengrin is clad in khaki, while Elsa looks like a modern aesthetic dancer, with her bobbed hair and sandaled feet.

The scenery of the Russian "Lohengrin" is startlingly futuristic. Remarkable illusions, such as are found in motion comedies, are brought about by the use of all sorts of mechanical devices. One of the most amazing innovations is a smoke picture of Gottfried (Lenine) much like those used by American advertisers, flashed on the sky just as Lohengrin mounts his airplane and whirs away.

Lovers of the opera as Wagner conceived it and as it has been given for years will get their greatest shock when they hear some of the music that has been interpolated into the original score. As Lohengrin enters in his airplane the orchestra strikes up a few strains of "Yankee Doodle." As he departs the music changes from Wagner's majestic march to bars having for their motif "'Way Down Upon the Swanee River!"

"Carmen" is another famous opera which has undergone radical changes at the hands of the progressive Soviet musical authorities. The scene has been transplanted from Spain to a Russian boundary town of Poland.

Carmen, instead of the flirtatious little gypsy of Bizet's original opera, is a clever propagandist, devoted to the cause of communism. Her lover, Don Jose, the dragoon corporal of the original, is now Mr. Joseph, a police lieutenant, and Escamillo, the toreador, a professional Polish wrestler.

One of the weird stage settings for t revised "Lohengrin"

Carmen and Mr. Joseph meet first

...er the Operas

...s Aviator, Faust ... a Fiery Com- ...er Astounding ... Dramas

at an exhibit of Russian futuristic handicraft held in the public square.

She is so devoted to the cause of liberty that she is arrested for spreading propaganda among the working girls. While dying she sings the revolutionary hymn in a very impressive scene in which Escamillo is so touched by her heroism that he swears to be a communist from this time on.

THE opera has been so changed from the original that the question has been raised of why it has not been given a new name. But the Commisar of Public Arts explains that the name has been retained because it suits the new version much better than it did the old.

"The new 'Carmen' is written for the working people," he says, "whereas the old one was written for the bourgeois society."

Another very much "reformed" opera is Glinka's famous "A Life for the Czar." It has been thought best to change the name of this production to "A Life for the Country of Hammer and Scythe." The opera, which was written in 1836, occupied the same place among the Russians that Wagner's "Nibelungen Ring" has in Germany.

The original scenario, as written by Baron von Rosen, expressed the most devout loyalty to the czar, but such a spirit does not fit in at all with Soviet ideals, so it has been found necessary to remodel the whole opera, making loyalty to the principles of communism, rather than to an emperor, its theme.

The Russian Carmen, a Revolutionary Agitator

Geraldine Farrar portraying Carmen in the traditional way—a way which the Soviet authorities find not at all satisfactory and just will not tolerate

...e astonishingly

Mr. Ivanoff, the Soviet official under whose direction the operas are being made over.

In the original opera, Ivan Sousanin, a simple moujik or peasant, saves the life of the czar by misleading a band of Polish invaders in the forest. In the new version the same moujik saves the communistic regime by leading astray the invading foreign troops.

The last act realistically portrays the victorious entrance of the "Reds" into the Kremlin. A few well-known revolutionary songs are introduced throughout the score, giving much the same effect that the "Star Spangled Banner" would if introduced into grand opera in America.

These revolutionary changes have produced quite a stir in European operatic circles. Russia has always been regarded as a musical center of great importance, and every continental opera singer has been ambitious to sing in Moscow or Petrograd.

But what will the poor singers do now when they get the chance to appear in opera in these cities? The sweeping changes in the opera will require an entirely different interpretation of the historic roles.

What could the late Caruso himself have done with the role of Faust as the Soviet authorities insist it must be played?

Even greater difficulties will confront the divas who seek engagements with the Moscow or Petrograd opera companies. Elsa and Marguerite will have to acquire the smart mannerisms of American movie stars, while the Rhine maiden will have to deport themselves more like chorus girls than the fairylike creatures of Wagner's visions.

These difficulties, however, no doubt seem trifling to the Soviet musical authorities, who are very well pleased with what they call "improvements." They feel that operas as well as everything else, should move with the times and that such changes as they have made have been badly needed for many years.

"We have changed our government and our social system, why not change the opera also?" demands the Commisar of Public Arts, under whose direction the work of "revamping" the operas has been done.

"The old bourgeois operas were written for a rich society, which developed on the traditions of masters and slaves. It was an amusement for the leisure classes and had no other aims. We are trying to create an opera that has an educational motive besides furnishing amusement. Why should we go on with obsolete forms of the stage in the opera, when our drama is keeping up with the spirit of the time? The old opera is a boring spectacle, but our new opera is an interesting allegory of the modern age.

"Papini rewrote the life of Christ. Why should we not rewrite a silly 'Faust' or stupid 'Lohengrin' or a ridiculous 'Carmen?' "

So the work of making over the operas is being pressed as fast as the Commisar can find librettists and composers of sufficient ability and loyalty to the Soviet doctrines to undertake it.

A number of brilliant Russians whom he would like to secure for the work have refused to undertake it. They feel that it is too much like sacrilege to undertake to make over the immortal music dramas of Wagner, Gounod, Bezet and the other geniuses of operatic composition.

"I would rather die," one of these men is reported to have said, "than change a single word or note that came from the inspired pen of Wagner."

King of the Andes

A Thrilling Novel

IT was dark when at last he returned, carrying, as she thought, a great melon or something as big under the ample folds of his somber robe. Slyly he edged in through the door, slyly he closed it behind him, and slyly he put what he had under his robe on the table, a thick, black-necked bottle for himself and a dish of food for her. Slyly he seated himself carefully in a big chair and as slyly he patted his knee. Amazed, fascinated, but not afraid of him, she did his bidding. She sat on his knee and ate all the food that was on the plate. That he would now and then cause her fork to miscarry on its way to her lovely mouth by playfully chucking her under the chin she did not resent at all. She felt as much at home on that fat, capacious knee as if she had been sitting on the back of a stout pony, or a chair itself. And it pleased Father Pollito to be accepted in just that way—pleased him beyond all his dreams of a place in some far away heaven where good priests went when they died. And he would Father Pol-lee-to. God sees better to remind her what he was—her padre, no matter if she accused him of being anything worse.

But Charlotte did not; not openly, not in words. She endured and forgot, gave him smile for smile, and flirted her bright mantilla at him as the easiest way of keeping up her courage. She understood it all, his sly and expectant looks, his thumping and plumping of himself, the invisible holy water of his sweetish glances—and laughed. But in her mirthless laughter more than once indignant tears stood in her eyes, and through the tears he looked more and more like some fat, paunchy, purse-lipped ugly gargoyle. And back of all her thoughts was a yearning, a new and deeper yearning, for Lawrence Byron, upright, with his head above the clouds, with a spirit and heart that were clean. Nothing—nothing he had ever done that was little and common. Walls and furniture swam and rocked around her. Her throat was dry and choked.

She was startled out of a moment's lethargy by a plump kiss planted with a plumping sound like a special litany on one of her wet cheeks. But she allowed him to plump it there—did nothing.

"There, there, my pobrecita. My little buttercup. It is Father Pol-lee-to!"

"Yes," she said to herself. "It is Father Pol-lee-to, and he thinks he is a devil, and will do something in the name of a saint. But God sent you, Father Pol-lee-to. God sees better than you—and I will use you. You can't beat God!"

She fell across the bed and went to sleep. He may have slept on the same bed for all she knew, but that was all for Father Pol-lee-to!

There he lay too, sprawled like a great big bear, tangled in his own web of priestly garments, the empty bottle reposing on his great chest, and in Charlotte's bosom cuddled a revolver—not needed. The cheater cheated, as an old saying goes, all because of an omision of his own. He had not stopped drinking until, like Don Juan, he drank too much. Thereafter, he could not even remember what it was he had first had in his mind.

Nor was he ever to guess it, and he would not have believed it if it had been told him, but for several days after that he was only to be a great big busy ant working for a girl—working he knew not why or for what, and with only a faint taste of the honey he would never actually eat.

Charlotte, hours afterwards, lifted her arms in a yawn almost luxurious, and not looking at Father Pollito, said—"It's morning again—and only four days!"

CHAPTER 17.

BUT he was not through—not Father Pollito.. Not his method to rush—never had been. Not Father Pollito's! He was no cave man, certainly not—plump, thump, look you, my pretty buttercup, it is nobody but your Father Pollito! He never tells anything. He keeps everything a secret. Ask him. Ask any of the other buttercups. Never a word does Father Pollito say. He just plumps and thumps and keep his silence. He absolves you,too—yes, wipes all your sins away. He fixes up everything and makes it right—Father Pollito!

Don Juan, though. There was a bad man. El Lobo was another bad man. And so was Gregorio. But Pancho had been too much of a fool. Too much religion made any Indian a fool. Best for Indians, though—be fools, and bow and cross themselves to Father Pollito.

And there were yet many days ahead in which much could happen to please him, meditated Father Pollito, not disappointed but quite satisfied with his progress. There would be days when the pretty buttercup would be alone with him in the wilderness when they were on their way to San Esteban. Days and days perhaps. He never hurried. And—quien save? Lasses—young native women—always had looked upon him as different. It was all right if it was Father Pollito. He sanctified everything, sprinkling that holy water of his sly and expectant glances. He was a lucky man. Never had Father Pollito wanted for anything!

But Charlotte understood him. Nevertheless, his fascination for her became almost an obsession. Any young woman might have been curious, against her own will would she have been curious. He kept one not frightened, but on pins and needles as to what next he would do, plumping and thumping himself and performing strange incantations with his fat hands waving in the air. He would wheedle his way. He would get on the soft side of a credulous girl's nature. He was not, but the Don Juans and El Lobos of life were bad hombres. He always murmured a prayer over everything. Plump, thump. It is Father Pollito, my buttercup!

It was a welcome relaxation to keep her thoughts on Father Pollito, because in him she lost all her mortal fears and lived in a high pitch of excitement. She preferred it to being mortally afraid. And he was infinitely less terrible than the king of the Andes. If the old priest could keep her from Don Juan's clutch, she would almost be grateful, and forgive him his queer amorous perambulations. She would let him perambulate to his heart's content. The Bible said God worked in strange and devious ways His wonders to perform, and this seemed one of the devious ways. It looked like it would be nothing but a series of deviations—of a power that worked out through things and circumstances but through human beings, to in the end cheat the evil intentions of all.

She was so convinced this was the right solution of the matter, there was no need of adding any ideas or plans of her own. The half of another day gone, and all still well, the old Eve impulse to beautify herself revived. She sat to work tidying herself, manicuring her nails and powdering her face and rearranging her long beautiful golden hair. Her toilette was completed when Father Pollito edged in again through the door as was his habit, bringing her more food, this time an extra dish of strawberries in real cream, la-laing to himself and casting on her his sly and expectant glances. His round moon face was so iniquitously jovial she almost forgot to hate him, smiling faintly when he chucked her under the chin again with his new "la-la-l-a-a-h!"

"Where is—he?" she asked.

"La-la—but, por que, my buttercup? Don Juan is out again looking for the beautiful senorita with his stupid Gregorio, to kill her or bring her back for Father Pollito to marry them. He is a bad man, is Don Juan. But the wishes of God are known to me, and he shall not have Buttercup. It is better she give herself to Father Pollito." And he plumped himself hurriedly, looking slyer and more expectant than ever.

"If he does not find me, do you think he will send word to El Lobo to kill my father and aunt?"

"He will not kill anybody, my dove. Father Pollito has told him he should not kill. I have laid a prayer against him. He will not dare, for all his smartness. It is Father Pollito who has saved you—your father and aunt, too, my buttercup. It is I who am deserving—your padre."

HE slipped out once more in his pensive way, wiggling a fat and playful finger at her from the door and closing the door behind him softly. And he was drinking less. Not any more was he going to get drunk and forget everything. Not he. One could become so consumed with a desire one got drunk on it—too drunk. Not again Father Pollito!

But he did all in his power to get the king of the Andes drunker—and did.

"Drink, my poor friend," he said comiseratingly. "Drown your sorrows, Don Juan. Perhaps the girl is dead, and the wolves have eaten her. You must not let your soul suffer—drink."

"But, Father Pol-lee-to," answered Don Juan, his eyes bleary and red with liquor like a bull's, "names of Ten Saints, how quick like that could a woman vanish? Consider it. She flirted her mantilla in my face, out the door she went—and, poof! Not in the house. Not anywhere on my hacienda. Not anywhere that a cholo of mine has seen her. What make you of it, Father Pollito?"

That was when Father Pollito lit a candle and placed it in a socket for that purpose before an image of the Jesus Don Juan at no other time so much as looked at. Sober, he would not have looked now. But this unaccountable disappearance of the girl had revived all his old superstitions that a two-hemisphere education and an atheist's acceptance of life could not eradicate. He stood, trembling, before the image as if he expected it to speak or hurl from out itself bolts of destruction, his head rolling from side to side, half defiantly. He would not have been even that apprehensive Girasol, who had died on her knees—an omen no man, no matter how educated, could ignore. It would be the thing he would think of always when the least of his plans and schemes went wrong, or the mysterious and unexplainable presented themselves. A horse that stumbled, and—flash—he would think of Girasol again. His cattle could get a disease, and it would be Girasol again. There it was, bone of his bone, a part of his character from you—superstition.

He was anxious to know why Father Pollito lighted a candle, looking as he did, pensive, sly and expectant. By that pensive air of his, one would have thought Father Pollito knew everything—even of Girasol, and how she had died.

He did. But he knew more about Juan, the son. Few people there were who knew the real history of Juan, but Father Pollito was one of them. He knew all about Juan—more, than did most people. Juan was reactionary. Some day, if Juan lived long enough, he would change the country. He would be another and new kind of liberator. He would put the scourge to priests and pretenders like him. So it was not for Juan he burned the candle either. He hardly knew himself, if only to create an impression Don Juan.

"Why burn you the candle, Father Pollito?" demanded the king of the Andes savagely.

"That you may rest and be at peace, my friend. It is a strange occurrence, as you say, that a girl should so quickly disappear. It may be a sin for you to even seek her. She has been taken up in a cloud. So for you I burn the candle, that you may forget your ardor."

A cold dew showed itself on a grandee's face. He put his own construction on it.

"Girasol!" he shouted hoarsely. "Not God, but the Devil. Make no orisions for me, Father Pollito. It is the Devil that has played against me!"

A sly old priest let it go at that, his expression more benign when Don Juan no longer refused to drown his terrible fears in more whisky. When he got the drunken man to bed, lights out, he moved pensively back to his own room at the opposite side of the house, la-la-ing softly to himself. He edged in through the door as he always did with more tasty food for his buttercup, and a bottle not so large as the one he had taken to bed with him the night before. The sight of Charlotte lying on that same bed, as if she might have been his vestal bride indeed, with her long golden hair covering the pillow and dressed more like a boy than a girl, brought a look in his sly old eyes that was like a long expectation almost realized.

She was in a sleep—a deep sleep. He pulled her chair up close, and sat for a long while looking at her, bending nearer and nearer, stroking and fondling fairy strands of her beautiful hair, hoping she would not awake.

Very still, pensive and watchful he was, turning something over in his mind that he must turn and turn until he molded and shaped it into a means, a plan, a something that could not fail. The deep stillness of the South American night was no deeper than the stillness of that room. No sound, anywhere, except the low moan of the wind in the mimosa trees. The earth itself seemed asleep—a drugged sleep of the semi-tropics.

Father Pollito was thinking of drugs himself. A little bottle of drug lay that minute in the moist, thick palm of one of his hands. He dampened a handkerchief with a few drops of it and experimentally pressed the bit of cambric close to the sleeping girl's nose. She slept on for a few moments, then suddenly opened her eyes with a start, flushed and pink of cheek, sniffing.

She saw the withdrawn handkerchief, felt the sting and burn in her nose, and detected a peculiar odor in the room. She sneezed.

Father Pollito looked alarmed, stuffing the handkerchief in a skirt pocket of his robe, sniffing the air also.

"You sneeze and take cold, my little one," he murmured in anxiety. Or is it the dust of the mimosa flowers. I will close the shutters tight."

But she would not let him. That low open window was her only means of escape, and she was not going to have it shut off. And the smell was not like the smell of mimosa flowers. It was not the smell of any flower. She was suddenly and without reservation, suspicious. She was so suspicious she was afraid of even the food, watching him from under her lashes. What could he have been doing with that handkerchief so close to her face? Why did he sit there smiling at her as he did, rocking himself to and fro, gently? Her instincts were at work again, to such a degree of activity as sometimes mere instincts are capable, that she was appalled at the tumult of her own thoughts with nothing satisfactory to offer as an explanation of the new terror she felt.

HER feeling was explained when Father Pollito got up to bring her the glass of wine on the table, and she saw both the handkerchief and little bottle fall from the pocket of his robe to the puma skin rug on the floor. Sitting on the edge of the bed within reach of the handkerchief, she was able to stoop quickly and pick them up before the padre could turn around.

With them in her own pocket, there was nothing but sweet thankfulness in her smile when the priest offered her the wine. But she was not going to drink the wine. He could have spiked that as well.

It looked as if she would spend another night in the Roman Pool. But that would not be unless the expediency utterly demanded it. The pool was her haven of last resort. "Keep your nest egg, and do not even spend from your capital," she had heard her father say. "Not one move but two and put your worst move first." This then was going to be a sit-up fight, victory to the one who stayed awake the longest—and she had the bottle. Father Pollito could not afford to create a fuss or practice cave man tactics any more than she could afford to make a noise. He would not and she could not. That was why he had tried chloroform. She had begun to lose all fear of him, accepting him as a lovesick old bear, venturing no farther than she would allow. But now she could feel her hair turning gray again.

But Father Pollito had not intended giving her much of the stupefying drug. That much could be said in his favor. His tactics would have yet remained those of a gentle padre to whom a pretty chargling owned a certain obligation. But the American girl did not seem to compadre that way at all in fact, she was almost dull of understanding. And he had not so far missed the bottle from his pocket, and so was not in any way annoyed with himself or by the thought of what he might have done experimentally, as the devil always first tries the lowest and highest man by those degrees of slight demarkation from the straight and narrow path that lead gradually to an overt act, the full committment that is at once undeniable and hideous.

Not Father Pollito, either, so much as it was that "other" man in him born to the ways of the wilderness, and taking refuge behind a cloak of which he was in no wise worthy. For the wilderness is like the open sea. Where no regimen exists there is no law. He was stumped how to approach this girl who was altogether a new type to him, and did not understand the jungle codes. She remained impervious to sly smiles and soft innuendoes. He ought to have let her alone, which was really why he had burned a candle, not for Don Juan but for himself. But he could not let her alone.

HE was still turning the matter over and over in his mind between his soft la-las, his humming and his sly little covetous glances, vacillating between resolutions, when suddenly he became angry with himself and Charlotte, too. She had accepted his protection, would have been worse tressed at the hands of Don Juan—and she was thankless! The selfish little kitten, he said to himself. Curled there on his bed, and showing no conviviality whatever! Finer damsels than she had done more for him. He ought to put her out. Give her back to the King of the Andes. He would!

The girl almost read his thoughts. She knew, too, what he expected. What was she to do? She was not going to be turned out, and she feared Don Juan more than she feared this old honey-eating bear. Was there nothing she could say to make him ashamed? She would not leave the room unless he drove her out, or became too insistent. And he was not drinking as much as he had the night before, and patting his knee and oggling her in that sly way of his. She ought to have been used to it by now, but she was not. He was disgusting her more than ever. Would it never end! She could have willingly died. Juan! Juan! Would not somebody who was good come and get her? She once thought she hated an Indian boy because of his disdainful ways and indifference to her youth and beauty; but now she could have worshipped and thanked him for that show of cold disdain. Such disdain as his was a virtue. And how sweet and clean Youth was after all, proud, self-loving and independent even when it was adolescence and the blood warm and young. Youth did not pat its knee and throw out sly and expectant glances. It was only the Father Pollitos who did that. Even the King of the Andes would not have stooped to it, fiend though he was. She hated old men like Father Pollito.

But she was going to fight it out. Another night gotten through with, and it would be only THREE DAYS!

Father Pollito, patient and determined as an old Chesire cat, waited for her to fall asleep again. But she did not fall asleep. Instead, he fell asleep himself, breathing with a rattling sound through his open mouth. And as they say among the physicians, he "took" the light anesthetic easy. She propped herself on pillows in a sort of sitting posture and dozed also. Morning dawned with a twitter of birds in the mimosa trees.

It promised to be one of those unaccountably beautiful days that Charlotte always spoke of back home as "gorgeous"; a day when sky and earth are washed in an effulgent peace that, among human beings at least, did not exist. Nothing terrible had yet happened to her, and so far she had been miraculously—there was no other word for it—saved from a fate that could have been a thousand times worse; but nevertheless everything still looked unreal and was like a dream. She hardly believed her own senses, and did not see how she could have escaped even Father Pollito, much less Don Juan. It was "God," or something as all-seeing and all-knowing; and she dropped down to her knees for a minute and gave thanks in one of those wordless but sincerest of prayers a heart can offer.

Father Pollito awoke with a headache of his own, sniffing the air like an old horse sniffs danger, convinced he had by some error of administration inhaled his own poison. And the bottle was gone from his pocket! He plumped and thumped himself, looking accusingly at Charlotte. All his life he had been treated with the utmost respect and consideration by the simple people of his part of the world, and now he was getting peeved. Se had taken some diabolical advantage of him in his sleep. Her face did not tell him so, but his own nose did—marks of the cloven hoofs! He coughed and sneezed and began to glower like an abused old bear. Here he was old enough to be her grandfather, and she treating him like that! It was too much. He was going to avenge himself on her—the ungrateful little hussy!

However, he refrained from saying anything to her of what he thought, but hit upon what he considered a splendid plan of sure vengeance. He had fetched and carried for her like a good angel, but he would not do it any more. She could starve.

He waddled out not so much as playfully chucking her under the chin, and never came back. Gnawed by the pangs of an awful hunger, Charlotte began to blink under the strain. She devoured a bread crumb the size of a marble she found on the cleaned plate he had brought her heaped with food the night before, and looked about for more. She also wanted a drink of water. She peeped through a crack in the door that opened onto the patio and saw him sunning himself there in a chair. She beckoned and he looked at her, but he did not stir from his seat. Not so much as a shy and expectant glance, that old form of benignity of his, did he waste. She knew then what was the matter. He would not turn her over to Don Juan, but he would starve her into submission.

She walked the flood in a dudgeon, not daring to show her face outside because of her ungovernable fear of Don Juan. It was better to starve.

And it was useless to lose her temper. He had her. He did not have to bring her food, and she could not force him to bring it. If a girl ever tore her hair for an idea she did. She was about as near conquered as she ever had been in her life; indeed, it was about as much as the frailties of the flesh could endure. "Damn him!" she said; and she meant it. It was a righteous curse.

But, no, she was not conquered! She would get the food herself. The old woman in the kitchen to whom she had given a piece of jewelry would give it to her. She would go herself through the window and around the side of the house. She was about to step across the low window when she saw somebody standing in plain view under the mimosa trees to make her heart stand still. It was the King of the Andes. With eyes bloated and puffed, his black shiny hair bright as patent leather tousled and blowing in the breeze, his mouth cruel as a sabre, he was enough to strike fear in the breast of the bravest, fiendishly, beyond all words of description, drunk! He would have torn her to pieces. Nothing could have saved her from his fury.

She sank to the floor in a faint, bruising her forehead against the up-grinning teeth of the head of a puma skin rug, regained consciousness, and wiping the blood from her face crawled quickly under the bed. She lay there panting and shaking, saying in a tremulous whisper, "My God, my God—keep him away!"

But, no—he was coming. My God, he was coming in! He was in the window! Where was her hat? He would see her hat? Thank God, it was behind a door. He might not see her hat. "God, don't let him see my hat—me!"

Now he was in the room. She could see his feet, those booted, spurred, immaculate, horrible feet of his. He was stamping and staggering about, kicking furniture, swearing at every gusty breath.

"Pol-lee-to! Father Pol-lee-to! Where hide you your dirty carcass? Pol-lee-to!"

He knocked against something else, fell sprawling to his hands and knees, clawing the puma skin rug and hurling it in the air. Descending. the rug fell between them and the bed, one end of it sliding down to the floor and hiding her from his view as would a curtain. "Pol-lee-to!" he bawled like a maddened bull.

Father Pollito came to a fast waddle. Charlotte heard him enter with great puffs and grunts. Laboriously, too, she knew he was wondering what had become of her, and if Don Juan had seen her. She could tell it by the way he wabbled his feet, for it was a wabble excruciating in its apprehension and fear. He was leading his charge out, getting him to the door—the door closed.

Charlotte fainted a second time, from relief. When she regained consciousness she thought she was looking up in the calm and disdainful face of. Juan, the Indian boy; but it was only the grinning teeth of the puma's head. It took courage to come out from her hiding place; but at last she did, hunger forgotten. Father Pollito, absent but a few minutes, edged in through the door, smiling again in that sly, expectant way of his and saw her huddled in chair like a frozen, speechless little image.

"La-la, my buttercup—my pobrecita," he gurgled softly, chucking her under the chin. "Father Pollito brings you something to eat—and some wine. What a naughty girl you have been. And the awful bad man did not see my buttercup. Look, look, little one. It is your padre!"

He put the glass of wine to her lips, but she could not swallow. She could not talk. She was floored. The dumb tears rolled down her pale cheeks. She looked ten years older. And how awry hung her bright mantilla, now more like a funeral veil. At last she was able to say, "D-don't let him come again. I w-w-want Lawrence—my father. P-p-please tell Juan!"

"Where did you hide, little one?"

"Un-under the bed."

"Who—what Juan would you have me tell? Don Juan?"

She shook her head violently.

"No."

"What Juan?"

But she had changed her mind; some of her lost courage was returning. A flicker of defiance burned in the clear blue of her eyes. "Nobody." Who was there to tell anyway? It was only three days more—day after tomorrow! She must stand it—would. She was not whipped or floored at all. A semblance of color flowed back in her face. "Nobody!" She sipped some of the wine, smiling coquettishly. She ate only half of the food. The remainder she was going to save, and not be put on any more fasts. An empty stomach made one a coward. She understood now what strength her father must have gotten in a cigar—why he had not refused Don Juan's cigars. The spirit itself needed stimulant. Never did she want to start another day like this on an empty stomach. However, in her increasing feeling of desperation, she was tempted to jump out of the window, get Bolero if she could, and brave the wilderness alone. Or go down and hide in the forest of tall rocks where she had met Juan. After Juan came, everything of course would be all right. He knew the Pampas as few men knew the streets of New York. The fastnesses of the Andes were as familiar to him as was the theatrical district of Broadway to laugh if you want to! I'll tell you this much: I found out something about her by pure accident; and I decided I'd never tell anybody in the world—not even you. I'm not the kind of person to wreck anybody's life exactly; and I decided just to bury what I happened to find out. What's more, I'd have kept it all buried if she'd had sense enough to let me alone. I wouldn't even have told you that I know something about her."

Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's Husband

A Blue Ribbon Short Story

"It's something really serious?"

"'Serious?'" she said. "No, it's not 'serious.' It's ruinous."

MR. DODGE released a sound from his mouth. "Whee-ew!" Whistled, not spoken, it was his characteristic token that he found himself impressed. "You've certainly followed the right course, Lydia. Mrs Leslie Braithwaite's standing isn't just a high one; it's lofty. I shouldn't care to be the person who blasts that statue off its pedestal—sometimes statues crush the blasters when they fall. I'm glad you kept your information to yourself." He paused, and then, being morally but an ordinary man, he added, "Not—not that I see any particular harm in your confiding in my own discretion in such a matter."

"Didn't I explain I'm not confiding in your discretion?" Mrs. Dodge returned. "Lately, I don't believe you have any. I've told you this much so that next time you won't be so hasty in sending checks to women who are merely using you to annoy your wife."

He sighed. "There's where you puzzle me, Lydia. If you found out something ruinous about Mrs. Braithwaite, as you say, and if she knows you did—you intimated she knows it, I think?"

"Absolutely."

"Then I should think you'd be the last person in the world she'd want to annoy. I should think she'd do everything on earth to please you and placate you. She'd want to keep you from telling. That's the weak point in your theory, Lydia."

"It isn't a theory. I'm speaking of facts."

"But if she knows youre aware of what might ruin her," he insisted, "she would naturally be afraid of you. Then why would she do a thing that might infuriate you?"

"Because she's a woman," said Mrs. Dodge. "And that's something you'll never understand!"

"But even a woman would behave with some remnants of caution, under the circumstances, wouldn't she?"

"Some women might. Mrs. Braithwaite doesn't because she's so sure of her lofty position she thinks she can deliberately insult me and I won't dare to do anything about it. She wanted to show me that she isn't afraid of me."

Mr. Dodge looked thoughtfully at that point upon his long cigar where a slended ring of red glow intervened between the adhering gray ash and the brown tobacco. "Well, at least she shows a fiery heart," he said. "In a way, you'd have to consider her action quite the sporting thing. You mean she's sent you a kind of declaration of war, don't you?"

"If you want to look at it that way. I don't myself. I take it just as she meant it, and that's as a deliberate insult."

"But it isn't an 'insult' if she only meant it to show she isn't afraid of you, Lydia."

"It is, though," Mrs. Dodge insisted. "What she means is derision of me. It's the same as if she said: 'Here's a slap in the face for you. I have the satisfaction of humiliating you as your punishment for knowing what you do know about me, and you can't retaliate, because you aren't important enough to be able to injure me!' It's just the same as if she'd said those words to me."

"It seems quite a message," he observed. "Of course, I can't grasp it myself because I haven't any conception of this ruinous proceedings of hers. You were the only witness, I assume?"

"There was a third person present," Mrs. Dodge said stiffly. "But not as a witness."

"Then what was a third person present doing?"

MRS. DODGE looked at him with severity, as if she reproved him for tempting her to do something wrong; then she took from a basket in her lap a square piece of partly embroidered linen and gave it her attention, not relaxing this preoccupation when her husband began to repeat his question.

"What was the third person—"

"I heard you," Mrs. Dodge interrupted, frowning at her embroidery. "If I told you that much, I'd be virtually telling the whole thing; and I've decided not to do that, even under her deliberate provocation. If I let myself be provoked into telling, I'd be as small as she is, so you needn't hope to get another word out of me on the subject. The only answer I'll make to your question is that the third person present was not her husband!"

"Oh!" Mr. Dodge said loudly, and in his sudden enlightenment, whistled "Whee-ew!" again. "So that's it!"

"Not at all," she said. "You needn't jump at conclusions, and you'll never know anything more about it from me. The only way you could ever know about it would be through her husband's making a fuss and its getting into the papers or something."

"I see," Mr. Dodge said, apparently not much discouraged. "And since it's something he hasn't yet made any fuss about, it's evidently because he doesn't know."

"He!" Mrs. Dodge cried, and, in her scorn of Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's consort, dropped the embroidery into its basket and stared fiercely at Mr. Dodge; yet it was really at an invisible Mr. Braithwaite that she directed this glare of hers. Apparently the unfortunate gentleman was one of those mere husbands whose existence seems to amuse or to incense the wives of more dominant men: Mrs. Dodge certainly appeared to be incensed. "That miserable little pale shadow of a man!" she cried. "His name's Leslie Braithwaite, but do you ever hear him spoken of except as 'Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's husband?' He goes down to his little brass rod works at eight o'clock every morning and gets money for her until six in the evening. Then he comes home and works on the account books of her uplifts until bedtime. If they go out, he stands around with her wrap over his arm and doesn't speak unless you ask him a question. If you do, he begins his answer by saying, 'My wife informs me!' How could that poor little creature know anything about anything?"

"But you know," Mr. Dodge persisted. "You do know, do you, Lydia?"

"I know what I know," she replied, and resumed her preoccupation with the embroidery.

"But you couldn't substantiate it by another witness, I take it," he said musingly. "That is, she feels safe against you because if you should ever decide to tell she would deny it and put you in the position of an accuser without proofs. It would simply be your word against hers, and she'd have the sympathy that goes to the party attacked and also the advantage of her wide reputation for lofty character and—"

"Go on," his wife interrupted. "Amuse yourself all you like; you'll not find out another thing from me! Perhaps, if you should ever spend the morning at home digging around in our flower border along the hedge between her yard and ours, you might happen to hear her talking to her chauffeur; and in that case you might get to know something more. Otherwise, I don't see how you ever will."

"Lydia!"

"What?"

"I'm not going to dig in any flower border! I'm not going to spy around any hedge just to—"

"Neither did I!" she cried indignantly. "Did you ever know me to do any spying?"

"Certainly not. But you said—"

"I said 'if you happen to.' You don't suppose I hid and listened deliberately? I was down on my hands and knees planting tulip bulbs, and the thick hedge between us. That's how it happened, and—why, she never dreamed anybody was near her. I didn't even hear her come in that part of the yard until I heard her speaking right by me, on the other side of the hedge. Please don't be quite so quick to think your wife would be willing to spy on another woman."

"I didn't," Mr. Dodge protested hastily. "What did she say to the chauffeur?"

"That," his wife replied severely, "is something you'll never hear from me!"

"From whom shall I hear it, then?"

"I've just told you you might hear it," she said, plying her needle and seeming to give it all her attention.

"But I can't spend my time in the tulip bed, Lydia."

"That's not what I meant. I said, 'If her husband ever makes such a fuss that it gets into the papers.'"

"If he does, I might find out what she said to the chauffeur?"

"Oh, maybe," Mrs. Dodge said; and she gave him a sidelong glance of some sharpness, then quickly seemed to be busy again with her work.

"I don't make it out at all," the puzzled gentleman complained. "Apparently you overheard Mrs. Braithwaite saying something to her chauffeur that would be ruinous to her if it were known—something that might cause her husband to make a public uproar if he had heard it himself. Is that it?"

Mrs. Dodge began to hum fragmentarily to herself and seemed concerned with nothing in the world except the selection of a proper spool of thread from her basket.

"Is it that, Lydia?"

"You'll never find out from me," she said, searching anxiously through the basket. "Anyhow, I shouldn't think you'd need to ask such simple questions."

"So that is it! What you heard her say to her chauffeur would ruin her if people knew about it. Was she talking to the chauffeur about her husband?"

"Good gracious!" Mrs. Dodge cried derisively. "What would she be talking to anybody about that poor little thing for? She never does. I don't believe anybody ever heard her mention him in her life!"

"Then, was she talking to the chauffeur about some other man?"

"Of all the ideas! If a woman were in love with a man not her husband, do you think she'd tell her servants about it? Besides, they've only had this chauffeur about two weeks. Have you noticed him?"

"Yes," said Mr. Dodge. "I've seen him sitting in their car in front of the house several times, and I was quite struck with him. He seemed to be not only one of the handsomest young men I ever saw but to have rather the look of a gentleman."

"So?" Mrs. Dodge said inquiringly; and her tone was the more significant because of her appearing to be wholly preoccupied with her work basket. "You noticed that, did you?"

"You don't mean to say—"

"I don't mean to say anything at all," she interrupted crisply. "I've told you often enough for you to begin to understand it."

"All right; I do. Well, when she'd said whatever she did say to the chauffeur, what happened?"

"Oh, that," she returned, "I'm perfectly willing to tell you. I got up and looked at her over the hedge. I wasn't going to stay there and listen—and I certainly wasn't going to crawl away on my hands and knees! I just looked at her quietly and turned away and came into the house."

"What did she do?"

"She was absolutely disconcerted. Her face just seemed to go all to pieces; it didn't look like her face at all. She was frightened to death, and I never saw anything plainer. That's one reason she hates me so—because I saw her looking so afraid of me and she couldn't help it. Of course, as soon as I got into the house I looked out through the lace curtains at a window—you could hardly expect me not to—and I saw her just going back into her own house by the side door. She'd braced up and looked all stained glass Joan of Arc again by that time."

MR. DODGE sat wiggling his head and muttering in wonder. "Of all the curious things!" he said. "Human nature is so everlastingly full of oddities it's always turning up new ones that you sit and stare at and can't believe are real. There they are, right before your eyes, and yet they're incredible. What did she say to the chauffeur?"

"No, no," Mrs. Dodge said reprovingly. "That's what I can't tell you." And she added, "I should think you could guess it, anyhow."

"Was there—" He paused a moment, pondering. "Did she use any specially marked terms of endearment in addressing him?"

"No," Mrs. Dodge replied, returning attention to her work, "not terms."

"Oh!" he said. "Just one term, then? She used a single term of endearment in addressing him. Is that correct?"

Again Mrs. Dodge became musical: she hummed a cheerful tune, but her face was overcast with a dour solemnity.

"So she did!" her husband exclaimed. "Did she call him 'dear?'"

"No, she didn't."

"'Dearest?'"

"No, she didn't."

"Not," he said incredulously, "not—'darling?'"

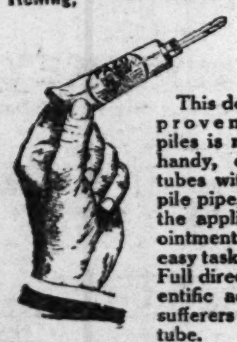

Mrs. Dodge instantly resumed her humming.

"By George!" her husband cried, "Why that's just awful! What else did she say him besides calling him 'darling?'"

"I didn't say she said anything else," Mrs. Dodge returned primly. "The rest wasn't so important, anyhow, and she was speaking in a low voice. I thought the rest of it was, 'Rosemary, that's for remembrance.'

I couldn't be sure because I didn't hear it distinctly."

"But you did distinctly hear her call him 'darling?'"

"What I heard distinctly," Mrs. Dodge replied, "I heard distinctly."

"So what Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite said to the chauffeur was this: 'Rosemary, that's for remembrance, darling?'"

"You must draw your own conclusions," she advised him severely.

"I do—rather!" he returned, and in a marveling tone slowly pronounced their neighbor's name, "Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite! Of all the women in the world, Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite! And when you rose up, and she saw you, she just went all to pieces and didn't say a word?"

"I told you."

"What did the handsome chauffeur do?"

"Just stood there."

"It's beyond anything!" Mr. Dodge's amazement was not abated; he shook his head and uttered groaning sounds of pessimistic wonderment. "I suppose the true meaning of the saying, 'It's the unexpected that happens,' is that life is always teaching us to accept the incredible. How long ago was it?"

"A week ago yesterday."

"Have you seen her since?"

"I never talk to her, or she to me. We say, 'How do you do? What lovely weather,' and that's all we ever do say. We haven't even any neighborly contact through congenial servants, because of our having colored people; hers are white. I haven't caught a glimpse of her since it happened until this afternoon, when she came to Jane Cromwell's tea. Of course, she knew I was looking at her, and she knew perfectly what I was thinking—particularly about her insult to me in making such a goose of my husband."

"But, Lydia—"

"She was having the time of her life over that!"

"Well," he said reflectively, "leaving out the question of whether or not I was a goose especially, and considering her without personal bias, I must say that under the circumstances she's shown a mighty picturesque intricacy of character, as wel as a pretty dashing kind of hardihood. If, as you believe, she sent her note to me as really a derisive taunt—a gauntlet flung at you with mocking laughter—and all the while she knows you know of her philandering with a good looking varlet—"

"She's a bad woman!" Mrs. Dodge exclaimed angrily. "That's all there is to it, and you needn't be so poetical about her!"

"Good gracious, Lydia. I wasn't—"

"NEVER MIND! We can talk of her just as well without any references to gauntlets and mocking laughter and varlets. That is, if you insist upon talking about her at all. For my part, I prefer to keep her entirely out of my mind."

"Very well," he assented meekly. "I don't know that I can keep anything so singular out of my mind, but I won't speak of it if it annoys you. What else shall we talk of?"

"Anything in the world except that detestable woman," Mrs. Dodge replied. Then, after some moments of silence over her embroidery, she added abruptly, "Of course, you don't think she's detestable!"

"I only said—"

"'Picturesque' was what you said. 'Dashing' was another thing you said. You're quite fascinated with her derisive gauntlets and her mocking laughter! Dear me, if that isn't like men!"

"But I only—"

"Oh, murder!" Mrs. Dodge moaned, interrupting him. "I thought you said you weren't going to talk about her any more!"

At this he showed spirit enough to laugh. "You know well enough we're both going to keep on talking about her, Lydia. What do you intend to do?"

"About what?" Mrs. Dodge looked surprised. "About her, you mean? Why, naturally, I intend to keep on doing what I have been doing, and that's nothing whatever except to hold my peace. I don't descend to the level of feuds with intriguing women. She gave me a clew, though, this afternoon."

"What sort of a clew, Lydia?"

"I don't suppose a man could understand, but I'll try to give you a glimmering. When she wrote that note to you, there was one thing she hadn't thought of. She thought of it this afternoon at that tea: it struck her all of a sudden that I could make things a little unpleasant for her if I took the notion to. She just happened to remember that Jane Cromwell is my most intimate friend, and that Jane is the grandest old rock bottom mountain this community can boast. Jane was born here, and the Leslie Braithwaites only arrived and began working up the pedestal about ten years ago. That woman all at once remembered I might tell Jane."

"How do you know she did?"

"That's what a man couldn't see. I knew it by a lot of little things I couldn't put into words if I tried, but principally I knew it by watching her manner with Jane."

"You mean she tried to ingratiate herself?" he asked. "Her manner was more winsome or flattering than usual?"

"No, not exactly. No so open—you couldn't understand—but it was perfectly clear to me she was having the time of her life thinking of what she'd done to me through my husband's weakness, when all at once she thought of my influence with Jane. Well, she's afraid of it, and it made her wish she hadn't gone quite so far with me. She'd give a whole lot tonight, I'll wager, if she'd been just a little less picturesque with her gauntlet throwing and her mocking laughter! You asked me what I was going to do and I told you 'Nothing.' I hardly think now I'll even do what she's afraid I will and tell Jane. But she'll do something. She's afraid, and she'll make a move of some sort. You'll see."

"But what? What could she do?"

"I don't know, but you'll see. You'll see before long, too."

"Well, I'm inclined to hope so," he said. "It would certainly be interesting, but I doubt her making any move at all. I'm afraid you won't turn out to be a good prophet."

On the contrary, he himself was a poor prophet; and sometimes destiny seems to juggle miraculously with coincidences in order to attract attention to the undiscovered laws that produce them. In fact, Mr. Dodge was so poor a prophet—and so near to intentional burlesque are the manners of destiny in its coincidence juggling—that at this moment Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's husband had just rung the Dodges' front door bell. Two minutes later a mulatto housemail appeared in the doorway of the library and produced a sensational effect merely by saying, "Mrs. Braithwaite and Mr. Braithwaite is calling. I showed 'em into the drawing room."

She withdrew, and the staggered couple, after an interval of incoherent whispering, went forth to welcome their guests.

MRS. Braithwaite was superb—at least, that was Mr. Dodge's impersonal conception of her; never before had he seen sainthood so suavely combined with a piquant beauty, nor an evening gown of dull red silk and black lace so exquisitely invested with an angelic presence. For tonight this lady looked not only noble, she looked charming; and either his wife had made a grotesque mistake or he stood before a sublime actress, unmatched in his experience. She began talking at once, in her serene and sweet contralto voice—a beautiful voice, delicately hushed and almost imperceptibly precise in its pronunciation. "It seemed to us really rather absurd, Mrs. Dodge, that you and your husband shuld be our next door neighbor for so long without even having set foot in our house or we in yours. And as Mr. Dodge has lately been so generous to my poor little Workers' Welfare league—the unhappy creatures do need help so, and the ladies of the committee were touched by your kindneess, Mr. Dodge—we thought we'd just make that an excuse to call, even thus informally and for only a few minutes. We wanted to express the thanks of the league, of course, and we thought it was about time to say we aren't really so unneighborly as we may have seemed—and we hope you aren't, either!"

"No, indeed," Mr. Dodge responded with a hasty glance of sidelong uneasiness at his wife. Her large face was red and rather dismayingly fierce as she sat stiffly in the stiffest chair in the Dodges' white walled, cold and rigidly symmetrical drawing room; but she said, "No, indeed," too, though not so heartily as her husband did. In fact, she said it grimly; yet he was relieved, for her expression made him fear that she would say nothing at all.

"One of the things I find to regret about modern existence," Mrs. Braithwaite continued in her beautiful voice, "is the disappearance of neighborliness, even in a quiet suburban life like yours and ours. Of course, this is anything but a new thought, yet how concretely our two houses have illustrated it! So it did seem time, at last, to break the ice, especially as I have good reason to think that just these last few days you must have been thinking of me as quite a naugthy person, Mrs. Dodge."

Mrs. Dodge stared at her; appeared to stare not only with astounded eyes but with a slowly opening mouth. "What? What did you say?" she asked huskily.

"I'm afraid you've been thinking of me as rather naughy,' the serene caller said, and her ever promised smile seemed a little more emphatically promised than it had been. "I ought to confess to you that as a collector for my poor little Workers' league I'm terribly unscrupulous. It's such a struggling little organization, and the need of help is so frightfully pressing, I may as well admit I haven't any scruples at all how I get money for it. Yet, of course, I know I ought to apologize for asking Mr. Dodge to contribute to a cause that you didn't feel particularly interested in yourself."

"O!" Mrs. Dodge said, and to her husband's consternation she added formidably: "Is that what you're talking about?"

No disastrous effect was visible, however, Mrs. Braithwaite nodded sunnily, "I'm sure you'll forgive me for the sake of the happiness the money brought to a pitiful little family—the father hasn't had any work for eight months; there are four young children and one just born. If you could see their joy when—"

"I dare say!" Mrs. Dodge interrupted. "I'm glad it did some good!"

"I was sure you'd feel so." Mrs. Braithwaite glanced gently at her host whose face was a remarkable study of geniality in conflict with apprehension; then her gaze returned to her hostess. "I wanted to make my peace not only for myself," she added, "but for your husband. I'm sure you're going to forgive him, Mrs. Dodge."

Innocently, Mr. Dodge supposed this to be intended as a kindly effort on his behalf and in the general interests of amiabilty. He was surprised, therefore, and his apprehensions of an outbreak on the part of his wife were little abated, when he perceived that its effect upon her was far from placative. Her ample figure seemed to swell; she was red but grew redder; her action in breathing became not only visible but noticeable; to his appalled vision she seemed about to snort forth sparks. For several perilous moments she did not speak; then, after compressing her lips tightly, she said: "Mr. Dodge sent you his check upon my direction, of course. Naturally he consulted me. I told him that since you had twice solicited me for a subscription it would be best for us to send you some money and be done with it."

Mrs. Braithwaite uttered a soothing sound as of amused relief. "That's so much nicer," she said. "I was afraid you might have been annoyed with both of us—with both poor Mr. Dodge and myself—but that exculpates us. I'm so very glad." She turned to the perturbed host. "I was so afraid I'd involved you, Mr. Dodge—perhaps quite beyond forgiveness."

"Not at all—not at all," he said, removing his gaze with difficulty from his wife's face. "O, no. Everything—everything's been perfectly pleasant,' he floundered, and Mrs. Dodge's expression did not reassure him that he was saying the right thing. "Perfectly—ah—pleasant," he repeated feebly.

"I so hoped it would be," Mrs. Braithwaite said. "I hoped Mrs. Dodge wouldn't be very hard on you for aiding in such a good cause."

"No," he returned nervously. "No, she—she wasn't. She proved to be entirely—ah— amiable, of course." And again he was dismayed by Mrs. Dodge's expression.

"Of course,' Mrs. Braithwaite agreed sunnily, with only the quickest and sweetest little fling of a glance at her heavily breathing hostess, "I was sure she'd forgive you. Well at any rate we've both made our peace with her now and established the entente cordiale, I hope." She turned toward her husband and spoke his name gently, in the tone that is none the less a command to the obedient follower: "Leslie." It was apparently her permission for him to prepare himself for departure; but it may also have been a signal or command for him to do something else—Mr. Dodge noticed that it brought an oddly plaintive look into the eyes of the of-the small and dark Braithwaite.

THROUGHOUT the brief but rather strained interview he had been sitting in one of the Dodges' rigid chairs as quietly as if he had been a well behaved son of Mrs. Braithwaite's brought along to make a call upon grown people. He was slender as well as short; of a delicate, almost fragile, appearance; and in company habitually so silent, so self-obliterative that it might well have been matter of doubt whether he was profoundly secretive or of an overwhelming timidity. But as he sat in the Dodges' slim black chair, himself rather like that chair, with his trim, thin little black legs primly uncrossed and his small black back straight and stiff, there were suggestions that he was more secretive than timid. Under his eyes were semicircles of darkness, as if part of what he secreted might have been a recent anguish, either physical or mental. Moreover, if he had been in reality the well trained little boy of his manners during this short evening call had suggested, those semicircles under his eyes would have told of anguish so acute that the little boy had wept.

When his wife said "Leslie," he swallowed; there came into his eyes the odd and plaintive look his host had noticed—it was the look now not of a good little boy but of a good little dog, obedient in a painful task set by the adored master—and he stood up immediately.

"We really must be running," his wife said, rising too. "This was just our funny little effort to break the ice. I do hope it has, and that you'll both come." She put an almost perceptible stress on the word "both" as she moved toward the door; then said "Leslie" again. He was still standing beside his chair.

"Ah—" he said; then paused and coughed. "I—I wonder—"

"Yes," his host said encouragingly.

"I—that is, I was going to say, by the way, I wonder if you happen to know of a good chauffeur, Mr. Dodge."

At this Mrs. Dodge's breathing became audible as well as visible, there fell a moment of such silence.

"A—a chaufeur? No," Mr. Dodge said. "No, I don't think I do. We haven't one ourselves; we do our own driving. A chauffeur? No. I'm afraid I don't know of any."

"I see," Braithwaite returned. "I just happened to ask. We've—ah—lost the man we've had lately. He was a very good driver and we haven't anybody to take his place."

MRS. DODGE spoke sepulchrally as she rose from her chair. "That's too bad," she said, and, to her husband's relief, stopped there, adding nothing.

"Yes," Braithwaite assented. "He was a very good driver indeed; but he was a college graduate and only yesterday he found another position tutoring and left us. He was a very good man—Dolling."

"What?" Mr. Dodge said. "Who?"

"Dolling," Braithwaite replied; followed his wife to the door. "I just happened to mention his name: Dolling. I—I didn't address you as 'darling,' Mr. Dodge, though I see how you might easily have thought I did. The man's name was Dolling. I shouldn't like you to think I'd take the liberty of calling you—"

But here he was interrupted by such an uproarious shout of laughter from his host that his final words were lost. Mr. Dodge's laughter continued, though it was interspersed with hearty expressions of hospitality and parting cheer, until the callers had passed the outer threshold and the door closed behind them. Then the hilarious gentleman returned from the hall to face a wife who found nothing in the world, just then, a laughing matter.

"The worst thing you did," she assured him, "was to be so fascinated that you told her I'd been amiable to you about sending that check—just after I said I knew all about it before you sent it and had told you to send it! That was a pleasant position to put your wife in, wasn't it?"

"Lydia!" he shouted, still outrageous in his mirth. "Let's forget that part of it and remember only Dolling!"

"All right," she said, and her angry eyes flashed. "Suppose his name was Dolling. What was she talking to him about rosemary and remembrance for?"

"I don't know, and it doesn't seem important. The only thing I can get my mind on is your keeping to yourself so solemnly the scandalous romance of Dolling!" And becoming more respectably sober for a time, he asked her: "Don't you really see a little fun in it, Lydia?"

"What!" she cried. "Do you? After you saw that wretched little man of hers stand up there and recite his lesson like a trained monkey? Did you look at her while he was performing? She stood in the doorway and held the whip lash over him till he finished! And if this idol of yours is so innocent and pure, why did she go all to pieces the way she did when she saw me that morning by the hedge?"

"Why, don't you see?" he cried. "Of course she saw you thought she'd called the man 'darling!' She knew you didn't know his name was Dolling. Isn't it plain to you yet?"

"No!" his wife said vehemently. "It isn't plain to me and it never will be;"

In this prediction she was strangely correct, and the strangeness lay in the fact that a partial solution of what she persisted in believing to be a sinister puzzle was after a time revealed to her husband, who held all along that no puzzle whatever existed. To his way of thinking, the episode was an absurd trifle of no more than a humorous significance, and he had for months dismissed it from his thoughts, as well as (with wisdom) from his domestic conversation, when by chance his singular illumination occurred.

AT a restaurant in the skyscraper canyons downtown, he was lunching with a younger member of his firm; their table was not far from the cashier's desk; and Mr. Dodge's attention, wandering, happened to become concentrated upon a debonair young man who had finished his lunch and was now engaged in affable discussion with the pretty cashier. He was one of those young men, sometimes encountered, who have not only a strong masculine beauty, but the look of talent, with both the beauty and the talent belittled by in irresponsible twinkle of the eye. Standing below the level of the cashier's desk, which was upon a platform, there was something about him that suggested a laughing Romeo; and, in respone, the cashier was evidently not unwilling to play a flippant Juliet. She tossed her head at him, tapped his cheek with a pencil, chattering eagerly; she blushed, laughed, and at last looked yearningly after him as he went away. Mr. Dodge also looked; for the young man was Dolling, once Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's chauffeur.

"Fine little bit of comedy, that," the junior member of "Dodge and company" remarked, across their small table. "Talked her into giving him credit for his lunch. She'll have to make it up out of her own pocket until he pays her. Of course, he's done it before, and she knows him. Characteristic of that fellow; he's a great hand to put it over with the girls!"

"Know him? Lord, yes! He was in my class at college till he got fired in sophomore year. Every now and then he comes to me and I have to stake him. He's a reporter just now, but it's always the same, whether he's working or not, he never has any money. He can do anything: act, sing, break horses, drive an airplane, any kind of newspaper work—publishes poetry in the papers sometimes, and he's not such a bad poet, either, at that—but he's just one of these natural born drifters. Too good looking and too restless. He never holds a job more than a couple of months."

"I suppose not," Mr. Dodge said absently. "I suppose he's tried a good many."

"Rather!" Williams exclaimed. "I've got him I don't know how many, myself. The last time he was pretty well down and out, and the best I could get for him was a chauffeur's job for a little cuss I happened to know in the brass trade—Braithwaite. Lives out your way somewhere, I think. O'Boyle took it, all right; it was chauff or starve!"

"I beg your pardon. Who took what?"

"O'Boyle," said Williams. "Charlie O'Boyle, the man we're talking about—the chap that was just conning the giddily gilded cashier yonder. I was telling you he took a job as chauffeur for a family out your way in the suburbs."

"Yes, I understood," Mr. Dodge returned, with more gravity than Williams expected as a tribute to this casual narrative. "You said this O'Boyle became a chauffeur to some people named Braithwaite and that you obtained the position for him. I merely wondered—I suppose when you recommended this O'Boyle to Mr. Braithwaite you—ah—you mentioned his name? I mean to say: you intorduced O'Boyle as O'Boyle."

"Well, naturally," Williams replied, surprised and a little nettled. "Why wouldn't I? I wouldn't expect people to take on a man for a family job like that and not tell 'em his name, would I? I don't see what you—"

"Nothing," Mr. Dodge said hurriedly. "Nothing at all. It was a ridiculous question. My mind was wandering to other things, or I shouldn't have asked it. We'd better get down to business, I suppose."

But that was something his wandering mind refused to do; nor would it under any consideration or pressure "get down to business" during the rest of that afternoon. He went home early, and, walking from his suburban station in the first twilight of a gray but rainless November day, arrived at his own gate just as the Braithwaites' closed car drew up at the curb before the next house.

An elderly negro chauffeur climbed down rustily from his seat at the wheel and opened the shining door, Mrs. Braithwaite stepped gracefully down, and, with her lovely saint's face uplifted above dark furs, she crossed the pavement, entered the low iron gateway and walked up the wide stone path that led through the lawn to the house. On the opposite side of the street a group of impressed women stopped to stare, grateful for the favoring chance that gave them this glimpse of the great lady.

Mr. Braithwaite descended from the car and followed his wife toward the house. He did not overtake her and walk beside her; but his insignificant legs beneath his overcoat kept his small legs moving in neat short steps a little way behind her.

Meanwhile, the pausing neighbor gazed at them and his open mouth showed how he pondered. It was not upon this strange woman, a little of whose strangeness had so lately been revealed to him, that he pondered most, nor about her that he most profoundly wondered. For, strange as the woman seemed to him, far stranger seemed the little creature pattering so faithfully behind her up the walk.

In so helpless a fidelity Mr. Dodge felt something touching; and perhaps, too, he felt that men must keep men's secrets. At all events, he made a high resolve. It would be hard on Mrs. Dodge, even unfair to her; but then and there he made up his mind that for the sake of Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's husband he would never tell anybody—and of all the world he would never tell his wife—what he had learned that day about Mrs. Leslie Braithwaite's husband's loyalty.

his legal right to the farm would be established and has been more concerned over his lack of a woman in the house to cook his meals and mend his clothes and look after his welfare in other ways.

When her anxiety on this point was spread broadcast in the newspapers Lyman was overwhelmed with letters from women eager to be his helpmate. One of these was Miss Jennie Cain, a trained nurse of Buffalo, N. Y.

Miss Cain was not content merely to write Lyman. She came in person to the Connecticut village a few days ago.

"I am ready to marry you," she told Lyman with pleasing frankness, "or to remain here as your housekeeper—just as you prefer."

Perhaps it will be left to Phoebe Simons, emerging cloud-like from the strange green radiance that is said to illuminate the farm house so frequently, to decide which role Miss Cain shall assume in the life of Herbert Lyman.

a lifelong habitue. He would know how to find El Lobo's stronghold in the mountains, and he would rescue her father and aunt. How were they getting along she wondered, housed in that awful mud hut with its spiders and old goat? Her finicky aunt who all her life had known nothing but luxury and refinement. Her father whose word had been law. Poor father and auntie! She tried to see them and sympathize with them to forget her own misery. And by now, if nothing had happened to stop Juan, Lawrence was getting her cable. He would be frantic when he read it. All his old love for her would return. He would catch the first ship. He would realize as she had realized from the minute they had parted that a quarrel meant nothing—not in their case. Nor had he meant a word he said when he said it was the "last" between them, if she went to South America. Foolish, darling Lawrence—forget her? Never! She rocked herself in an ecstacy of pain and joyous revelation. Youth was still hers and his. All was not ended, and love was not a flower that faded in a day—not with them. Love was just beginning for them. All this would but make them love each other the more. Yes, there he went running for a ship, without his hat. She saw him. Lawrence, hatless, looking pale, sad-eyed . . . Lawrence! . . .

BUT what a long time it would take for a ship to come! She would not be alive that long. No, it had to be Juan, or nobody. Nobody else could save her. She was not going to look for anybody else, or for miracles to happen. Juan was the only miracle. He was an instrument in the hands of God. Juan had sent the message, and that minute was on his way back to her. She saw him coming. Through the clouds and glaring sunlight he came. Across great plains. On his wonderful spotted pony! Fording great chasms and deep rushing rivers at a leap. On he came, he and his horse, never stopping, never wearying. Figures of speed, endurance and might! Juan and his spotted horse. They came. Thud, thud, pounded the spotted pony's flying hoofs, in the clouds, across the plains, leaping rivers and chasms. Juan, the handsome Juan, with his vivid, flashing face. Swinging easily in his saddle. Coming, stopping for nothing. Juan was coming! Juan!

So absorbed was she with her visions she did not see a fat and benign old priest patting his knee, and with that sly, expectant look of his, of revived hope, inviting her to sit on it. She was staring at him, but through him, seeing only Juan.

Day after tomorrow it would be a different story. Juan would be there. And the next day after that she would be with her father and aunt again—

She hesitated to go any farther with her dreaming. To keep looking at such a vision might mean she would be disappointed. Something might happen even to her beautiful vision. One unpleasant thought did thrust itself in at the very end. Juan had said he would be back in eight days, but perhaps he meant for her to meet him in the forest of rocks. Perhaps he would be afraid to come to the house. He had not said anything about coming to the house. He might leap chasms and fly through the clouds, but he was afraid to come to the king of the Andes' house. Was there no one in the world fearless but that Don Juan?

She had a sinking sensation about her heart. But perhaps Juan would look for her at the house if he did not find her waiting for him in the rocks. He would know the king of the Andes was keeping her a prisoner. He would not be afraid.

The vision was so complicated by now with so many ifs and ands, she had to begin at the beginning again and see it all over in new freshness to make it seem plausible, deaf to the insistent pat-pat of Father Pollito's fat hand coming down softly on his fat and most capacious knee. The same disgusting performance that soft pat-pat, and the same sly and expectant glances which he would let settle on her like dewdrops of invisible holy water. The same old sly Cheshire cat waiting for the little helpless mouse again. Or fox. What a sly old fox he was, robbing the tawny panther of its prey right in the panther's own den! How cunning was old Father Pollito! It would not have seemed possible in fiction, but more cunning things than that had he done under the noses of people, and within the walls of religious sanctuaries! He knew so many secrets too—and could have told on other people if other people dared tell on him. But no girl or young woman ever told what Father Pollito did—never. They would have been afraid. Look, it is Father Pollito, your padre!

"You see, buttercup; I saved you again from the bad man. Father Pollito!" And he thumped and thumped himself, his gaze bolder as it was slyer in its meaning. "You are a very ungrateful girl. Father Pollito risks his own life to save you, does he not."

"It is very good of you," answered Charlotte, endeavoring to conceal her scorn. "You are a man of God—a true man of God, Father Pollito."

HASTILY he plumped and thumped himself, not liking the generousness of her praise. He would bring her back to the real question. "Your padre, little one. Does he not deserve your smiles? Look. The king of the Andes would have sent to El Lobo this day to have your father and aunt killed, but your padre stopped him. Just now, I stopped the bad man."

"What do you want me to do?" she suddenly demanded very bluntly, almost unladylike in her bluntness, thought Father Pollito, the mouse looking bravely at the cat. "What is it you expect, Father Pollito, besides my thanks?"

Father Pollito did not say. Atrocious of her to ask such a quetion. He puffed his cheeks, rolled his eyes and looked indignant. He made mysterious signs in the air with his fat fingers. She annoyed him exceedingly. A modest girl asking a question like that! She was bold—too bold. Too much brain ad spirit, for a girl. But no longer could she escape him. He was becoming tired of having her intimate he was a scoundrel and hypocrite, wolf in sheep's clothing.

Charlotte read as much in that last look he gave her. Her credit was at an end. He was going to present his bill, and she had to pay. Wearily, and next with a feeling of almost joy to hope she could get out of his sight for a whole night, she decided it would have to be the diving act again. But she would put off going until as late as possible—until Don Juan was surely in bed and asleep. Yes, it was to be the Roman pool again.

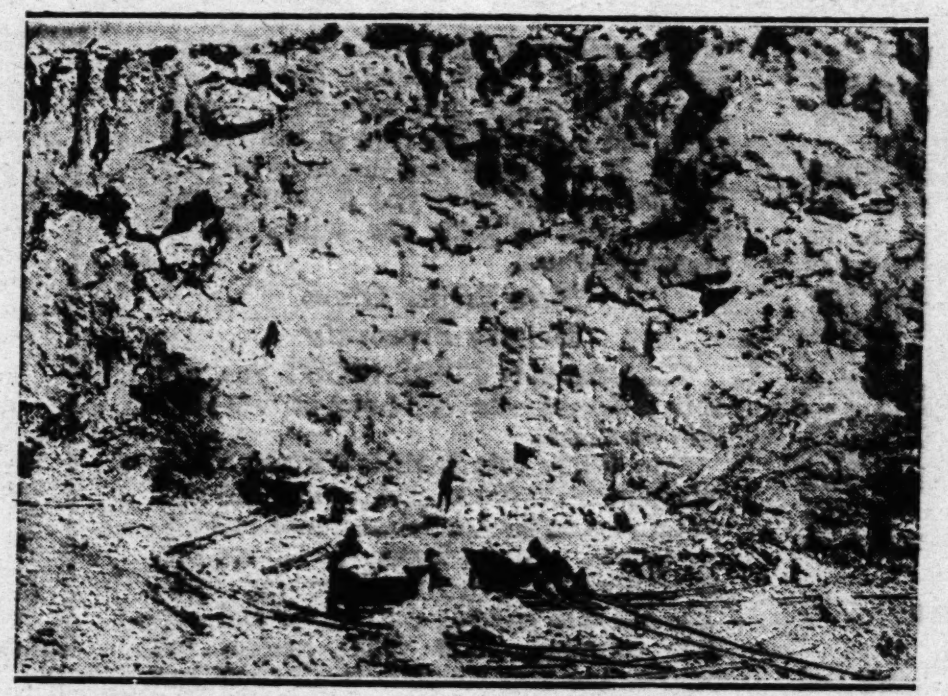

And there she went The night at its zenith, she asked Father Pollito to please bring her some fresh water to drink, and slipped out the door behind him. Reaching the pool's dark cloisture she did her clothes up in the same neat roll and hid them in the shrubbery, the heavy wool sweater in a bundle by itself. The sly old padre would of course make no search or outcry, but she could expect the worst in the morning. She did not deceive herself in that at all—the worst. It was coming. Like a temblor it was coming. It was flow of the ebb-tide again. It was now life or death, freedom or submission. Preferably with her, it was death. Or it was the pistol for herself, or for Father Pollito or Don Juan. Her endurance had reached the breaking point. She would not put up with another night of the evil padre's antics; and not for her own life would she fall again into the hands of Don Juan. The terror she had gone through that afternoon hidden under the bed was enough—quite! Before it was light she would steal into the kitchen, gather some food to take with her, saddle Bolero and be off for the forest of rocks.

And she did all that, cleverly, without a hitch. The sun was just peeping over the eastern horizon when she flashed by the horse-breaking pens, skirting them and riding as she thought in the direction of the great forest of rocks. The overnice, fastidious Bolero, aristocrat that he was, did not like the looks of the region, nor the tall, eerie-looking cacti that took on the forms of men and strange beasts between the boulders, and veered off, kicking up his heels and laying down his flat, pointed ears. But there was no going back for herself, and Bolero would have to stay, too. Not giving him an inch, she finally won out in the skirmish and got him well within the grotesque maze of towering rocks.

sion rests, that there existed in South Africa at a remote epoch a creature more human than any known ape living or fossil and yet not human, are largely of a technical nature. The difference between man and the apes is quantitative, not qualitative. With Shylock, they might say, "Hath not an ape eyes? hath not an ape hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same summer and winter . . .?"

Face of the quarry at Taungs, Bechuanaland, where the skull was found in two parts, with one side of the face missing after being blasted out of the limestone rock.—(Copyright Johannesburg Star.)

SO, too, this man-like ape-child of Taungs—but with added emphasis in that his resemblances are manifestly closer with man than those of his ape cousins, seeing that his forehead was more vertical, his carriage more erect, his hind-limbs better adapted for carrying the body weight, his fore limbs more capable of catching and throwing objects, and, in consequence of all these characters, his brain a better organ of intelligence, balance and dexterity.

It is in these matters that Australopithecus Africanus has an interest for all. For the scientist he holds added, special interest for a number of reasons. In the first place, his remains, though few, are the most complete of any fossil ape discovered. The natural brain-cast of a fossil anthropoid has never before been found.

The remains of the fossil apes known consist of a tooth, a fragment of upper or lower jaw, or a piece of a limb bone. In the case of Australopithecus we have preserved, fortunately enough, the whole upper face, all the teeth, most of the lower jaw, the palate and part of the skull base.

Most important of all is the discovery of a man-like ape form so far south in the African continent; because all living anthropoid apes are confined to tropical countries and the highest forms of fossil apes found previously were in India. These facts have led many to believe that man's ancestors would be found in the equatorial regions and probably in Asia.

This discovery will aid, as no other single discovery has done, in centralizing the search for representatives of this particular phase in human evolution. We know, in other words, where to look for the graves of our forefathers.

Thus, future search can be initiated with the profoundest expectations of success, since the whole of Southern Africa must have been overrun ever since the ape-phase of mankind with some representative of the human stock. We have in the south of the continent a record of humanity far transcending in grandeur and sublimity the historical records of the civilizations of the north.

Means new skin loveliness

Candle light and compliments—sunlight, and what? Do YOU fear to show a pimply, blotchy or haggard skin to the morning glare?

If you would amaze your friends, widen the field of your social successes, be all that Nature originally intended you to be, in the way of physical loveliness, and achieve this loveliness in a brief time—read these few paragraphs about one of the most remarkable new scientific discoveries.

Women have spent hundreds of dollars for skin treatments in Beauty Shops—for bleaches, facials, massages, Violet Rays—without achieving one-tenth what Skin White will accomplish for you in a few brief nights of home application, at insignificant cost.

Skin Rejuvenation At Negligible Expense

You know that actresses, singers and opera stars often manage to retain at 50 a complexion of which a girl of 20 would be proud. You know that to attain this SUPREME BEAUTY OF WOMANHOOD, a lovely skin, these professional women have hired specialists at fabulous prices and submitted to long, tedious treatments, daily for years.

Skin White will do for you all that these rejuvenating treatments have done for the richest women in the world, and at negligible cost.

Skin White is a new discovery. If, in this age of science, anything can be said to be marvelous, Skin White would be declared the greatest marvel ever known. If you are in the flower of youth, it will help you retain the smooth, clear skin of girlhood. If you are middle-aged, or elderly, Skin White will absolutely take away the weary looking, dingy, weather-beaten appearance, and create—almost miraculously, the creamy-white, rose-tinted clear skin for which you envy famous professional beauties.

Good-by Pimples, Blackheads

Skin White is a boon to the woman who longs to rid her skin of enlarged pores, pimples, blotches, blackheads or other unsightly flaws. Skin White makes your complexion young and beautiful—flower-fresh and lovely as the skin of early childhood. It will make you the envy of your friends. It will give you a rightful and proper sense of pride and satisfaction in your appearance.

Skin White Gives Beauty Promptly

From the very FIRST NIGHT you will note a change—the beginning of rose-petal skin loveliness.

Skin White acts SCIENTIFICALLY. It stimulates circulation, and arouses the skin to activity, at the same time toning underlying tissues. As you know, the human skin is continually changing, renewing itself. The old skin is being thrown off and new skin forming. Skin White hastens this process and also counteracts all conditions leading to pimples, blotches, blackheads. It removes fur stains and clears away the unfortunate effects of skin exposure to sooty, dirty, drying air.

Skin White makes it possible to wear all the delicate colors of spring and summer, secure in the possession of a clear, white skin, even after prolonged exposure through motoring, golf, riding, tennis or swimming. A remarkable improvement occurs overnight. In a brief time a peach-blow complexion results.

Apply Skin White

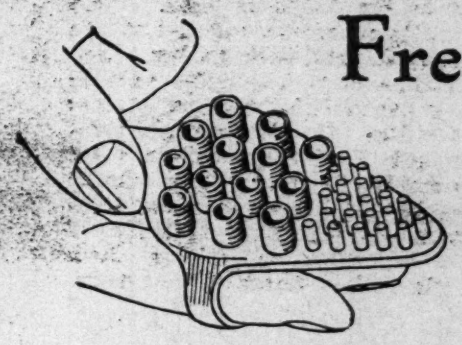

When you retire, leave it on overnight. Remove in the morning with a finishing cream. Presto! The magic is wrought! Nothing to burn, harm or injure the skin. Skin White acts mildly, slowly, beneficently, permanently to build up complexion loveliness by assisting Nature scientifically.

Order Skin White Today

Mail Coupon to obtain a Course of Skin White Treatments at the SPECIAL INTRODUCTION PRICE of $2.47. LOSE NO TIME. For little more than the price of a single treatment at a Beauty Shop you will receive a Complete Course of Skin White Treatments, with resultant radiant complexion loveliness.

Here Is His Telltale Puzzle

CUT IT OUT AND PUT IT TOGETHER ACCORDING TO DIRECTIONS

Is your age in panels 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 or 6? Look through all six of them. Your "Lucky Number" will consist of the numbers of such panels as contain your age. For example: If your age is in 1, 2 and 3, then your "Lucky Number" is 123. Move disk until "Lucky Number" shows, then glance quickly down to the Witch's Book and there is your age.

Here's a problem to work out in connection with the TELLTALE PUZZLE.

The combined ages of Tom, Dick and Harry total 100 years, and Tom is now twice as old as Dick was when Harry was as old as Dick is now.

When you have figured out the three ages, take all of the figures contained in their combined "Lucky Numbers," as revealed in the TELLTALE PUZZLE, and arrange them in a single, simple sum without fractions, that will add up to exactly 700.

Directions for Cutting and Assembling

Cut out the large rectangular design on its border lines. Then carefully cut out the small white oblongs, one above the arrow and the other in the book.

Cut out the circle containing the circular rows of numbers.

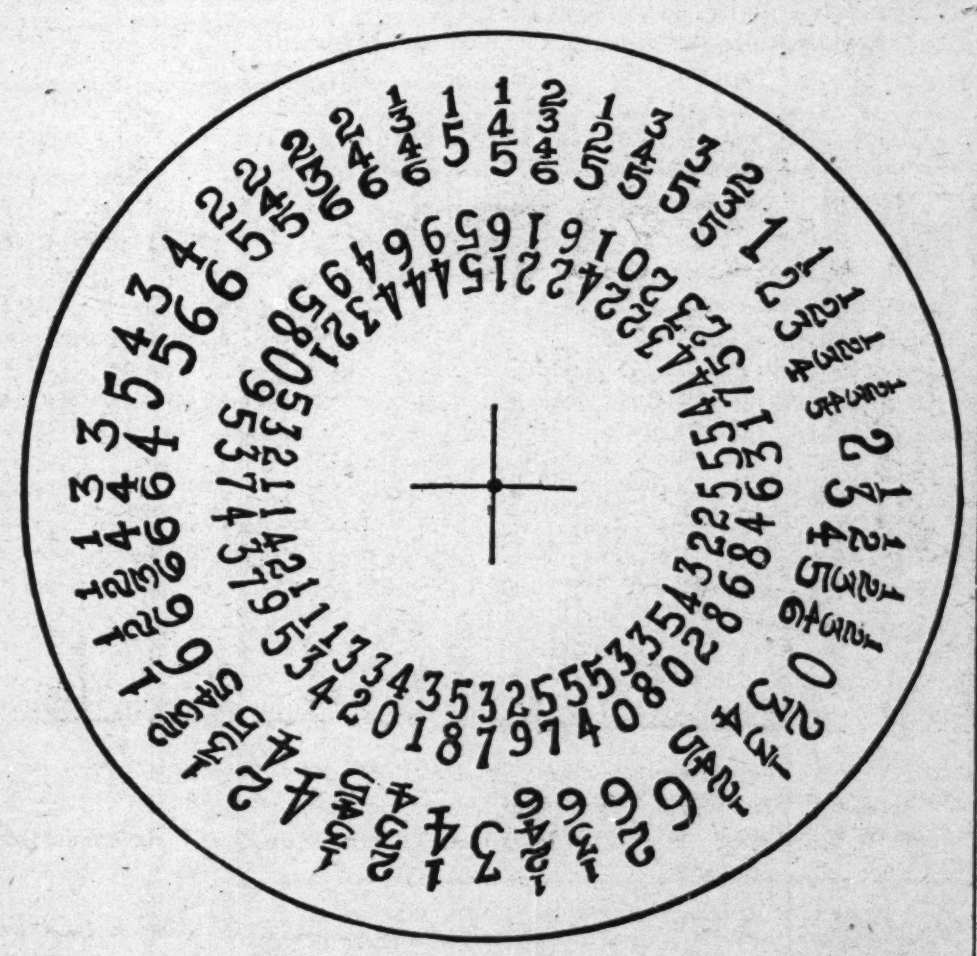

Make two pinholes—one through the centre of the circular part and the other through the centre of the small circle just below the "r" in the arrow.

Place circular part behind the telltale sketch, bringing the two pinholes together, so that numbers will come to view through the small oblong apertures.

Then insert a pin through the holes from the back so that its point will protrude outward through the sketch.

The two pieces will then lie flat as pin point is held by finger and thumb of left hand. Circular piece can now be turned at will by right hand to bring required Lucky Numbers to view, as directed.

If mounted on cardboard, and an eyelet substituted for the pin, the puzzle can better be preserved and operated.

THREE BLIND MICE

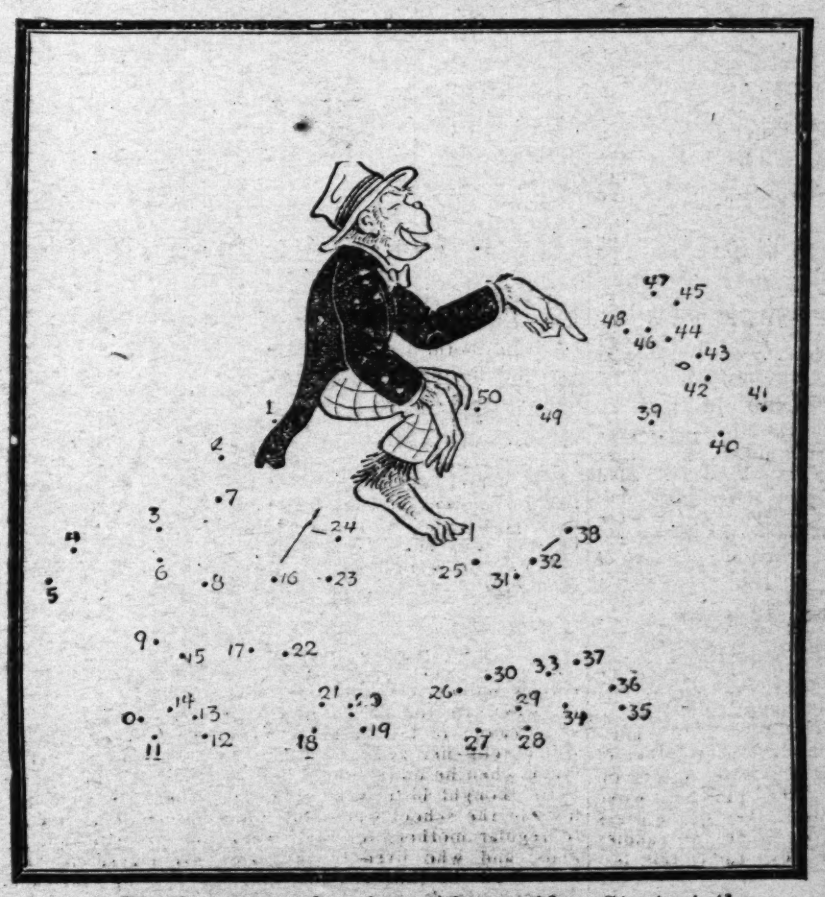

You remember the three blind mice who ran after the farmer's wife till she cut off their tails with the carving knife. Here we see the farmer's wife looking for the mice with her carving knife. The three mice are hidden in the picture. Can you find them?

A MARKING PROBLEM

Here is a square with twelve circles marked on it. The problem is to cut it into four pieces, of the same size and shape, each piece to contain three circles. None of the circles must be cut into. If you do not wish to start cutting till you are certain of your moves, take a pencil and try to mark off the divisions. We will give you a little clue here: Do you know what a "swastika" is? If you do, you will not have much trouble in making the proper cuts. If you don't—well, undoubtedly Dad does.

FOLLOW THE DOTS

The happy monkey is out for a ride. Start at the figure 1 and follow the dots in order till you have made a picture of what the monkey is riding on.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

Famous Folk of All Time Tell How Much They Owe to Training By Their Mothers

When you grow up, you want, of course, to make your mother proud of you. (And that very same ambition to please mother is what had a very great deal to do with the success of some of the greatest men and women. They wanted to please their mothers.

GEORGE WASHINGTON:

There's the story of George Washington, and how wishing to be kind to his mother changed his whole life. When he was about sixteen years old he enlisted as a midshipman, and his trunk was sent on board the ship. His mother not only hated to see him go, but she felt it was not the wise thing for him to do. When he came to tell her farewell, she burst into tears. The youthful George ordered his trunk sent ashore. "Mother," he said, "I can never go and cause you so much grief. I will stay at home." This was a turning point in his life, for had he become a sailor his career would have been far different.

VICTOR HUGO:

Victor Hugo, the famous novelist, tells how his father was away from home a great deal and his mother shouldered all the raising of the family herself. She was a determined ambitious person, and she was always encouraging her son and telling him how sure she was that he would some day be a famous writer. He never quite got over the shock of her death, which occurred when he was nineteen. Its influence is felt in his well-known book, "Les Miserables."

EUGENE FIELD:

Eugene Field's mother died when he was only six years old, but much of his lovely poetry is due to his memory of her. Her disposition was so sweet and gentle and she was so very beautiful that she remained forever in his mind. Eugene said of her, "I have carried the remembrance of her gentle voice and soothing touch all through my life."

COUNT TOLSTOY:

Count Tolstoy, the great Russian writer, also had but a memory of his mother. He was very young when she died, and, strangely enough, there were no pictures of her. So he "made her up" in his mind and when he was sad and lonely used to think of her. His father had told him that his mother played the piano beautifully, and that she was very clever; in fact, she spoke easily five languages. The young Tolstoy decided that he wanted to be the sort of man when he grew up that his clever mother would not be ashamed of, had she lived. So, you see, even though he'd never seen her, she had a lot to do with her son's life.

FRANCES WILLARD:

Frances Willard, the temperance leader, tells how much her mother enocuraged her. "She never called us 'bad children,'" says Miss Willard. "She told you that we were good, and therefore she always expected good things of us. So of course we were bound we wouldn't disappoint her."

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT:

Bryant's mother taught him his letters, and it was from her that he early gained his love of reading. It wasn't easy for her to find time to teach her young son, for Bryant's family was poor, and the mother of the family was a sort of factory on a small scale. She spun flax, wove linen, made quilts, dyed all the dress goods, and even made the candles by which the boy studied his lessons.

"All that I am my mother made me."—John Quincy Adams.

"Men are what their mothers make them."—R. W. Emerson.

"The future of the child is always the work of the mother."—Napoleon.

A REGULAR MOTHER

Peter was homesick. Why, it must have been years since he had seen his mother. He sat with his eyes on his history book, but his mind far away—far away to last summer when he and his mother had had such a lovely time together at Pinehurst Farm. Then had come winter again, which meant that his mother, a famous violinist, must go on tour again and he must be sent to a boarding school.

Today he was resentful toward his mother. He didn't see why she couldn't content to settle down in some little house with him, for his father, who had died when Peter was very small, had left them enough money to live on in a modest way. He found himself feeling very jealous of his mother's music, which took her away from him so much when he quite adored her.

He thought bitterly of other fellows in the school who went home to regular mothers for their weekends, and who lived in the same houses all the time and had neighborhood friends, and all such things that he had never had.

And today was Mother's Day. He had written a long, long letter to his mother and had received a long one from her. But one look at the postmark on his letter from her had brought on this spell of homesickness, for she was half-way across the country from him. And most of his fellows in school had been able to go home to their mothers for the week-end. His roommate was even now in the midst a family party, with his mother cooking his favorite dishes and fussing over him.

Tears began to sting his eyes. He gulped, then got up and walked down to the library. There were three fellows in the room tinkering with a radio set. They asked him to join them, but he answered surlily that he didn't much care for radio.

He was starting back toward the door when he heard, sweet and clear through the loud speaker, the sound of a violin. He stopped. The music was lovely. He had never heard any one except his mother who played that particular piece so well, and he had heard many violinists. The piece was finished. Then the violinist started another, this time an old folksong that was his favorite, and which his mother had played for him so many times.

During the piece he felt his mother so very close to him that it didn't seem strange when the piece was finished, to hear her own dear voice saying, "I played that piece for my son, because this is Mother's Day. He is far away from me, and as I didn't know I was to play until a short while ago, I didn't notify him to listen, but perhaps he may be hearing this, and if he is I am telling him 'love and kisses, good night.'"

"Oh!" cried Peter to the astonished boys. "That was my mother! Maybe she isn't just like other fellows' mothers, but she suits me right down to the ground."

The Letter Writers' Club

Is Your Letter or Picture on This Page? Write a Letter Real Soon And Join the "Letter Writers' Club"

Tampa, Fla.—Dear Friends: May I join the letter writers' club? I think your section is very nice. I buy The Atanta Constitution every Saturday afternoon and enjoy the jokes and puzzles very much, but most of all your section.

I am in the seventh grade. I have five lovely teachers. Their names are: Miss Nicivonger, Miss Jennings, Miss Menny Mann, Miss Vause and Mr. Bates.

I'm not much of a letter writer but I can think of a lot to tell to new friends. I have many nice friends in Tampa and used to have many in Atlanta when I lived there.

Best wishes to all,

MADGE MILLER.

806 Forest Avenue.

Gainesville, Ga. — Dear Editor: Will you allow just a tiny space for a Georgia girl? I am 13 years old and in the seventh grade. Miss Clara Smith is my teacher. She is very good, but when you turn to a friend in a desk beside you, you can just look out for you know what's coming.

We have seven studies, but I just like spelling or something easy.

Our school gave a carnival and made up enough money to get some balls, and to fix up the ground.

Among my favorite sports is swimming.

I think it would be nice to form a circle of writers. Have six in a circle and to promise to send at least three letters to The Constitution a month. I hope that this will escape the waste basket and go to somebody worthier than he.

Yours truly,

TOMMIE PARK.

34 Oak St.

Roswell, Ga.—Dear Unknown Friends: I harve been reading all the letters of The Constitution Magazine quite a while. I enjoy reading them fine. I thought I would write a short letter; I will try to write one every week if Mr. Waste Basket doesn't get this one.

I am 13 years old and in the seventh grade. I have four good teachers which are Mrs. Alda Lyon, Mrs Smith, Miss Willie Gibson, Miss Ozelia Hembree.

I have many playmates which are: Sara Dial, Mamie Feckoury, Gladys Rollins, Bertha Mae Hardeman and Lutile Booker which is my desk mate. There are 48 pupils in my room. The Sixth grade is in my room. I go to Roswell public school. We play games at recess. I live in the country close to a church and gin. I live about 1 1-4 miles from school, but I do not mind the walk. I ride when it is raining. We can grow most anything on our farm. We have a lot of fruit trees. We have beatiful flowers of all kinds. I live on the highway.

I have not got many pets but a cat and calf. I have bobbed straight hair I have two sisters and two brothers; I am between the two boys and two girls.

One of my brothers and sisters are married. My sister has a sweet little boy about 10 months old. I love him dearly. I do not know much to write.

I wish some unknown friend who likes my letters would write to me. I will be glad to answer your letter.

Good luck to the unknown friend

Your unknown friend,

CLEO MANSELL.

P. S.—I have not got a picture now that is good.

Blairsville, Ga.—Dead Readers: May I join your letter writing club?

I am a little girl ten years old, and I enjoy reading the comic section and the boys and girls' letters of The Constitution.

I go to Blairsville High school.

I play many games at recess and my favorite game is basket ball and hop skip. My right name is Kathleen, but the girls at school call me Kitty.

Hope the waste basket is disappointed. I will close hoping to see my letter published.

KITTY LOU BURKE.

P. S.—Forgive me I got kerosene oil on this paper.

Mountville, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I would like to join your happy club. I know it is the best club ever established for boys and girls.

I go to school and like it fine. I am nine years old and in the fifth grade. My teacher's is name is Mrs. Martin She certainly is a good teacher.

I haven't any pets but I have a good time playing with Nancy Jane, my doll that I won by getting subscriptions for The Constitution.

Hoping to see my letter published. I am your friend.

BESSIE RUTH BURTY.

Fralana, Ga.—Dear Friends. I have been reading the letters of the members of the letter writing club and enjoy it fine.

I am 13 years old and in the sixth grade. I go to Fralana to school. I have about a mile to walk but it is grand exercise. We have only one teacher, her name is Miss Lee Cook and her pupils all love her because she is so sweet to us.

I bet Santa Claus was good to you boys and girls, he was good to me, he brought me a fountain pen and a kodak.

What do you boys and girls do for amusement? I have a little sister, we go in bathing, I taguht her to swim and enjoy it fine.

If any of you kiddies will write to me I will answer your letter real soon.

Your unkown friend,

MARY FRANCIS

Westmoreland, Tenn.—Dear boys and girls: I am ten years old, I go to school and am in the fifth grade. my teacher is Mrs. Clara Kinslow, and I like her very much. This is my first time to write to The Constitution. I like to read the letters from all the boys and girls.

I have no pets, but my work at school and my music keeps me pretty busy. My music teacher's name is Miss Ruth Hall. Oh, no, I forgot she got married last week, it is now Mrs Hubert Simmons. If I see this in print I will write again.

Your cousin,

MARY BLANCHE LAW.

Alvaton, Ga.—Dear boys and girls: I sure was glad to see my letter in print last Sunday. I will now tell you how I look. I have blue eyes, brown hair and I am 4 feet and 8 inches tall. I sure do enjoy reading The Constitution. It is the best paper published, I think. My father has taken it all of my life. I like the Young Folks' section best of all, and the funny paper next. I don't think I could do without The Constitution. Your letters, poems, and stories are so good. I enjoy reading them very much. On Sunday evenings sometime I will get lonesome, and I will read the Young Folks' section, and I will forget all about being lonesome. There is nothing I enjoy as well as reading the letters in it. There are some of the nicest ones I almost ever read. I have every doll that came out of The Constitution. Some of them are real pretty. I know the waste basket is waiting for this letter, but I hope it escapes from it. If it does I will write again. I remain, your friend,

MARGARET HIGGINS

Alvaton, Ga.— Dear unknown friend: I think it would be nice to write to the Boys and Girls editor. I go to school, I am ten years old, and in the fifth grade. I like to go to school; I live about 2 miles from the school house; I ride to school every morning; we play many games; I have a friend by the name of Louise Caldwell; My teacher's name is Miss Inez Todd, she sure is a sweet teacher and I like her very much. I have a dog, his name is Frisco, he is a smart dog, he is a fice. I like for summer to come I have a very good time; I like to work the cross-word puzzle; I have a pretty little baby sister I would like to get a letter from some of the boys and girls. Tell them to send me some of their pictures. Your unknown friend.

MARY NANCY LEE GARNER.

Stockbridge, Ga.—Dear boys and girls: Will you let a lonesome Georgia girl join your letter writing club.

I am 13 years of age, 5 feet and a few inches tall, weigh 100 pounds, have light hair and fair complexion and blue eyes.

I go to school at Progress. I like my teacher fine, her name is Mrs. Ethel Lamb. I am in the seventh grade. My favorite studies are English and spelling. I enjoy playing at school and also reading the Young Folks' sectioin. If Mr. Waste Basket doesn't catch up with this letter I will write again next week. I am your friend,

RUTH LEWIS.

Red Oak, Ga.—Dear Kiddies: I am a Georgia girl asking for admittance into your happy band of boys and girls. I live on a fifty acre farm about 12 miles south of Atlanta, like all others I like farm life fine as I enjoy the fresh air and pure water, but I like to go to the city on my vacation.

I live in a five room house with a hall and two porches, the house is about 20 yards from the public road. What do all you kiddies do for pastime as for me I visit my friends and read, I have several friends. I will name a few: Floy Creel and Merle Creel, they are not sisters just cousins. I also have boy friends, James Ira Mason and Erskine Cook are two of my boy friends. I will now describe myself and go as my letter is getting lengthly,I am 5ft.-3 in. tall, have blue-grey eyes, fair complexion and light hair. I will close hoping to hear from lots of the kiddies real soon. I beg to remain,

RUBY NELSON COOK.

I sure do enjoy reading the many interesting letters every Sunday.

I go to school at the chapel and my teacher's name is Miss Lucille Mae Coker. I like her fine.

I will now describe myself: I am 13 years old and have fair complexion, blue eyes and brown hair. I will not write a long letter because this is the first time I have written. I wish to see this in print, if Mr. Waste Basket doesn't get it.

Some of you write to me and I will answer your letters. Your sincere friend,

LOUISE FAULKNER.

Gainesville, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I read the young folks' section every week, and think it is the best part of our dear old Constitution. I was surprised to see my letter in print, for I thought Mr. Waste Basket would be sure to get it. I go to school every day. We are going to have a high school at Air Line pretty soon. I think that will be fine. We have a good time playing ball. I haven't any kind of a pet, but have a big mamma doll as large as a real baby. I have got two brothers. Frank and Charles are their names. I often wish I had a sister to play dolls with me. I go to Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. every Sunday.

As my letter is growing long will hush for this time. Will be glad to hear from any one that will write to me.

Your little friend,

RUTH LLOYD.

Route 5.

Gainesville, Ga. — Dear Folks: Have been reading your letters and enjoy them very much. I have five sisters and one brother, and I notice in the paper that four girls writing had names the same as three of my sisters and myself. (Edna, Helen, Dorothy and Virginia.) I live in the country and go to school at Chestnut Mountain high school. I am 10 years old and in the fourth grade. I like my teacher very much. Her name is Miss Willie Mauldin. School will soon be out and we are getting up plays for commencement now.

Would like to hear from any of you, any time, for I love to get letters.

Your little friend.

VIRGINIA SHARP.

Fayetteville, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading the young folks' section a long time. I sure do enjoy reading it.

I am a little girl of 9 years. I go to school at Sandy Creek. I am in the third grade. We have five studies. My favorite is reading. My teacher's name is Miss Clara Ellison. I like her fine. At school we play ball, dropping-the-handkerchief, and other games.

I go to Sunday school at Sandy Creek. I am in the Primary class. My Sunday school teacher's name is Mrs. Mamie Ellison. I wish some of the boys and girls would write to me. I will gladly write back.

Your sincere friend,

OPAL ELLINGTON.

Fayetteville, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading the young folks' section a long time. I sure do enjoy reading it.

I go to school at Sandy Creek. I am 11 years old and in the fourth grade. I have five studies. My favorite study is geography. My teacher is Miss Vivian Dexion. She is the postmaster's daughter. She sure is nice and sweet. I certainly do love her. I have lots of nice friends around.

I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am in the Junior class. I am the secretary of my class. My sister has been the secretary of the Sunday school for three years. My Sunday school teacher's name is Miss Minnie Turner. She lives at The Rock and comes to Sandy Creek to Sunday school every Sunday.

Your friend,

MATTIE BELLE ELLINGTON.

Haralson, Ga.—Dear Editor: I am glad my letter passed the waste basket. I am still going to school. My teacher is Miss Ruth Wallace. I love her very much. School will be out May 29. We are going to have a play that night. For pets I have a dog named Fido, and some little kittens. Please print my letter for I want to surprise Grandma.

WARNER T. SWYGERT.

Smyrna, Ga. — Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading your letters and enjoy them so much I would like to join you.

I read The Constitution funnies, Girls and Boys' page, and also figure out the cross word puzzles. I think The Constitution is a very nice paper.

I am a little girl 11 years old and in the sixth grade. I go to Marietta school. I like all my teachers as they are all good to me.

I haven't any pets now, but I did have a little kitty, but it got run over by an automobile.

As I have been talking about The Constitution I will describe myself. I am not very tall, I have brown hair and blue eyes.

I belong to the Junior B. Y. P. U. I have a very good leader. Her name is Mrs. Cannan. Well, as I haven't any picture of myself to send you I will just write this letter. So, Editor, please do not let it land in the Waste Basket. If any one wishes to write to me I will gladly write back. for I like to receive letters. My address is Smyrna, Georgia.

Your friend,

ELSIE NICHOLS.

Covington, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading the Boys and Girls section and I want to join it. I am 10 years old and in the fifth grade. My teacher is Miss Eaves. I like her very much. I have one sister and not any brothers. I have one little kitten and three dolls.

My favorite studies are history, English and geography. We have five hundred children in our school. We have twenty-four in our room and have another section with about the same. We play games at recess. W play dodge ball and other games. Some of you girls and boys about my age write to me and I will answer.

Your friend,

MARY ALAMAND.

Chatsworth, Ga.—Dear Friends: May I join the letter writers' club? I sure do enjoy reading the letters as well as many other things in The Constitution.

I sure do enjoy going to school. I am in hte eighth grade. I go to Chatsworth high school. I have two nice teachers, Professors L. N. Foster and W. H. Padgett. We sure have a good school here. We have six teachers.

I think Georgia is the best state of all—though I guess the reason for that is I was born in Georgia.

I'll try to tell you something about our town. Chatsworth is a small town with about one thousand population. It is near Fort Mountain, the mountain on which De Soto built a fort. It is the county seat of Murry county, and the largest town.

There is a house close by here that is said to have been built by an Indian chieftain.

I will close. If I see this in print I will write again. Some of you girls write me, and I'll try to answer.

Your friend,

BEULAH THORNTON.

P. S. I think it sure is nice to have a letter writers' club.

Chatsworth, Ga.—Dear Friends! As I haven't seen but one letter from Chatsworth I thought I would try to join the letter writers' club.

I am 11 years of age and in the sixth grade at school. My teacher's name is Miss Mary Montgomery. She is real nice. I go to school at Chatsworth high.

I have one pet. It is a cat. His name is Tom. I enjoy playing with him and my mama doll. My doll's name is Maud.

I sure do enjoy reading the Sunday Constitution. Don't you? I like the Gumps best of all.

I like to read the letter writers' club, too.

If I see this in print I will write again.

Your unknown friend.

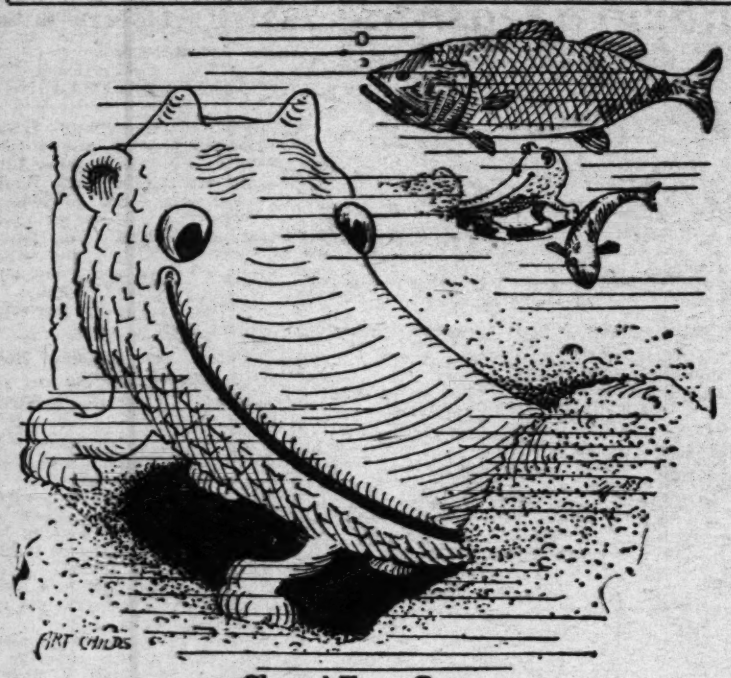

EULAH THORNTON.

Alpharetta, Ga.—Dear Girls and Boys: I want to join your writing club, may I? I go to school at Alpharetta, Ga., I have a nice teacher her name is Mrs. Nannie Brodwell, she comes back and forth from Crabapple, Ga., she teaches us how to read with expression, and I have improved a lot in my reading. I have one brother and one sister my brother goes to Sunday school and says a verse every Sunday. Yours Truly,

INEZ WOOD.

STORIES—JOKES—GAMES—Things to Make

YARNS OF THE BIG WOODS
By Art Childs

Shovel-Face Oscar

(Up in the great lonesome woods of the North the old guides have made up many yarns which they tell over and over to the tenderfoot from the cities—their own way of explaining the strange tracks and weird noises. Mr. Childs, who used to be a game warden in the woods of northern Wisconsin, collected these stories himself from the "oldtimers.")

"One of the strangest animals—I guess you'd call him an animal—that I ever heard of up in these parts is Shovel-Face Oscar," said the Old Guide, who had been giving a talk on the queer natural history of the North Woods to a party of fishermen from the city.

"Well, that's an odd name for an animal," ventured one of the men.

"Yep, and it's an odd animal. You see, it's this way. As you probably know, bass are very peculiar fish, and when they lay their eggs they do so in a hollowed-out place on the sandy bottoms in the shallow waters of an inland lake.

"Now there's a funny little shovel-faced animal that makes a business of hollowing out the nests for their eggs. He has four legs and he eats and sleeps underneath the surface of the water. He makes a nice, smooth, saucer-shaped bed for each mother bass' eggs."

"But where does he get the 'Oscar?'" asked a listener.

"He's called that after Oscar Wicklem, an old fisherman, who is the first man, besides the Indians, who ever really saw one of these shovel-faced animals."

(Next week Mr. Childs will report the true story of how the bears lost their tails.)

"FOOTWORK IS TRICK OF BASE STEALING" —Says Al Demaree

(This is one of a series of tips on baseball by Al Demaree, formerly pitcher for the New York Giants. He writes especially for boys who want to learn to play baseball in Big League style.)

The batter drives a long fly to the left field fence. It looks like a good, safe double. He turns first base and races toward second, only to be caught at the bag by inches.

"Perhaps," you will say, "he didn't run fast enough."

"Speed in running is absolutely essential in base stealing, and a quick start is most important of all," says Al Demaree. "Stars like Max Carey, Frank Frisch, and Eddie Collins, with hundreds of stolen bases to their credit, are experts at getting the jump on the ball." Follow the advice that Demaree gives in this and other articles in the series and your own game is bound to improve.

But the drive was a long one, and the same runner had made second many times before on shorter hits. Where, then, lay the trouble?

Footwork Is Faulty

The answer is in his footwork: two small mistakes in running were instrumental in putting him out by a very small margin.

In the first place, he was just a little slow in starting—only a matter of seconds, perhaps, but enough to lose him the decision in a close play. Again, in turning first base, he lost a step by turning the base on the wrong foot.

May Decide Games

To the average follower of the game these points may not seem very important, but they are among the deciding factors that win or lose games.

Learn to get a quick start after hitting the ball. Practice this start as a runner practices for a race. Make sure that you get off on the correct foot each time, as the wrong foot causes you to lose a step and may decide whether or not you reach first base.

Learn To Pivot

In turning a base in order to run to the next, learn to piot or turn on the left foot, touching the bag on the side toward which you run. This will give you correct balance after making the turn, and eliminate chances for losing a step in your stride.

Another most important place in the game in which footwork is a deciding factor is base stealing. Many an otherwise fast runner is poor at base stealing because of his failing to "get the jump" on the pitcher. This requires a fast start at just the right moment.

Learn "Getaway"

Runners like Max Carey, Frank Frisch and Archdeacon, with a long list of stolen bases to their credit, are experts at knowing when to start the play and at getting away with all the speed they possess.

My advice to young players anxious to develop correct footwork is to spend plenty of time learning to start quickly and in using the correct foot when turning bases. Also it is a good plan to take such exercise as will develop the chest and give you more wind. Long walks and practice runs will be very valuable for this.

(Next week Mr. Demaree will tell you all about slow balls.)

THE FUN BOX

Her Job

"It's the little things that count," said the educational lecturer.

"Yes," responded the primary grade teacher, "but you can't imagine what a hard time we have teaching them to do it."

The laziest man in town is the one who bought a Lizzie so he wouldn't have to shake the ashes off his cigar.

Hawful!

An Englishman heard an owl for the first time. "What was that?" he asked.

"An owl," was the reply.

"My deah fellow, I know that, but what was 'owling?"

Speaker (addressing audience): "I miss many of the old faces I used to enjoy shaking hands with."

Utter

"Go, my son, and shut the shutter," a mother to her son did utter.

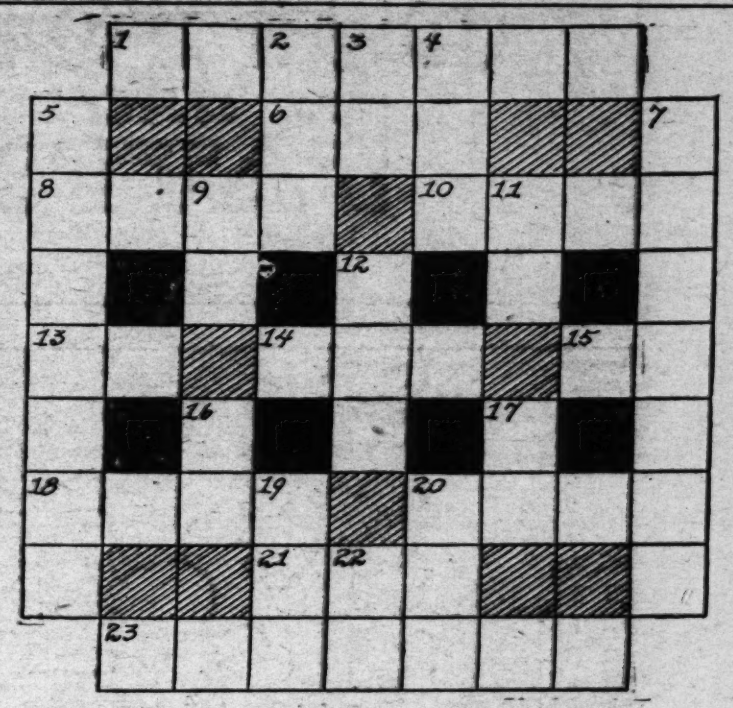

"The shutter's shut," the son did mutter, "and I can't shut it any shutter."

Junior Cross Word Puzzle

This cross word puzzle is dedicated to the mothers—all of them—everywhere—in North America, South America, Europe or Asia, to celebrate Mother's day.

The white squares represent the letters of the words, those that are numbered being the starting spaces of all the words, either horizontally (straight across) or vertically (straight down). The black and gray squares denote the ends of the words, and they may be regarded simply as periods.

When you have guessed all the words, according to the definitions below, they will read from top to bottom as well as from left to right.

Number One Horizontal is described as 'Mother's day is celebrated in honor of them." With seven letters the word could be nothing but "mothers." To check this, refer to Number Two Vertical which must, then, begin with a "t." It has three letters and means an article. Below are the remaining definitions.

Horizontal

1. Mother's day is celebrated in honor of them.
6. A female chicken.
8. Strong affection.
10. Facts upon which arguments can be based.
13. Us.
14. A valuable, greasy liquid.
15. An advertisement.
18. A certain quantity of paper.
20. Other.
21. The organ of hearing.
23. Male parents.

Vertical

2. An article.
3. Masculine pronoun.
4. The finish.
5. Article with pleasant odor that you send your mother on Mother's day (plural).
7. She may prefer these sweets.
9. Abbreviation for a state bordering on New Hampshire and Massachusetts.
11. Like.
12. To tilt.
16. Half a laugh.
17. A boy's nickname.
19. Introduced.
20. Before.
22. Exclamation.

You will find the answer in another place in this section.

HOW MUCH FOR A HOUSE

By SAM LOYD

Sam Loyd, America's greatest puzzle-maker, has joined the staff of MAGIC. Here is one of his mathematical puzzles, and we think our readers will enjoy cracking it, though if you do not go at it the right way it may turn out to be a tougher nut than it appears. The problem is as follows:

A real estate dealer was endeavoring to sell an old condemned building to a housewrecker for the best price he could get. The wrecker didn't think much of the structure, but was willing to do business on a basis of $1,500 less than the owner's asking price.

Finally the realtor came down 25 per cent. in his demand, but there still remained a difference of $1,250 between the owner's and the wrecker's figures, and the deal was declared off.

What was the wrecker's offer?

A PERPLEXING CUTOUT PROBLEM

Try this little cutout. If you guess the method it will prove simple; but if you "get off on the wrong foot" it may cause you considerable trouble. The problem is to cut the central figure into pieces which can be put together in different ways to make both the figure on the left and the one on the right. The right-hand figure should give you a clue.

WHAT IS WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?

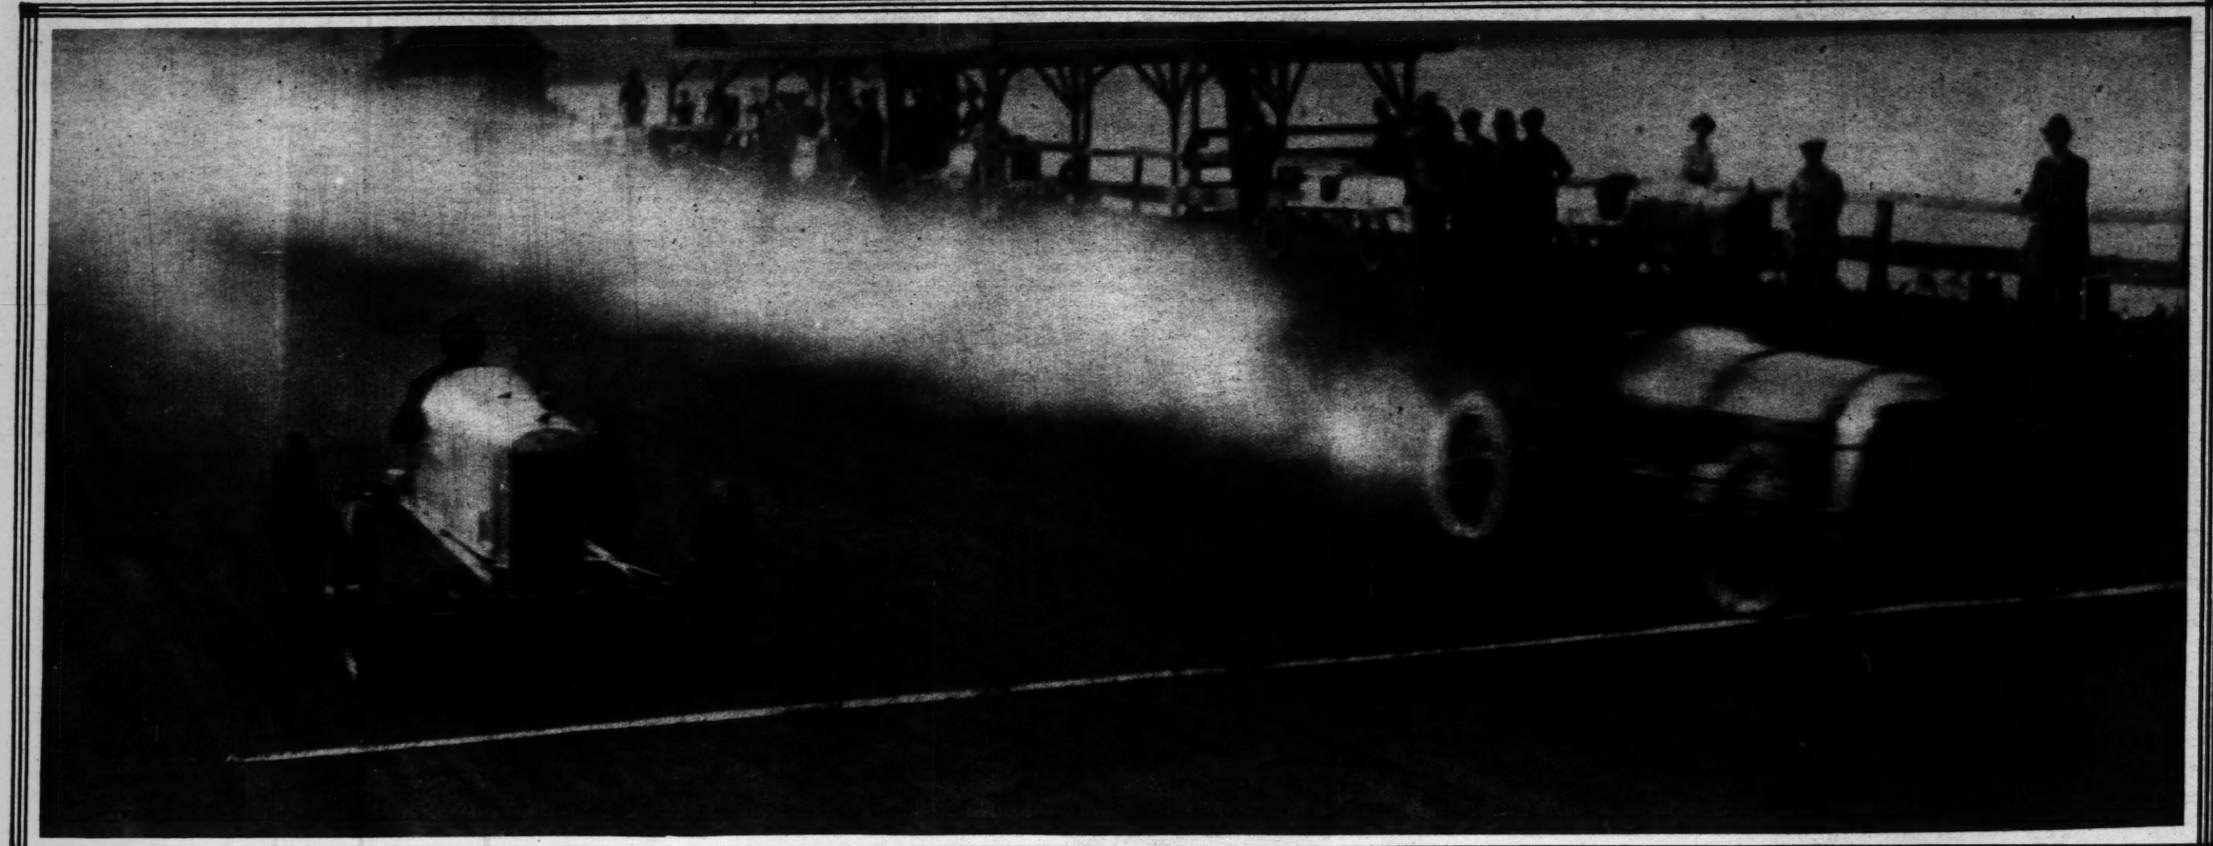

Here we have a scene in the park on a bright sunshiny afternoon. The artist must have felt the influence of the warm, bright day, for he let his pencil slip several times. Altogether there are twenty-one errors in the picture. For example, the street light is burning in daytime. Can you discover the other twenty mistakes?

THE PICTURE THAT DECIDED A DIRT TRACK CHAMPIONSHIP SPEED BURST

Here is the remarkable picture made by J. T. Holloway, Constitution staff photographer, on which Sig Haugdahl, dirt track champion of the world, conceded the 25-mile final event at Lakewood, May 2, to Ed "Pop" Daily, of Tampa, Fla. The judges called the race, the winner of which gets 100 points towards the 1925 season's championship, a tie. The crowd declared Daily winner, but a one-mile run-off was ordered, which Haugdahl won when Daily failed to refill his crankcase with oil. The minute Haugdahl saw this picture he conceded victory in the 25-mile event to Daily and refused to take the verdict of the run-off mile. The picture shows Daily in the Simplex at the right, just as his front wheels touched the finish tape. Haugdahl, in his Daytona Cyclone, is easily a foot or two feet back of the tape.

Crystal Bath Is Different

Some alcohols are denatured with chemicals that are positively injurious to the skin.

Crystal Bath is different! It contains 95 per cent grain alcohol and, among other healthful ingredients, one best known to Skin Specialists for cleansing and beautifying the skin.

In Just Three Minutes
You Can See a Remarkable Improvement in Your Beauty

The next time you look in your mirror, take an inventory of your good points. Then, try to imagine what a big difference just a few improvements would make in the clearness, softness and healthful color of your skin.

Take Advantage of This Special Test Offer Today!

If you wish to see an instant improvement in your loveliness make this simple test:

Go over your face, neck and hands with a soft cloth that has been saturated in Crystal Bath Alcohol. Notice the dust, grease and impurities that come off on the cloth. You will then know that Crystal Bath cleanses your skin more thoroughly than any soap, cream or lotion.

Crystal Bath also reduces enlarged pores. Its antiseptic and cleansing properties remove blackheads, pimples and skin irritations. It gently bestirs the tiny capillaries, induces blood circulation and brings the glow of health and beauty to your skin.

Unless you are completely satisfied, any druggist will refund the small cost.

Modern Life is Stealing the precious pigment which colors your hair

Cause of Gray Hair Now Overcome — Natural Color Restored by Formula of Beauty Specialist

Day by day the strain of modern social and business life is robbing your hair of a vital element—the precious pigment which supplies its color! And the beauty of your hair—its youthful appearance—is the price you pay for social or business success.

But now such sacrifice of youth and beauty is absolutely needless!

Years ago Mrs. Katherine Lea—a prominent beauty specialist of Florida, received a formula from an eminent physician. She gave it to hundreds of women. It amazed its users. It penetrated the scalp, supplied the missing pigment and quickly restored the youthful, natural color of the hair. Winter visitors to Florida wrote back from all parts of the country to secure it for their friends.

Now Mrs. Lea is placing this formula, known as Graynix, within reach of women everywhere.

A Scalp Food

Graynix penetrates and stimulates the roots of the hair. It is a real scalp food. Your hair takes on new life and lustre. Dandruff and itching are stopped. Falling hair is checked.

Restores Natural Shade

Graynix is a clean, colorless liquid. It combines with elements already in your hair—supplying pigment which restores the natural, youthful shade. It does not stain. Unlike other preparations, there is no inconvenience of daily combing! No brushing! No waiting for weeks until you can wash or shampoo your hair!

Satisfaction Guaranteed

Mrs. Lea positively guarantees that you will be pleased with Graynix. In all her experience she has never had a single complaint. On the contrary, hundreds of women have expressed their appreciation of the remarkable improvement in their appearance from the use of Graynix.

If you use Graynix according to instructions and are not completely satisfied, your druggist will cheerfully refund the purchase price.

Accept a Present from Mrs. Lea

In order for you to convince yourself about Graynix, your druggist has been instructed to give you a generous sample bottle absolutely free. Apply as directed upon a few locks of hair. And in a week you will begin to notice results. For the price of a regular size bottle, $1.25, the same results will be noticed over an entire head of hair.

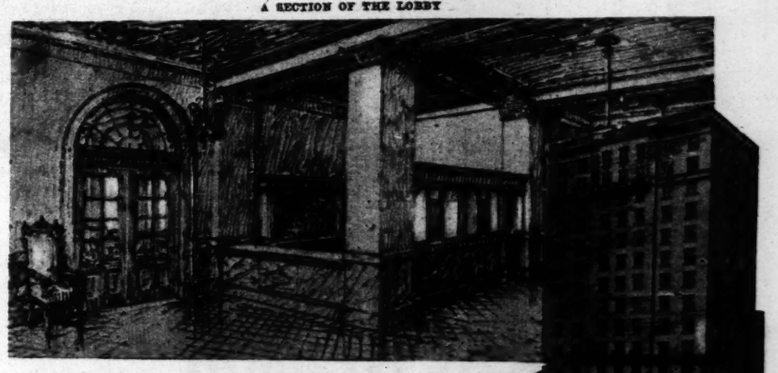

Pigment—the coloring matter in your hair—comes from the hair bulb in the scalp. Graynix penetrates deep below the surface replacing the missing pigment at its source.

What The Carlton Offers Atlanta Men

HOME life with a new zest and a new contentment is offered to Atlanta men in The Carlton, which affords every essential of the ideal bachelor's existence, at a price within his reach.

The Carlton is complete!

THE BEDROOMS, with their home-like air, are perfectly furnished. Twin Beds of the Windsor type, a chest of drawers, a Windsor bedroom chair, an overstuffed easy chair and a convenient bedside table all in a rich walnut finish, are the principal pieces, while attractive figured carpets and carefully chosen curtains and draperies add a vital note of cheer.

THE LOUNGE ROOM, impressive as the central hall of a fine Italian villa, with its dull sanded wood panels, its massive columns holding Florentine bracket lamps, the beckoning comfort of overstuffed divans and chairs, the huge fireplace flanked with well-filled book shelves, is a veritable symphony in hospitality.

THE COFFEE ROOM, for the convenience of residents and their friends, is exceptionally well-appointed, and under the supervision of an experienced steward will offer delicious meals, to be had at the guest's convenience.

Card rooms on the first floor, a ladies' parlor, a spacious and welcoming lobby are other things that add to the general atmosphere of taste and comfort.

SERVICE will be complete and cheerfully rendered. Perfect valet service will be available, laundry will be attended to for the guests without annoyance; a splendid barber shop is in the basement; each room has a private telephone, and calls in and out of the building will be handled with dispatch by courteous operators on duty day and night. Nothing, in short, is lacking to make The Carlton the perfect home for men.

The location could not be improved—on Peachtree Street just half a block from Ponce de Leon Avenue. It is out of the dirt and noise area, at the focal point of the city's social life, yet is easily accessible by six convenient car lines to the business, shopping and theatre section.

Reservations are being speedily made — several entire floors have already been leased—so call HEmlock 4875 immediately for a representative who will gladly call at your office with floor plans and full information. The rates are astonishingly low.

WHERE IS MY WANDERING BOY TO-NIGHT?

SIDNEY SMITH

GEE, HOW I'D HATE TO LET ANY OF THOSE CANNIBALS GET THEIR HANDS ON ME - I DON'T KNOW WHAT THEY ARE CARRYING ALL THAT FIRE-WOOD FOR - MAYBE THEY INTEND TO BURN POOR CHING CHOW AT THE STAKE - WELL, THEY WON'T HARM HIM WHILE I'M ALIVE -

THE FAITHFUL CHING CHOW IS A HELPLESS CAPTIVE IN THE HANDS OF THE CRUEL SAVAGES - POOR LITTLE CHESTER ALONE SURROUNDED BY A THOUSAND DANGERS RESOLVES TO GIVE UP HOPE - IN SPITE OF THE ODDS AGAINST HIM HE HAS RESOLVED TO SAVE CHING CHOW OR DIE IN THE ATTEMPT -

THE SAVAGES THINK I AM DEAD OR HIDING SOME PLACE - THEY'LL NEVER DREAM I'D ATTEMPT TO RESCUE CHING CHOW SINGLE-HANDED - IF I CAN SNEAK INTO THEIR CAMP WHILE THEY'RE ALL SLEEPING I'LL SET CHING FREE - THEN WE'LL HIDE IN THE CAVE TILL THE SAVAGES HAVE LEFT THE ISLAND -

BEFORE I START ACROSS THAT OPEN GROUND I'LL FIND OUT IF THERE ARE ANY SAVAGES LURKING IN THE FOREST - THIS TRICK WILL FOOL 'EM - IF THERE SHOULD BE A SAVAGE WATCHING HE WOULD SHOOT AN ARROW AT MY HAT -

IF I CAN REACH THAT UNDERBRUSH I'LL BE HARDER TO LOCATE THAN A BLACK MARK ON A LUMP OF COAL - I'LL RUN AS FAST AS I CAN AND HOPE THAT NOBODY SEES ME - I FEEL KIND OF SCARED BUT I'LL NOT STOP ON THAT ACCOUNT -

IF I EVER GET HOME AND TELL ALL THE KIDS IN SCHOOL ABOUT THIS ISLAND THEY'LL NEVER BELIEVE ME - GEE, HOW I WISH I WAS SAFE WITH MY PAPA AND MAMA - HOW I'D LIKE TO WAKE UP IN MY LITTLE WHITE BED AT HOME AND FIND THIS WAS ALL JUST A TERRIBLE DREAM -

WHEN I THINK HOW NICE CHING CHOW HAS BEEN TO ME I FEEL READY TO RISK MY LIFE A HUNDRED TIMES FOR HIM - HE SAVED MY LIFE WHEN I HAD FEVER - AND WHEN I WAS WASHED OFF THE RAFT IN THE MIDDLE OF THE OCEAN HE DIVED RIGHT IN AND SAVED MY LIFE AT THE RISK OF HIS OWN - I'LL JUST HAVE TO SAVE CHING CHOW - THAT'S ALL THERE IS TO IT -

WHAT'S THAT NOISE? SOMETHING IS CRASHING THROUGH THE JUNGLE - I'D HATE TO MEET A LION. HERE -

THAT WARRIOR SAVED HIS OWN LIFE AND MINE BY NOT LOOKING AROUND - IF I FIRE A SHOT THE SAVAGES WILL HEAR IT - THEN THE WHOLE TRIBE WILL BE ON MY TRAIL AND MY CHANCE TO RESCUE CHING CHOW WILL BE GONE -

I WISH I HAD SOME WAY OF LETTING CHING CHOW KNOW THAT I HAVEN'T DESERTED HIM - I CAN'T DO ANYTHING TO HELP HIM TILL TONIGHT - GOLLY, I HOPE IT'S NICE AND DARK TONIGHT. THAT STAKE IS RIGHT IN THE CENTER OF THE CAMP - ONE FALSE MOVE OR ANY NOISE MEANS DEATH FOR BOTH OF US -

OH BOY - I HOPE NONE OF THE SAVAGES ARE STILL AWAKE - IF THEY CATCH ME TRYING TO RESCUE THEIR CAPTIVE I WON'T HAVE ANY MORE CHANCE FOR MY LIFE THAN A LAMB IN A DEN OF FAMISHED WOLVES -

THROUGH THE INKY DARKNESS OF THE TROPICAL NIGHT, SURROUNDED BY COUNTLESS DANGERS, BRAVE LITTLE CHESTER CREEPS SILENTLY ONWARD KNOWING FULL WELL THAT TO BE DISCOVERED MEANS CAPTURE AND AN IGNOMINIOUS DEATH - HOLDING HIS BREATH AND FEARING THE LOUD BEATING OF HIS FEARLESS HEART WILL CAUSE HIS DOWN FALL HE CREEPS NEARER AND NEARER TO WHERE CHING CHOW STANDS BOUND AND HELPLESS IN THE MIDST OF THE SLEEPING SAVAGES -
